House Votes $20,000,000 Nonmilitary Aid to Finns

$100,000,000 Loan Authorization Of Export-Import Bank Passed, 168-51

U. S. to the Rescue

By John B. Oakes,
Post Staff Writer

A House torn between sympathy for Finland and fear of American involvement in war yesterday passed a Senate bill permitting the Export-Import Bank to lend the embattled Finns an additional $20,000,000 for nonmilitary purposes.

The measure increases the loan authorization of the bank by $100,000,000, with a proviso that not more than $20,000,000 of this amount can be lent to any one country.

Final vote on the bill was 168 to 51—just more than half the total membership of the House. By general agreement, no roll call was taken, but it was noted that about half the Republicans on the floor joined the Democratic majority in support of the measure.

Liberalizing Moves Beaten

In vain did some Republicans, aided by a few Democrats, attempt to liberalize the bill so that Finland could make purchases under the loan without restriction. Equally unavailing was a Republican attempt to limit the total increased authorization to $20,000,000 and specifically direct that the Export-Import Band lend it to Finland—instead of leaving it up to the bank's discretion, as the bill now provides.

The Democrats, who might have found themselves at a disadvantage if the vote had been taken as originally scheduled Tuesday night, had sufficient numbers on hand all day yesterday to ensure the defeat of all amendments not proposed by the Banking and Currency Committee that handled the bill.

The two committee alterations in the Senate measure which require it to be sent to conference forbid the Export-Import Bank to make loans to any government in default to the United States Government and specifically permit the export of commercial airplanes.

With Representative Parsons (Democrat), of Illinois, wielding a relentless gavel, consideration of the lending proposal and the proffered amendments was expedited yesterday, with the result that the House completed the bill by midafternoon.

'Safe Step, Short of War'

Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, majority leader, said that he would try to obtain Senate approval of the changes today, thus enabling the bill to reach the White House in short order.

In urging support for his proposal to grant the loan to Finland without restriction, Representative Miller (Republican), of Connecticut, a legless veteran of the World War, said

Police Besiege 40 Czech Exiles In Budapest French Legation

Anyone Leaving With New Passport Ordered Arrested; Letters to Neutrals Say Refugees Are 'Treated Severely'

By the Associated Press

Budapest, Feb. 28.—Budapest police, said to have been forced to act as a result of German pressure, today laid virtual siege to the French legation, where 40 Czecho-Slovak refugees were harbored with new French passports.

Nazi threats concerning Hungary's "wide-open frontier," with demands that Hungary return fugitives from Bohemia and Moravia, resulted in attempts to break up the "underground railway" which has been operating under official French auspices, via Yugoslavia to France.

Blame Influence of Gestapo

Hundreds of Czecho-Slovak refugees, most of them held in Hungarian jails, declared they faced deportation to Germany as a result of Nazi pressure. Many of them said they feared they would be put to death if they were deported.

A band of 48 Czecho-Slovaks held in the Budapest citadel wrote neutral legations that "the influence of the Gestapo (German secret police) has forced the Hungarians to treat us severely."

Describing themselves as former Czecho-Slovak army officers, college professors and students, the writers asked for neutral help lest they be sent back to the protectorate "where certain death awaits."

One letter written on February 13, said:

"Five members of our party made an attempt to escape from the citadel February 11. Nine bullets were fired at them. One of the students seemed to have been hit and wounded."

Two Reported Caught

The letter said two of the escaped men were caught by police and "beaten to bloody unconsciousness," and five prisoners who were eye-witnesses of the escape attempt "were deprived of food for two days" while "our history professor was punished with six days' fasting."

Police said the Czech refugees, fleeing persecution in the protectorate, the heart of the former Czecho-Slovak republic, were granted new French passports soon after crossing the frontier into northern Hungary.

Reds Report Capture of 6 Finn Villages

Civilians Withdrawn Along Viipuri Bay; Taipale Holds Firm

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Thursday), Feb. 29.—Russia's army today reported the capture of six Finnish towns and villages on the Karelian Isthmus, including Yl-A-Somme, only 4 miles south of Viipuri, one of Finland's most important cities.

The Russians said the Finns still were falling back in the face of their ceaseless pounding after fruitless counterattacks yesterday in which the defenders were said to have suffered "heavy losses."

The reported Soviet gains were on the western side of the Vuoski lakes, a chain which runs northwestward through the heart of the Karelian Isthmus.

Soviet troops penetrated and captured Finnish positions on the north bank of the Salmenkaita River west of the Vuoski lakes, occupied the town of Ritasaari on the western bank of Vuoski Lake, and the villages of Malkela, Hammarnijabvi and Seikurala, north of Lake Jurapan, and Kamara, highway junction 5 miles north of a Viipuri-Leningrad railroad point of the same name previously reported captured by the Red army.

"According to incomplete data, February 28 Soviet troops occupied 42 of the enemy's defensive fortifications," the communique said.

Capital Notables Form Unit To Get Finns Fighting Funds

A score of leaders in the Capital's business, civic and social life last night organized a Washington committee of Fighting Funds for Finland, Inc.

Aim of the committee, according to Chairman Thomas P. Morgan, jr., is "immediate action to aid Finland in the purchase of military supplies."

Committee membership will be expanded to "the broadest possible basis," he said, indicating that representatives of church, labor, fraternal and patriotic groups will be invited to join.

The committee hopes to sponsor a series of radio appeals by Senators and Representatives, he said. Detailed plans for the campaign are to be mapped at an executive committee meeting in the University Club at 4 p. m. Friday.

Vice chairman of the committee is Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, at whose home the organization meeting was held. Robert L. Haycock, of Riggs National Bank, is treasurer.

Included on the commitee are Philip Marshall Brown, Frank R Jelleff, Mark Lansburgh, Corcoran Thom, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Brooke, H. L. Rust, jr., Emil Hurja, Robert Woods Bliss, J. Harry Covington, Dwight F. Davis, Joseph Hines, George Parker, Col., James Thomas Taylor, Newbold Noyes and Mrs. Eleanor Patterson.

National chairman of the fund is Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan. Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of State, and Carrie Chapman Catt are vice chairmen. Committees are operating in a dozen cities.

Parking Space Off D.C. Streets Urged by A.A.A.

8-Point Safety Plan Given by Cleveland At Women's Dinner

By Hedley Donovan,
Post Staff Writer

Provision of off-street parking facilities for thousands of automobiles was urged last night by the District division of the American Automobile Association as part of an eight-point attack on the Capital's tangled traffic safety problem.

Other recommendations of the A. A. A., which represents 30,000 Washington motorists, call for expansion of the driver training program in the District school system, assignment of one Police Court judge to exclusive duty on traffic cases, and increase of the police motorcycle corps from 60 to 100 men.

The legislative program was presented at a dinner given in the Sulgrave Club by the women's safety committee and advisory board of the District division of the A. A. A.

A dozen members of the Senate and House District Committees, Commissioners Hazen and McCoach, and the city's top-ranking traffic and highway officials were in the audience that heard Washington I. Cleveland, Washington manager of the A. A. A., present the program.

Legislative Garage Cited

Cleveland termed the parking problem "the Number One headache of Washington motorists." During the past eight years, he said, the number of legal curb parking spaces in the city's central business district has been cut from 10,415 to 5,204.

"The process of reduction probably will not stop there," he warned. Recent surveys show that more than 150,000 machines enter the area every day.

Congress recognized the problem by constructing the legislative garage below the Capitol Plaza for official cars and those belonging to Senators and Representatives, he commented.

A pledge of "four-square" support for construction of off-street parking areas was given at the dinner by Senator John Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, chairman of the subcommittee on District appropriations.

"Street-parked automobiles are one of the greatest menaces to safe-

Ballot Box Stuffed Right in Capitol; Inquiry Ordered

Ballot box "stuffing" right under the gilt of the Capitol Dome is about to be investigated by a special committee of the "Little Congress," organization of Congress members' secretaries.

The reported "fraud" took place in the election of the "Speaker of the Little Congress" Tuesday night. It was declared "null and void" when it was discovered that 340 ballots had been cast when only 300 voters were counted as present.

On March 1 the special committee will be selected to conduct the inquiry and pave the way for an "honest" election March 12.

Ohio Victory Bolsters Hopes Of Republicans

New Test of Strength Tuesday in Iowa Awaited by Parties

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Republican 1940 hopes soared yesterday in the wake of a double Ohio Congressional victory.

Net G. O. P. gain of one House seat and retention of a second brought forecasts of "a rolling Republican victory tide" from jubilant party spokesman.

Even as Ohio returns were officially tabulated, Republican and Democratic managers were pointing for another Midwest test of strength in Iowa's Sixth District next Tuesday.

There Robert K. Goodwin, Republican Mayor of Redfield, and Byron G. Allen, Des Moines Democrat and former "rebel" Republican, were pitted for the vacant House seat of former Representative C. C. Dowell, a Republican.

The Iowa contest was reported "close" but Republicans appeared certain of holding a district that has gone Democratic only once.

5 House Vacancies

There are five House vacancies, but only one other seat is expected to be filled by a special election before the regular November balloting—Nebraska's First District, formerly represented by the late George Heinke, a Republican. J. H. Sweet, secretary of the late Congressman, will be matched there against Charles DeFoe, the Democratic entry, on April 9.

Republicans promised to repeat in both States Tuesday's Ohio showing, but victories in each case would represent merely retention of existing G. O. P. House strength.

2 Dead, Damage in Millions As California Battles Floods

Devastation 'Like an Earthquake;' Thousands Left Homeless by Raging Waters; Two Towns Remain Almost Submerged

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Feb. 28.—Flood waters from the Sacramento River tonight all but submerged the northern California towns of Gerber and Tehama, caught in the overflow from four days of heavy rain, but elsewhere the flood peril was easing.

More than 4,000 persons were estimated homeless, including the nearly 500 inhabitants of Gerber and 300 in Tehama.

Rooftops of higher buildings peered above the water, but many lower structures disappeared. Residents had ample time to leave because the water rose slowly.

Cloudbursts in the Redding area to the north, and runoff from the State's great North Central Valley sent the river far over its levees in the low spots where the two towns are located, between 30 and 40 miles south of Redding.

Two deaths were attributed to the flood, which spread torrents out of rivers and creeks from as far north as Dunsmuir, to San Francisco Bay, where the Sacramento River spills into the Pacific.

While the Weather Bureau predicted two or three days of fair weather before another storm could hit, it warned that precautionary measures in the river network of the Sacramento Valley must not be relaxed.

Terrific rains of the past four days, and swiftly melting snows, set off the flood which inundated vast areas, swamped hundreds of homes, and caused millions in damage to highways, bridges, farm lands and city properties.

In a last, final burst of storm, a 75-mile gale screamed over the San Francisco Bay area today, and a cloudburst that followed caused damage estimated at $100,000 at Berkeley.

NLRB Orders Secret Election In GMC Plants

125,000 Employes In 11 States to Vote On Bargaining Units

The National Labor Relations Board last night ordered secret ballot elections "as soon as practicable" among approximately 125,000 production and maintenance employes at 59 plants of General Motors Corporation in 11 States.

It will be the largest collective bargaining poll ever conducted by the board.

The board gave formal approval to an agreement for the election signed February 13 by the corporation, by the C. I. O. and A. F. L. factions of the United Automobile Workers of America, two locals of the International Association of Machinists (A. F. L.), and the Pattern Makers League of North America (A. F. L.)

Exact time of the election was left to NLRB Regional Director Frank H. Bowen at Detroit.

Workers in Michigan, Ohio, Wisconsin, New York, Indiana, Missouri, Georgia, Maryland, Connecticut, California and New Jersey will take part.

Bench and Bar Urge D. C. Public Defender As 'Poor Defense' Plea Wins Death Stay

By Edward T. Folliard

The "archaic and inhuman" system, whereby young and inexperienced lawyers are appointed by District of Columbia courts to defend paupers in serious cases, brought a storm of criticism last night from prominent judges and attorneys.

Attention was focused anew on the system here by a decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in the case of William F. Johnson, 22-year-old colored handyman, who was scheduled to die in the electric chair April 5 for murder.

The Court of Appeals reversed the first-degree murder verdict and ordered a new trial for Johnson, after sharply criticizing the system under which "two young members of the bar with little, if any, experience" were assigned by the court to defend him.

Echoing this criticism, two judges and a number of leading attorneys told The Washington Post that the Johnson case emphasized the need here of a public defender system such as exists in a score of American cities.

Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, at the request of the District of Columbia Bar Association, has introduced a bill to establish a public defender's office here. A virtually identical bill was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Estes Kefauver (Democrat), of Tennessee.

WILLIAM H. COLLINS
Denounces Counsel System

Here in Washington, in contrast to most other cities, no provision is made for the payment of fees to lawyers appointed by the court to defend prisoners who are without funds.

In the case of Johnson, who was tried last year for killing George Scandalis, foreman of a Greek bakery, during a quarrel, Justice James M. Proctor, of the District Court, ascertained that Johnson was indigent and assigned two young lawyers to defend him.

One of the lawyers had been admitted to the bar only the year before, the Court of Appeals was told, and since the Johnson murder trial has gone into the building business.

The other lawyer, it was said, had been admitted to practice in 1933, but actually had been practicing only a year before. Justice Proctor assigned him to the Johnson case. He has since gone to work for a Government agency.

The defendant, Johnson, wrote a letter to Justice Proctor after his conviction, complaining that his appeal for a new trial wasn't being properly handled.

About this time, William H. (Doc) Collins, once a star prosecutor on the staff of the United States attorney here, with an all-time record for sending killers to the electric chair, appeared before Justice Proc-

SEC Invokes Death Clause For 9 Utility Companies

Elec. Bond & Share, Engineers' Public Service Concerns Receive Orders

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

The Securities and Exchange Commission moved yesterday to revamp forcibly the structures of major utility holding company systems in conformity with the famous "death sentence" provisions of the 1935 Holding Company Act.

It launched simplification proceedings against the $2,500,000,000 Electric Bond & Share Co., the largest utility holding company system in the country, and the Engineers' Public Service Co., whose assets total about $373,000,000.

Assets Exceed $ Billions

It announced that similar proceedings would be started as soon as necessary papers can be prepared against seven other systems, as follows:

The Commonwealth and Southern Corporation, of which Wendell L. Willkie is president; Cities Service Power & Light Co., the North American Co., the United Gas Improvement Co. the Middle West Corporation, Standard Power & Light Corporation, and the United Light & Power Co.

The Potomac Electric Power Co. may be affected by the proceeding against the North American Co. The latter holds 46.47 per cent of the voting control of the Washington Railway Electric Co., which, in turn, has a 100 per cent voting control over Pepco. Whether North American will be required to divest itself of its local holdings will depend, of course, on the SEC readjustment order.

End of an Era

The combined assets of all nine systems aggregate $8,933,047,091, which is about 63 per cent of the total assets of all systems in the country registered with the commission as required by the holding company act.

The commission's action signifies the end of an era during which it attempted to induce large utility systems to comply voluntarily with the "death sentence" requirements. The commission, it was intimated, finally came around to the conclusion that some of the large systems were waiting for it to take forcible measures.

The "death sentence" provisions instruct the SEC to initiate proceedings to compel compliance with its simplification requirements "as soon as practicable after January 1, 1938." In its attempt to bring about voluntary compliance, it has deferred the exercise of this power for two years and two months.

April 6 Deadline

The so-called "death sentence" is divided into two parts. Holding company structures must be so simplified that not more than two holding companies are superimposed on operating companies. That is, a holding company could control a holding company which controlled operating companies, but holding company "pyramiding" could not be extended further. The second part requires the consolidation of systems into geographically integrated units.

The action against Electric Bond and Share and Engineers' Public Service is under the integration provision, but since both problems are related, it is explained, they will both be involved in the proceeding.

The SEC notified the two holding company systems that in its opinion they were not confining their operations to single integrated systems and such additional systems as conform to the requirement that each individual system be an economical and geographically contiguous unit.

The companies are directed to present by April 6 their views as

Farmers' Cash Rises $99,000,000 Above January of Last Year

The Commerce Department estimated yesterday that income payments to individuals during January totaled $6,050,000,000. This was $650,000,000 more than in January, 1939, but $840,000,000 less than in December.

The drop from December was attributed partly to a seasonal decline in dividend payments and a drop in industrial pay rolls because of slackened production.

The Agriculture Department announced at the same time that supplemented by a record monthly outlay of Government benefit payments, the January cash income of farmers totaled $733,000,000, exceeding that of the same month last year by $99,000,000.

Number of Jobs Gains

A third department—Labor—reported January was a better month for workers this year, both in number of jobs and amount of pay rolls, than was January of 1939, though there was a sharp decline in number of workers employed and in wages paid as compared with December.

Employment in nonagricultural industries dropped 1,160,000 from mid-December to January, more than the expected seasonal decrease, Secretary of Labor Perkins reported. But because employment rose steadily from May through December, employment in January of this year was still 1,100,000 above January last year.

Secretary Perkins said, however, that the current employment index was 10.2 per cent higher than a year ago, and that the pay roll index was 17.2 per cent higher.

Weather a Factor

One reason for the jobs decline was in the construction industry. That was attributed by the Labor Department to unusually severe winter weather. Employment in construction dropped 200,000 from December to January.

Salaries and wages for the month, the Department of Commerce reported, totaled $3,700,000,000, an increase of 5 per cent over January of 1938. Total income of individuals in the country, including salaries and wages, dividends and Governmental benefits, totaled $6,050,000,000 for the month, compared with $5,700,000,0 for the same month a year ago, but $840,000,000 below December.

The Agriculture Department said that benefit payments in January totaled $126,000,000, the largest for any month since the crop programs started in 1933.

The January income reflected the usual seasonal decline, falling $68,000,000 below December.

Edison Objects To Regulating Small Contracts

By the Associated Press

Secretary Edison expressed the view yesterday that the Navy's construction progress might be "very seriously affected" if the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act should be applied to Naval contracts of less than $10,000.

The Navy Secretary commented at a press conference when he was asked about pending proposals to tighten the statute which requires contractors of Government work costing more than $10,000 to meet certain wage and hour standards.

Edison said lowering of the limit to $2,000 or $4,000 would mean additional hampering detail work for the Navy. Informed that charges had been made in Congress that the Navy had let contracts of $9,999 to evade the law, Edison said he would order such practices stopped if there were any.

An amendment which would apply the act to contracts of $4,000 or more, already approved by the Senate, is before a House Judiciary subcommittee. In addition, Representative Healey (Democrat), Massachusetts, has proposed that it be applied to contracts of $2,000 or more.

Before the committee today, Lee Pressman, C. I. O. counsel, said a lower minimum was needed to prevent splitting up of large contracts, a practice he said was sometimes done to avoid the law.

Opposition to the amendment was voiced by H. S. Evans, executive vice president of the Central Iron & Steel Co., Harrisburg, Pa. He said lowering of the limit might put 25,000 men out of work in his industry.

Rankin Opposes Revision Of Membership in House

By Alfred Friendly

There is "only a 50-50 chance" of legislation emerging from current hearings before the House Census Committee that would make reapportionment of House seats automatic following each decennial census, it was reported yesterday.

Opposition to the legislation, passed by the Senate last year, is most powerfully exerted by the committee's chairman, Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi. Rankin makes no secret of the fact that he, more than any other man, was responsible for blocking reapportionment after the 1920 census.

Backed by other Southern Congressmen, who fear with Rankin that the past 10 years will show a decline in the proportionate population of the South and which will result in a loss of representation in the House from those States, Rankin also enjoys the support of legislators from constituencies such as those in "upstate" New York and "down-state" Illinois.

Those districts, generally smaller than those in New York City and Chicago, respectively, are more numerous, however. Thus legislators representing a smaller total population are able to control State politics. By reapportionment they would lose in number—and power.

In opposing legislation for automatic reshuffling of House seats, Rankin has the rare opportunity to win a fight which he once lost. After failure to redistrict after the 1920 census, a law was passed over his opposition making reapportionment automatic. It operated following the 1930 census. But subsequently, with the passage of the lame duck amendment changing the convening date of Congress, the law became inoperable. The censuses could not be completed before the date on which reapportionment was to be effected.

The amendment, making the law again operative, has passed the Senate and is now in the House Census Committee.

Rankin's argument against "anticipatory" redistricting legislation is reported to be on the grounds that such a law gives the Senate sole control over a House matter—a very vital House matter, namely, reshuffling its seats.

Following a census, the House may legislate till the cows come home on how it wants the redistricting to be carried out. But with a law already on the books, the Senate can refuse to act on the House measures, and the earlier law goes into effect.

The Civil Service Commission, whose past attempts at giving examinations for Government "information" officers—press or publicity men—have been less than brilliant successes, appears to be doing no better in its present efforts.

In announcing minimum requirements for the information assistant option of its general junior professional assistant examination, the commission demands that the applicant have 30 semester hours in journalism or 30 semester hours in journalism and English composition combined.

In the first place, there is a large and distinguished body of newspapermen, competent to report Government either from the outside or the inside, who see red whenever college "journalism" courses are mentioned. Presumably, they have considerable weight of argument on their side.

Second, there are a host of competent persons who could hold the job that have never had such courses but have gained so much experience as newsmen that they are qualified to teach journalism courses.

A case in point is that of the young information officer of a large agency. A distinguished reporter in the past, he is now doing equally excellent work in his Government post. He is also teaching a college journalism course in Washington.

The man would be disqualified from entering the examination by the existing requirements. His students, however, could take the test. If they passed, and if the agency where the teacher now works were brought under civil service, the student could replace the teacher.

House Probers Clear for Action On Labor Act

Hearings Are Recessed To Prepare Changes For Entire Committee

By the Associated Press

The House Committee investigating the operations of the Wagner Act cleared its decks last night for an imminent battle to amend that statute.

Public hearings were recessed indefinitely, with the understanding that the committee would get together within the next few days to decide whether the full five-man committee—or only a majority—would recommend amendments in an immediate report to the House Labor Committee.

Any legislative recommendations of the investigating group must be submitted to the Labor Committee, whose chairman, Mrs. Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, is opposed to considering any amendments until the inquiry is concluded. However, proponents of changes have served notice that if her committee pigeon-holes the amendments they will ask the house to take them from the committee.

Chairman Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, of the investigating committee talked yesterday with an expert of the legislative drafting service, but told reporters afterward—with a smile—that they had only renewed an old friendship.

The committee spent the day hearing witnesses called by Charles Fahy, counsel for the labor board. Developments included:

Isadore Lubin, commissioner of labor statistics, testified that, theoretically, if employers had granted recognition to unions every time they asked for it, over 7,000 of the 17,640 strikes since 1933 would not have occurred.

Edmund M. Toland, committee counsel, announced that when hearings were resumed he would show that board officials had asked the War Department to withhold contracts from a firm accused of violating the Wagner act. The War Department replied that it could not do so.

Smith said it was up to Attorney General Jackson to decide whether action should be taken against the board for alleged lobbying activities. Jackson had declined to advise the committee whether its hearings showed a violation of statutes forbidding a Government agency to use any of its appropriation to influence Congress.

J. Warren Madden, chairman of the board, denied that the board considered information obtained outside the formal record of a case in reaching its decision.

Cattlemen's Witness on Hull Pacts Rebuked by Harrison

Mississippian Declares Livestock Interests Have Least Cause to Complain After Denver Man Gives Testimony

By the Associated Press

Democratic members of the Senate Finance Committee met attacks on the reciprocal trade program from farm groups yesterday with figures which they said showed that the agreements had not injured agriculture.

When F. E. Mollin, of Denver, told the committee that cattle raisers objected to the program "because we can't possibly know today what the tariff on cattle will be six months from now," Chairman Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, called attention to the fact that cattle was the only farm product now commanding "parity" prices.

"I think the livestock industry has the least cause for complaint under this program of any industry," Harrison declared.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, declared before the committee that the present system of negotiating trade agreements "offended" five provisions of the Constitution. He proposed that each agreement hereafter be subject to Senate ratification.

O'Mahoney said these were the five "offending" provisions of the Constitution:

That treaties be ratified by two-thirds vote of the Senate. (Administration officials claim the trade pacts are not treaties. O'Mahoney claims they are, and Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan cited as an example to the committee that a reciprocal agreement with Colombia replaced a previous commercial treaty with that country.)

That all legislative power be vested in Congress.

That all tax measures originate in the House.

That customs duties enacted by Congress cannot be modified by Executive action.

That States have equality of rights in the Senate.

Support for a proposal advanced by some Republicans and Democrats that future trade agreements be approved by the Senate before becoming effective came from a new organization of farmers known as The Farmers' and Stockmen's Committee Favoring Senate Ratification of Trade Treaties.

Announcing that it was composed of 208 farm leaders in 34 States, the organization said it would center its efforts on "a return to the Constitutional processes of Senate approval" and on amendment of the Trade Act "to enable American citizens to enter court and test its constitutionality."

Officers were announced as Jack Arnold, Birney, Mont., rancher, chairman; Fred C. Brenckman, Washington representative of the National Grange, treasurer; and Charles W. Holman, of Washington, acting secretary. Holman is secretary of the National Cooperative Milk Producers' Federation.

Pelley Likens Dies Group To Silvershirts

Paper Urges Members To Continue Support Of Committee Head

The Dies Committee in some respects "is practically Silvershirt in everything but name, claims William Dudley Pelley's organ, "Liberation," in its latest issue which reached Congressional offices yesterday.

Pursuing the tactics of Silvershirt leader Pelley in throwing bouquets at the Dies Committee, "Liberation" declares the committee is running "a close parallel to the Silvershirt Legion in all its anti-New Deal and anti-radical policies."

With advice to Silvershirts "to cooperate with the Dies Committee in every aspect possible," the article urges members to "put your tongues in your cheeks and continue right along supporting Martin Dies."

Meanwhile, the Dies Committee in executive session heard further testimony yesterday from David Mayne regarding the forged letters that purported to link Pelley with Chairman Dies. Mayne, who has confessed to forging the letters, was asked to clear up certain points in his previous testimony.

Chairman Dies said yesterday that Gardner Jackson, who said he had supplied the money to purchase the letters which later turned out to be forged, would appear before the committee tomorrow.

Dies declared that he wanted to question Jackson and also to give him the opportunity to go over his testimony when he first appeared before the committee in January.

The chairman said the corrected transcript of all the testimony relating to the forgeries would be sent to District Attorney Pine by the end of the week. Some documents and typewriters were sent to Pine yesterday.

Col. McCabe, Intelligence Chief, Plans to Retire

Col. E. R. Warner McCabe, chief of Army intelligence, will go on leave today pending his retirement next July.

A gathering of War Department officials honored the retiring officer yesterday in the office of Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff. Marshall expressed the official appreciation of the Army for Col. McCabe's "splendid accomplishments" as intelligence chief.

A native of Virginia and son of one of Gen. "Jeb" Stuart's officers, McCabe entered the Army in 1900 after graduation from the University of Virginia.

Gen. Marshall Leaves Today To Inspect Hawaii

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, will leave Bolling Field at 9:30 this morning aboard one of the Army's largest and newest bombers for an inspection of the defenses of the Hawaiian Islands.

He will stop at Tucson, Ariz., tonight to visit Gen. John J. Pershing and take the clipper from San Francisco Saturday. The trip to Hawaii will be made on the new Boeing clipper ship, largest airplane in the world.

Congressmen Wrangle Over Whether Census Bureau Will Be a 'Paul Pry'

Six Senators, two Representatives and three witnesses wrangled through an acrimonious day yesterday over whether the Census Bureau sought information vital to the conduct of national affairs or whether it was constituting itself into a superpowerful "Paul Pry" or "Sally Snoop."

The debate, punctuated with charges that Commerce Secretary Hopkins was a dissembler, that Supreme Court Justice Black had been a "weather vane, flopping whichever way the wind blew when he was a Senator, and that census takers as a group were political "henchmen, ward-heelers and hangers-on," took place before a special Senate Commerce subcommittee considering a resolution to delete two questions on family income from the forthcoming population count.

Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, the author of the resolution, held first, that the questions were unauthorized by the Census Act; second, that they "manifestly violate constitutional rights" and finally that they were "an unwarranted prying into personal affairs."

Questions Unjustified

"The questions cannot be justified," Tobey asserted. "Ye gods, Stalin and Hitler may play the game, but not in free America! Shame on this Government!"

He said he had received more than 4,000 letters protesting the questions. Many of the samples he read into the record were written by persons who said they would pay fines and go to jail before answering.

Tobey said he was about to reply to his correspondents advising them not to answer the queries because they were unauthorized.

"Suppose the courts say they are authorized?" said Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina. "Where would you be then?"

"I shall put in the 'advice that 'you do this on your own responsibility,'" Tobey amended.

Bailey Defends Census Bureau

Bailey, who in the past has been outspoken in his criticism of Secretary Hopkins, served yesterday with Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, as the defender of the Commerce Department and Census Bureau.

Bailey brought the first witness, Frank L. Peckham, of Washington, to task for a statement that the income data "was none of the public's business."

Bailey told Peckham, president of the Sentinels of the Republic, that the information had great social value, that it was the business of the Government to know the income of all the population for tax and other legislative purposes.

"I'm dreadfully concerned about this information," he added.

Also appearing as witnesses were Representatives Dondero (Republican), of Michigan, and Reed (Republican), of New York. They said that the questions were "ultra vires" and were excluded by the limitations in the 1929 Census Act.

Pepper sought by questions to make the point that income was as germane to the general field of "population" as data on age, sex, and address. Bailey added that the census law allowed questions on salary and wages in the census of mines, and that there was authority to take a census of "dependents." Data on income were indispensable if the results were to have meaning, he argued.

Tobey read letters reporting past instances of violation of census returns and urging another "Boston tea party" for the census enumerators.

Tobey cited in support of his argument a statement of Justice Black when he was Senator that the enumerators should not be political appointees. He then condemned Black's seizure of records in the lobbying investigation.

"Aren't you impeaching your own witness?" asked Bailey.

"The Senate, Black was a weather vane, flopping whichever way the wind blew," Tobey replied.

He accused Hopkins of "laying a smoke screen" and "dissembling" by saying that the income questions were not new.

Witnesses opposing the resolution will be heard by the committee today. They include Census Director William L. Austin and Willard L. Thorp, Commerce Department economic advisor. Thorp will argue that the income data will "clear up the greatest blind spot" in the Nation's economic picture.

Ohio Victory Bolsters Hopes Of Republicans

Democrats hoped by strong showings to at least partially offset the Republican Ohio advantage.

Buoyed by the Ohio victory, Chairman John Hamilton, of the Republican National Committee, said Ohio's election of Mrs. Frances P. Bolton, widow of the Republican Representative, and J. Harry McGregor, Republican entry in a Democratic district, indicates that 1940 is a Republican year."

Representative Ditter, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee, said the Ohio results "demonstrate that the tide of national sentiment continues strongly toward a Republican sweep next November."

Speaking for Ohio's Republican delegation, Representative George H. Bender took the floor of the House to announce addition of two Republicans to its rolls. No Democrat rose to challenge him.

"The Republican program has been vindicated," rejoined Bender. "This November we are going to rewrite the old proverb. It will be 'As Ohio goes, so goes the Nation.' And there is no doubt where Ohio is going. We are going forward to normalcy, back to the Republican Party."

Across the Capitol, Senator Taft, Ohio, active candidate for the G. O. P. Presidential nomination, said capture by McGregor of Ohio's Seventeenth District, which had not gone Republican since 1928, showed "continuation of the decisive trend toward Republican success in 1940."

Heartened by the addition to his minority House flock, Republican Leader Martin said "political tides like the present one can be depended upon to continue, and this will bring about the election of a Republican President and a Republican House in 1940."

Little Comfort for Democrats

McGregor has been Republican floor leader in the Ohio House, handling the State legislative policies of Republican Gov. Bricker, darkhorse G. O. P. Presidential candidate.

Thus Democrats drew small comfort from the Ohio returns. But Senate Majority Leader Barkley observed that "local factors have to be considered" and declared the Ohio results were not necessarily significant nationally.

Other Democrats commented that Senator Taft won Seventeenth District counties by a 14,907 majority in 1938, against the 4,542 majority run up by McGregor. Republicans replied that twice as many votes were cast in the 1938 senatorial balloting, and the Democratic House seat then had gone Democratic.

Republicans, who elected 169 to the House in 1938, had seen their House strength reduced to 165 vacancies due to deaths. Yesterday's gain moved G. O. P. House seats to 166, with 5 vacancies. In all special elections prior to Tuesday, Republicans and Democrats elected had merely succeeded men of their own party.

G. O. P. chiefs, anxious to control the House in 1941, figured they have only to hold their own and win 47 more Democratic seats to accomplish that objective.

7 Per Cent Shift Needed

Analyzing the Ohio returns, Hamilton said in the Seventh District, McGregor received 54.5 per cent of the vote cast, a gain of 7.1 per cent over the showing made by the unsuccessful 1938 Republican candidate, while Mrs. Bolton, in the Twenty-second District, polled a 7.2 per cent increase over her late husband's strength in 1938.

If a 7 per cent shift to Republicans is accomplished throughout the country, Hamilton said Republicans would capture 80 House seats that two years ago went Democratic.

Senator Donahey, who holds the State record for pulling votes, and recently declined to run as a favorite son "stalking horse" for a third term in Ohio's Presidential preference primary, has not announced for reelection. He will make known his intentions Saturday.

Walsh Won't Oppose Third Term

Other political developments:

Managers of Vice President Garner filed complete slates of Garner delegates in seven New York City districts. Garner previously had filed in Illinois and Wisconsin primaries, where Roosevelt-pledged delegates are matched against him. A second slate of third term delegates yesterday was filed in Wisconsin.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, said he would not "be a party to any opposition" to a third term. Walsh said "if the opportunity comes" he will support Postmaster General Farley at the convention, but will not oppose the President "if by silence or otherwise he indicates willingness to accept."

Frank McHale, manager of the Presidential campaign for Federal Security Administer McNutt, declared in Indianapolis that McNutt supporters are working with friends of the President in filing State delegate slates, asserting: "If President Roosevelt isn't the candidate, you can rest assured that Paul McNutt will be."

Superstructure of Municipal Center Takes Shape

Work is progressing rapidly on the $3,500,000 administration building of the new District Municipal Center. Steel work is nearing completion as shown above. ty, obstructions to traffic and hindrances to retail trade in the District," Senator Overton declared.

He predicted that Congress would approve extension of the driver-training into half a dozen more schools. The instruction now is given in the Abbot Vocational School. The A. A. A. program recommends such instruction in the Phelps Vocational School and McKinley and Armstrong high schools.

Tenements Called Disgrace

The Louisiana legislator, turning to general conditions in Washington, asserted that the contrast between the Capital's broad avenues and impressive memorials and "its narrow streets and squalid tenements" is a "national disgrace."

Washington is now "a great international capital on which the eyes of all the world are turned," he said, "and the country must respond generously and wisely with contributions for the maintenance of this capital."

Representative Millard F. Caldwell (Democrat), of Florida, chairman of the House subcommittee on District Appropriations, told the group he marvels at "the success of the District in offending Congress."

He expressed surprise at the number of Washington citizens who oppose any increase in the Federal budget, but make constant demands for increased appropriations for District projects.

Asks for D. C. Program

"If you will present a program for which the District is willing to pay, I will give it full support," he concluded.

Cleveland expressed vigorous opposition to the proposed 1-cent increase in the District gasoline tax and diversion of the proceeds to meet general expenses of the city government. The diversion, he pointed out, would automatically deprive the District of 60 per cent of its share of the Federal Aid Highway Fund, a loss of $394,875 in highway funds.

Increase of the gasoline tax would impos ean additional burden "on that class of taxpayers who are the most notoriously overtaxed," he contended. The burden falls without consideration of ability to pay or benefits to be received, he said.

Further recommendations in the A. A. A. program provide for an increase in the appropriation for snow removal in the District, establishment in the office of the director of vehicles and traffic of a division for recording liens on automobiles and an amendment to the safety responsibility bill providing for automatic suspension or revocation of the license of any motorist convicted of reckless driving.

In urging the increase in the police motorcycle corps, Cleveland said, "there is unquestioned need for additional personnel for mobile patrol duty and comprehensive accident investigation."

"The major purpose of a ppolice organization should be to prevent violations before they occur through systematic and unrelenting patrol of our streets and highways," he declared.

Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, and Russell E. Singer, general manager of the A. A. A., spoke briefly.

Singer characterized the Women's Safety Committee as "the only one of its kind in the world." A meeting between officials with legislative and enforcing responsibility and citizens with "lay responsibility" conforms to "the best spirit of American democracy," he said.

Presiding at the dinner were Mrs. George C. Thorpe, chairman of the Women's Safety Committee, and John Vandegrift, chairman of the Advisory Board.

Safety Cruiser Planned

A third traffic safety cruiser, equipped with an amplifier and similar to the "voice of safety" car used here, will be placed in service as soon as possible, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, said yesterday.

His annnouncement came after a meeting of all captains and inspectors, at which Capt. Milton D. Smith, commander of the Traffic Division, and Lieut. Beverly C. Beach, instructor at the police school, reviewed their two-week course at the Northwestern University Traffic Institute.

Education of the public and strict enforcement of all traffic regulations are the two points which form the backbone of courses of the institute, Smith and Beach said.

The amplifier car, Brown said, will be used particularly for pedestrain control work.

"Several years ago," he said, "we used a car equipped with a loud speaker and the results were good. After a certain time, however, the public became accustomed to it and failed to heed its warnings."

Col. Neal Power's Burial Tomorrow In Arlington

Col. Neal Power, who served in France and who died Saturday in San Francisco, will be buried in Arlington Cemetery at 11 a. m. tomorrow.

Col. Power, son of a Civil War veteran and a native of Washington, had been a prominent San Francisco attorney, graduating in law from Georgetown University in 1897. He was on duty at general headquarters of the A. E. F. at Chaumont and was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross.

Honorary pallbearers will include Maj. Gen. Walter A. Bethel, U. S. A., retired; Maj. Gen. John A. Hull, U. S. A., retired; Maj. Gen. Arthur W. Brown, U. S. A., retired; John Saul, Dr. Hugh Fagan, George P. Hoover, Col. Walter C. Clephane, Col. William Cattron Rigby, U. S. A., retired; Col. Hugh C. Smith, U. S. A., retired; Col. Edwin C. McNeill, U. S. A., and Col. Archibald King, U. S. A.

Bar Delegation To Attend Rites For Easby-Smith

Colleagues of Frank S. Easby-Smith, who died Tuesday from a bullet wound, will represent the District Bar Association at his funeral services at 8:30 a. m. today in Our Lady of Victory Catholic Church.

Bar Association members who will serve as honary pallbearers include: Samuel M. Boyd, Austin F. Canfield, John J. Carmody, Stanley DeNeale, Francis W. Hill, jr., J. Miller Kenyon, John E. Laskey, William E. Leahy, Victor S. Mersch, James A. Purcell and Charles F. Wilson.

Active pallbearers will be J. W. Roberts, William DeLacey, Francis Cabell Brown, Sterling Dibrell, David A. Pine and Col. Roland Walsh.

A private service will be conducted at the Easby-Smith home, 4944 Lowell street northwest, at 8 o'clock. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

tor in connection with another matter.

Justice Proctor called Collins to one side and asked him to take over the handling of the appeal in Johnson's case. Collins agreed and worked all through the Christmas holidays preparing his case.

When Collins, who resigned as Chief Assistant United States Attorney in 1933 to resume private practice, appeared before the Court of Appeals on February 5, he asked for a new trial for Johnson on several grounds. One was the discovery of important evidence that had not been presented at the trial.

But he emphasized the youth and inexperience of the two lawyers who had defended Johnson at his trial. In his concluding argument, Mr. Collins said:

"It is sincerely hoped that this honorable court in its opinion will take cognizance of the archaic and inhuman system which permits the appointment of the inexperienced practitioner to represent indigent defendants, particularly in capital cases.

"If this court does make pronouncement in this connection, then it is certain that the weight and dignity of such action will prompt legislation that cries to high Heaven for remedy."

Appeals Court Responds

The Court of Appeals responded to Collins' appeal, and in strong language.

"Accused was a colored boy without funds or other means to employ counsel of his own selection," said the opinion read by Associate Justice Henry W. Edgerton. "And the court appointed to represent him two young members of the bar with little, if any, experience . . .

"In the circumstances, the failure of counsel to produce all available evidence, in a case involving the life of the accused, should not be held against him.

"It would be a strange system of law which first assigned inexperienced counsel in a capital case and then made counsel's neglect a ground for refusing a new trial.

"The right to counsel is not formal, but substantial.

"It is hard to ask experienced counsel of proved ability to serve in cases of this sort without compensation; but the rights of poor persons can be protected in no other way until systematic provision is made for their defense."

New Trial in Spring

A short time after the court's ruling, Prisoner Johnson, a short, emaciated youth, was removed from "death row" at the District Jail. His new trial probably will be held some time in the spring.

In statements to The Post, representatives of the bench and the bar were, for the most part, heartily in favor of creating the office of public defender, an official who, with a staff of assistants, would handle the cases of indigent prisoners involved in jury cases.

A few favored legislation which would authorize the courts to pay competent lawyers a fee for handling such cases.

Comment follows:

Francis W. Hill, jr., president of the District of Columbia Bar Association: "The theory of giving a youngster just out of school an opportunity to gain some experience in defending a man whose life is at stake is not sound.

"The State has just as much interest in seeing that an innocent man gets a fair trial and an adequate defense as it has in seeing that a guilty man is actively and ably prosecuted. I am heartily in favor of the public defender system."

Judge Edward M. Curran, of the Police Court: "The criminal law should be such that the poor and helpless defendant would be accorded the same adequate defense as is given to the wealthy.

"It should be such that no one would be compelled to suffer because of his race, creed or purse, and I feel that the system of assigned counsel should give way to the public defender system in order that the defendant would be adequately represented by experienced counsel, capable of seeing to it that the ends of justice are served. In other words, the Government should protect the innocent as well as protect society against the criminal."

Judge Natnan Cayton, of the Municipal Court: "That breakdown in justice (the Johnson case) could not have happened had the public defender system advocated in 1938 been established.

"I am afraid it is but another evidence of how justice languishes in the Nation's Capital. We naturally wonder how many other citizens are populating jails simply because they were guilty of having an empty purse.

"I've never understood why we should be satisfied to have our city the last in judicial and governmental improvement. We ought to be the first."

Bar Body Back Plans

Frederick A. Ballard, chairman of the public defender committee of the District of Columbia Bar Association: "Since 1937, the Bar Association has been trying to correct the situation alluded to by the Court of Appeals—a situation in which the indigent defendant does not get the break that the well-to-do defendant gets. That ought not to be in a democracy.

"Our committee made a study of the system here and the systems in other jurisdictions, and concluded that the only solution in Washington was the public defender system. The committee made this recommendation to the Bar Association which, in December, 1937, adopted it by an almost unanimous vote. A bill to establish the public defender system here was drafted by the Bar Association, and introduced by Senator Capper.

"There was some sentiment for a fee system such as they have in Cleveland. However, a majority felt that this would produce other problems. For example, there might be a suspicion of possible favoritism. We looked at the matter, not from the standpoint of the attorney, but from the standpoint of the defendant and of public interest."

"Long Time Need"

Sefton Darr, former president of the Bar Association: "We have needed a public defender system here for a long time. Passage of the Capper bill will eliminate the many abuses under the present system, which is not scientific and can't be guaranteed to produce results."

The public defender committee, headed by Mr. Ballard, also includes John Sirica, James F. Reilly, William J. Rowan, John L. Laskey and James R. Kirkland.

Under the Capper bill the public defender would be appointed by the President for a term of four years. His salary, not to exceed $7,000 a year, would be fixed by the Attorney General.

The Attorney General also would decide on the number of assistants to the public defender, and fix their rate of pay, which would not exceed $5,000 a year. He also would pass on the necessary clerical help.

5 Years' Practice Required

The public defender and his assistants would be required to have had at least five years of actual law practice before the District Court.

It would be the duty of the public defender to represent and defend, without fee, any indigent person charged with an offense punishable by death or by imprisonment for a term of more than 90 days, or by a fine or penalty of more than $300, or to handle an appeal where, in the public defender's judgment, such an appeal might reasonably be expected to result in a reversal or modification of the original conviction."

Broadly speaking there are three schools of thought here on the problem presented by the indigent defendant. One feels that there should be a public defender system, the other that there should be a fee system, and the third, an idealistic group, feels that the present system should be continued, but that competent lawyers should show a greater willingness to handle such cases.

Welles Center of Fierce Fight to Gain Peace Edge

Rome Watches Envoy's Action; Allies Silent

Hitler May Present Demand for Peace To U. S. Spokesman

By Herbert L. Matthews.

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Feb. 28.—Although only the first stage of Undersecretary of State Welles's journey is over, it has become already clear that he is the center of a fierce struggle, nonetheless deadly for being conducted in polite diplomatic form.

The spectator, Italians are saying of the United States today, has left his box and stepped into the arena, however innocently, and if he gets slightly mauled, don't be surprised.

Welles is being figuratively drawn if not quartered between Italy, Germany, France and England. Everybody—even down to the Ukranians, who sent him a plea for independence in the new Europe before he left Rome—want to reach his ear to cajole, to plead and perhaps even to threaten. He has already been tripped up once by the publication—against his knowledge and desire—of the fact that he brought a message from President Roosevelt to Premier Mussolini.

Nazis May Demand Peace

There are many signs that Germany may take Mr. Welles's visit as the basis for a great peace offensive and the Italians, British and French have been reacting accordingly.

The Italians are pleased at the idea and, in any event, they seem to feel there may be some concrete result from the Undersecretary's trip. They are not prepared to put forward any new peace proposals, but they would welcome a peace move either by the United States or Germany.

If a proposition is really put up to Welles by Fuehrer Hitler it can count upon Italian support. Italo-German relations have taken a sudden spurt of cordiality, chiefly as a result of the quarrel with England over coal imports, but in any event Rome and Berlin have always had much the same ideas about peace.

Allies Are Worried

The fact that Germany and Italy are known to be anxious for peace and are presumably impressing Welles with their anxiety, has worried French and British circles here. As things are working out, they see the Allies getting maneuvered into the position of refusing to consider peace proposals, since they will not consider the sort of peace Berlin and Rome want.

Consequently, it can be taken as certain that Sir Percy Loraine, the British Ambassador, and Andre Francois-Poncet, the French Envoy, yesterday warned Welles strongly against any German peace offensive, while Hans-Georg Viktor von MacKensen, the German Ambassador, is understood to have exuded goodwill.

Welles reached Zurich, Switzerland today, and will stay at a near-by lake resort until he entrains tomorrow for Berlin, where he is expected Friday. He will see Leland Harrison, United States Minister to Switzerland, before leaving.

to what, if anything, they think they should do to comply. Public hearings in the two proceedings, meanwhile, have been tentatively set for April 26, although it is likely that the hearing date will be later postponed while the commission studies the proposals received from the companies.

"In no sense are the two companies being singled out as test cases," the commission declared. "The proceedings instituted today are in no sense punitive."

After public hearings and further discussion of the problems involved, the commission will draw up orders forcibly realigning the systems to comply with the law. A system is given a year to comply, but it may obtain a year's extension.

When orders are handed down, which probably will not be before the early part of 1941, at best, they will be subject to court review. It is entirely possible, therefore, that the proceedings instituted yesterday will result in the "death sentence" provisions being taken to the Supreme Court for a constitutionality test.

It was a case involving Electric Bond & Share which resulted in a test of the registration requirements of the Holding Company Act. The Supreme Court on March 28, 1938, ruled in favor of the Government. Electric Bond & Share and other companies which had been holding out registered with the commission as a result.

Cardenas Has Plan To Pay Oil Firms

Mexico City, Feb. 28 (AP).—President Lazaro Cardenas proposed today reorganization of the government petroleum industry on "a sane, intelligent economic basis" and to "permit payment of indemnification" for expropriated foreign oil properties.

Outstanding among his proposals were recommendations for sharp salary reductions, elimination of "useless jobs" and a drive to increase foreign exports from 60,000 to 200,000 barrels daily.

British Halt Jewish Farm Expansion in Palestine Area

By James B. Reston.

Copyright by New York Times

London, Feb. 28.—The British government, which promised during the last war to support Arab and Jewish claims in Palestine, virtually brought to a standstill Jewish penetration in the agricultural areas of that country tonight by defining one large region in which Jews are prohibited to purchase land and restricting their purchases to another region.

This action, announced by Colonial Secretary Malcolm MacDonald in the House of Commons and described in detail in a white paper, stirred up sharp argument across the floor of the House and brought swift action by the Labor Party and the London Executive Jewish Agency.

Clement Attlee, opposition Labor leader, announced tonight his intention to submit for the first time since the outbreak of the war a vote of censure against the government.

Jewish Agency officials, in a bitter statement, declared the new land regulations "make a mockery of the obligation placed upon His Majesty's government by the mandate, encourage close settlement by Jews on the land and discriminate against Jews on the grounds of race and religion."

Palestinians in France

Copyright by New York Times

Somewhere in France, Feb. 28.—Their past differences forgotten in the common effort, a force of 700 Palestinian soldiers, about three-quarters of them Jews and the rest Arabs, arrived at a French port today to join the British expeditionary force.

The Jews and Arabs are all specially selected men of excellent character and physique. Before they left Palestine they underwent a short course of intensive military instruction.

They will be attached to the Auxiliary Military Pioneer Corps already with the British Expeditionary Force.

Italian Restrictions Effective

Rome, Feb. 28 (AP).—Jewish professional men were warned through press notices today of the approaching deadline for the exercise of their professional activities, fixed by the law of last June 29 at March 1.

Beginning Friday only those especially exempted may continue to work as journalists and notaries public. Exemptions have been granted Jews who were World War volunteers, early Fascists or members of the families of war dead.

Professions from which Jews are barred, beginning Friday, include doctors, surgeons, pharmacists, veterinarians, lawyers, engineers, architects, chemists and agricultural and industrial experts.

Neutral 'Insults,' Goebbels' Theme

Berlin, Feb. 28 (AP).—Propaganda Minister Goebbels gave nonbelligerents another lecture on neutrality tonight, declaring that "even in neutral states the precepts of freedom of opinion may not be misused knowingly and systematically to insult the warring powers."

Addressing a mass meeting in Muenster, Goebbels resumed the pressure campaign on neutrals which he opened February 13 before Nazi Party orators.

British Sound U. S. on Embargo To Keep Supplies From Russia

By Frank R. Kelley.

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Feb. 28.—The British government has made "soundings in Washington in the hope of obtaining the cooperation of the United States Government in restricting exports of valuable raw materials and machinery to Soviet Russia, and thereby to impede the Soviet war machine in its drive against Finland, it was learned today from a usually reliable source.

The British believe that President Roosevelt and his Administration desire, just as do Britain and France, to help the Finns against the Reds. Therefore, it is understood, the British have suggested discreetly to Washington that measures should be introduced to reduce the flow to Russia of copper, tin, rubber, petroleum, iron, molybdenum, essential to the production of high grade steel.

Seeking "Moral Embargo"

One step by President Roosevelt which would be welcomed by the British would be the declaration of a "moral embargo" against such shipments, similar to the moral ban which he placed on shipments of American war planes to Japan.

According to the British, a moral embargo by the United States against Russia could be justified easily on the ground that the Russians are actively engaged in bombing the civilian population of Finland.

Particularly disturbing to the British is the thought that the tin and rubber exported from the United States to Russia are of British Empire origin, and it was believed that the British have put questions to Washington on this point.

Pacific Contraband Control?

London, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Britain has opened negotiations to establish contraband control bases on the Canadian west coast, at which traffic from the United States and other Pacific territories to Russia may be checked, it was reported reliably today.

Besides Canada's Pacific ports, British bases at Hongkong, Singapore and the Fiji Islands may be used by the British navy to establish contraband control in the Pacific.

The declaration in Parliament yesterday of Ronald Cross, minister of economic warfare, that the government was considering checking United States shipments to Russia by establishing contraband control in the Pacific failed to satisfy members of the House of Commons, who insist there are wide gaps in the British blockade of Germany. Pressure was expected to be put on the government to tighten contraband control.

Speed Contraband Search

Copyright by New York Times

Gibraltar, Feb. 28.—British naval authorities at Gibraltar announced that the time required to clear United States steamers through the contraband control during the period from February 17 to 25 averaged seven hours, with the exception of one which had no clearance papers and another which arrived late at night.

These two were detained 96 and 22 hours, respectively. Two vessels which passed through the straits westward were not diverted to the harbor and were only boarded for identification.

U. S. Envoy in Long Talk With Molotoff

Moscow, Feb. 28 (AP).—Premier Molotoff today entertained United States Ambassador Steinhardt at a three and one-half hour luncheon.

Informed Soviet circles expressed satisfaction at the affair which they said proceeded in a friendly atmosphere.

Authoritative American quarters said the luncheon afforded an opportunity for a full and frank exchange of views on numerous subjects in which both governments are interested.

Britain Surrenders 9 Nazis to Japan

Yokohama (Thursday), Feb. 29 (U.P.).—The British cruiser Kanimbla today transferred to Japanese authorities here nine of the 21 German sailors seized January 21 by a British warship from the Japanese passenger liner Asama Maru.

The British claimed the right to hold the others on the grounds that they were subject to military service in the Reich.

45,000 Tons Called Ample For Battleships

Edison Says Navy Intends to Proceed With Construction

By John G. Norris.
Post Staff Writer

Secretary Edison declared yesterday the Navy would go ahead with the construction of four 45,000-ton battleships despite Congressional efforts to force building of "super-dreadnaughts" of 60,000 tons or more.

The Navy Secretary said he would ask the Senate to restore funds for the new warships cut by the House on the ground that larger foreign warships might make them obsolete before completion. More than half of the $112,000,000 carved from the Navy's budget in the House was from ship and plane construction.

"They will be mighty good ships, fast and carrying many guns," Edison told his press conference. "It would be very foolhardy to redesign them now in the midst of the present world situation. We might botch the job."

Vinson Bill Is Sped

Meanwhile, the $856,000,000 Vinson naval expansion bill was given legislative preference in the House. Chairman Sabath of the House Rules Committee, announced the measure is slated to be taken up on the floor Monday after his group had voted it a place on the special calendar.

At the same time, as the House began consideration of the War Department "civil functions" supply bill, a fight was launched to restore funds for constructing a spare set of Panama Canal locks as a national defense project.

Representative Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, asked that $15,000,000 in cash and $99,300,000 in contractual authority, denied by the House Appropriations Committee, be voted by the House.

45,000 Tons "Ample"

Edison said the Navy was studying the question of building larger battleships and other types, but said the 45,000-ton ships should be "ample for the time being, at any rate, to keep up with anything now being built abroad."

The House Appropriations Committee condemned the building of the 45,000-ton ships as "imitation" of foreign navies, and urged the Navy restudy its plans with a view to constructing larger vessels. Funds for two of the new dreadnaughts were limited to just enough for preparation of plans and that for the other two were heavily slashed.

While unwilling to change the size of these ships now, Edison said in the future he wanted to "take off the limit, build the best ships we can, and let the tonnage fall where it may."

Lesson From War

The Navy Secretary said the chief lesson of the European War to date had been that sufficient protection against torpedoes and mines must be provided in new ships. He declared that construction of submarines was running ahead of schedule and other vessels were up to their schedules.

Completion of some destroyers had been slowed up slightly due to building in more stability and diverting workmen to reconditioning older vessels, he said, but these delays "were not at all serious."

Kermit Roosevelt to Lead Volunteer Brigade, Finns Say

British Consider Direct Assistance With Trained Troops

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 28.—Maj. Kermit Roosevelt, son of the "Roughrider," probably will lead an international brigade being organized in England to help the Finns, it was announced today by the Finnish Aid Bureau.

The first 500 of these 2,300 volunteers already are on the way, and the former American explorer and shipping president is waiting for the war office to open tomorrow to resign his commission in the British army and lead the internationals. It was expected that his resignation would be accepted.

This was disclosed as official quarters were reported to have under serious consideration the sending of a large allied expedition to Finland to replace the unofficial volunteer aid.

Fights for Principle

Roosevelt, 50-year-old son of President Theodore Roosevelt, is a major in the British army. He served with both the British and American forces in the World War.

Roosevelt said then he was fighting against Germany for a second time as a matter of "moral principle" without regard to his citizenship.

Tonight the Finnish radio announced at Helsinki that the first Canadian volunteers had arrived in Finland.

The International Brigade already formed has no official status in Britain, but its members will wear battle dress like that of the British army, and have silver collar badges with the letters "IN."

The possibility of a large British military force grew out of protests in certain quarters against half-hearted measures in support of Finland.

KERMIT ROOSEVELT

Russia Called an Enemy

These quarters visioned the task of giving the Finns support in the form of a large force of trained men and striking at Russia, classed in many public speeches as an "enemy" of Great Britain, though the nations technically are at peace.

Another reason for a big Finnish expedition cited here is that such pressure on Russia would block Soviet economic assistance to Germany by keeping her hands full.

Don Juans Given Warning In Nazi Campaign for Babies

Himmler's Organ Pillories Aristocrat Who Wouldn't Marry Girl He Caused To Expect Child; She Killed Herself

By Otto Tolischus
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Feb. 28.—A law against Don Juans who would shirk their moral responsibilities was forecast in Das Schwarzekorps, the organ of the secret service as a counterpart to Heinrich Himmler's order to German men, women and girls to produce more children, even outside of wedlock.

The organ publicly pillories a member of a rich aristocratic German industrial family for having refused to marry a girl who had become an expectant mother and who committed suicide as a result, then it says:

"No man shall be able under cover of 'racial tasks' to develop into a Don Juan and then say he did it 'for his people.' German women are not to be regarded as free game.

"Care has been taken that respect for the German woman and mother remains the supreme law of a manly, chivalrous attitude toward life. And we shall take care that this matter-of-course moral obtains the force of law outside our narrower confines."

The journal again explains that Himmler's order is "an emergency measure, designed to make up the losses of war and defends the unmarried mother as a matter of principle and morals.'" But it draws a distinction "between unmarried parents who act in consciousness of their racial responsibility and deep natural longing for a child and those who perhaps act only in frivolity." At the same time the order declares war against a "bourgeois double standard of morals."

"No, we won't release men from their responsibility, which they must bear in every case," the organ says. "When an unmarried woman, in full consciousness of her own responsibility and the burdens which she assumes, is ready, for her people and the fulfillment of her own purpose of existence, to take upon herself the sacrifice of motherhood, then she will also select a man who will be a worthy sire of her child and there can never be a reproach of frivolity or irresponsibility against the man. But in all other cases we shall hold the man responsible and the man only."

In a circular order, Wilhelm Frick, minister of the interior, decreed that an engaged woman whose fiance died unexpectedly, might assume his name by legal process and that any children resulting from that engagement may be granted the name of the father. Authorities were instructed to grant all such requests in cases where the fiance died in the war.

Hull Reports Good Response From Neutrals

Secretary Reiterates He Is Striving Only To Organize Peace

Secretary of State Hull's efforts to curb post-war autarchy and totalitarianism are bringing favorable reactions from other neutral powers, was said at the State Department yesterday.

There were indications that developments, at least to the extent of publication of some of the responses to this country's soundings may be expected in the near future.

The soundings are being conducted on the basis of the Secretary's statement on February 9, at which time President Roosevelt announced the Sumner Welles mission to confer with heads of state in Italy, England, France and Germany. Secretary Hull announced then that "diplomatic conversations of an informal character" were being initiated with neutral governments in the nature of "preliminary inquiries relating to a sound economic system, and at the same time world-wide reduction of armaments."

Organizing for Peace

He emphasized then, as he did at his press conference yesterday, that nothing was involved relating to conditions pending the outcome of the European war.

If the forces of peace and general stability, especially economic, Secretary Hull said yesterday, are not organized preparatory to the transition and reconstruction period, the forces of autarchy and regimentation and economic totalitarianism will probably have the same tendency that they did after the first World War toward spreading their practices on an ever-harrowing and more disastrous basis to increasing areas of the world, with much worse destructive effects, even, than followed the similar policy after ten years of the first post-war period.

Nothing had been communicated to the neutrals, he added, other than the copies of his statement. These had gone to nearly all the neutral countries, he said. They were not accompanied by a definition of the American attitude but this is expected to be developed in the course of the exchanges, in the hope that neutral thought will be crystallized enough to be of influence when the time comes for peace negotiations.

German Reaction

Berlin, Feb. 28 (AP).—Germany will not give up her autarchy as long as England controls the seas, authorized sources said tonight in commenting on Secretary of State Cordell Hull's announcement of a world-wide postwar program to end economic autarchy, regimentation and totalitarianism.

"Admirable," Says London

London, Feb. 28 (AP).—Secretary of State Hull's announcement in Washington of United States-initiated conversations to rally the world against a postwar spread of totalitarianism was described unofficially here today as "an admirable sentiment."

Norweb, New Envoy to Peru, Seeks Air Lines Expansion

Career Diplomat, On Visit Here, Talks of New Duties

R. HENRY NORWEB

R. Henry Norweb, 43-year-old career diplomat who is the new United States Ambassador to Peru, believes one of his chief duties in Lima will be to aid in expansion of commercial air service on South America's west coast.

"Lima is the control point for west coast aviation facilities," he said yesterday at the State Department, "and a further development of these facilities would benefit both the Peruvians and ourselves."

Norweb arrived in Washington Tuesday from the Dominican Republic, where he has served as American Minister since 1937. He expects to leave in three weeks for Peru. The post has been vacant since Laurance Steinhardt was named Ambassador to Soviet Russia a year ago.

The new envoy is "delighted" with his assignment. Cordial relations are traditional between Peru and this country, he said, pointing out that the American mission in Lima was one of the first in this hemisphere to be accorded the rank of an embassy.

Peru is "the fastest-growing country on the South American west coast," he said, with a rapidly expanding transportation system.

Discussing his last assignment, the diplomat recalled that the Dominican Congress has passed a unique law providing that its country's foreign policy shall conform to that the United States in all matters concerning "hemisphere defense." He stated that "no country has cooperated more fully with us in this field."

Norweb was born in England of American parents. A Harvard graduate, he entered the foreign service in 1916. He held many secretarial posts abroad and was Minister to Bolivia in 1936-37.

Lieut. Thompson Found Wounded Aboard His Ship

Seattle, Feb. 28 (AP).—Lieut. A. B. Thompson, 38, commanding the U. S. S. Teal, was found aboard his vessel today, a pistol wound in his head. His condition was reported critical.

Lieut. Thompson's father died several weeks ago in Baltimore.

The officer, married and the father of three children, was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1925 and began flying 13 years ago.

He had been in hospitals until recently as the result of a plane mishap in the Panama Canal Zone two years ago.

Deportations Of Jews From Reich Resumed

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, Feb. 27.—Deportation of Jews to the Lublin reservation in central Poland near the German-Soviet border has been resumed by the Nazis, it is learned here. Nearly 1,000 men and women are said to have arrived there from northern Germany, mainly from towns along the Baltic.

Stettin already has been "evacuated," while Koenigsberg is preparing to deport its Jews and all the Baltic coast will be cleared of its Jewish population, Paris hears. The Lublin reservation now houses 6,000 Jews and the Nazis are believed to be intending to raise the figure to at least 50,000 by summer.

Do this Quick To Relieve Sore Throat from a Cold

JUST FOLLOW 3 STEPS SHOWN HERE... RELIEF USUALLY COMES IN A HURRY. BE SURE TO USE FAST-ACTING GENUINE BAYER ASPIRIN.

1. For sore throat from cold, dissolve 3 Bayer Aspirin Tablets in ½ glass of water and gargle. Pain, rawness, are eased in a short time.

2. To relieve headache, body discomfort and aches, take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets and drink a full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours.

3. Check temperature. If you have a fever and temperature does not go down — if throat pain is not quickly relieved, call your doctor.

Sore throat from colds eased in a short time! No strong medicines to upset system.

Don't wait if you even suspect you are catching a cold. At the first sign, faithfully follow the directions in the pictures above—the simplest, and among the most effective methods known to modern science.

See Your Doctor. Even though he may wholeheartedly approve using Bayer Aspirin to relieve painful symptoms, you should not fail to see your family physician, because many colds may lead to serious consequences. Largely with medical approval, this simple, scientific method of relief has taken the place of old fashioned strong medicine for colds, which may upset the system. Literally millions have adopted it.

Try this way. You will say it is unequalled, we are sure. When you buy, however, be sure you get the fast-acting Bayer product you want. Ask for Bayer Aspirin by the full name, not for just "aspirin" when you buy. And see that you get it.

WHY BAYER ASPIRIN STARTS TO WORK SO FAST

Drop a genuine Bayer Aspirin Tablet in water. Almost instantly it starts to disintegrate—is ready to go to work. Make this test and see for yourself why Bayer Aspirin acts so quickly!

that it was "a safe step, short of war."

Before the House turned down the Miller proposal, 106 to 49, Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York, shouted that "Finland asks for bullets—we give her beans; she asks for powder—we give her peas."

Celler, a New Dealer, denounced the "psalm-singing hypocrisy" of the Administration bill, while Representative Dingell (Democrat), of Michigan, added that the United States was sending Finland "powder puffs and silken panties." Finland "is fighting our battle," he exclaimed.

Bank Ready to Act

Other members who vainly urged an unrestricted loan to Finland were Representative Eaton (Republican), of New Jersey, who denounced the bill as "the greatest example of political filim-flamming and skullduggery in all my years in the House;" Representatives Casey, of Massachusetts, and Allen, of Pennsylvania (Democrats).

Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones has indicated that as soon as President Roosevelt signs the bill, approval will be given to the projected $20,000,000 loan for Finland. The Export-Import Bank already has lent Finland $10,000,000.

China, which has received a $25,000,000 loan, is expected to be able to obtain another $20,000,000 credit when the bill becomes law, and smaller loans are expected for Sweden and Norway.

Early in yesterday's debate, two unsuccessful Republican efforts were made to restrict the field in which the Export-Import Bank can make the new $100,000,000 loans.

Representative Keen, of New Jersey, attempted to secure prohibition of loans to foreign governments in default to United States citizens, as well as to the United States Government. This proposal, which would be particularly applicable to Latin America, was defeated, 135 to 86.

Representative Keefe, of Wisconsin, thereupon suggested that the prohibition in the committeee bill be extended to "agencies or nationals" of governments in default to the United States, but he was turned down, 128 to 95.

Reds Claim Capture of 6 Finn Towns

"Other sectors of the front, no important changes."

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, Feb. 28.—The Red army's relentless pressure against Finnish defenses along the shell-pocked Karelian Isthum continued today to the accompaniment of successful Russian attacks on the far northern front near Petsamo.

The Finnish high command communique made scant mention of the isthum fighting, saying only that the "enemy suffered heavily" Tuesday and that Finnish forces fought defensive actions with "lively" artillery action on both sides.

As Soviet forces attacked across the ice of Viipuri Bay, apparently planning to envelop the city of Viipuri, civilians were withdrawn from many villages along the bay's western shore since they had come within range of advancing Russian artillery.

The Russians seemed determined to thrust the spearhead of their attack westward along the Gulf of Finland coast at all costs.

There were signs this might prove costly since the Finns have strong batteries along the coast, though the coastal fortifications farther south, centering around Koivisto, already have fallen into Russian hands.

In addition the Finns are standing firm at Taipale, the eastern end of the isthmus defense line where repeated Soviet assaults have failed to gain ground ever since the war started November 30.

Apparently something has gone wrong with Soviet calculations in the Kuhmo region, about midway on the long Russian-Finnish border, where the Finnish communique said operations were continuing against "surrounded enemy positions" and that several "strong points" had been captured.

Northeast of Lake Ladoga, 50 miles from the isthmus front, Russian "attempts to advance" were repulsed, the Finns said.

In the Far North Finnish troops were forced back 8 miles as the Russians advanced to Nautsi, on the Norwegian frontier, 75 miles below the Arctic coastline. Every building in Nautsi was reported aflame.

Finnish planes were reported to have bombed Soviet munitions dumps, troop concentrations and other military objectives behind the battle lines.

Finnish sources announced today 521 Russian planes have been shot down since the start of the war.

These sources estimated the total value of these planes at 2,500,000,000 Finnish marks ($42,500,000), or five times the Finnish financial losses due to bombings.

The Finns reported 1,310 Russian tanks have been destroyed or captured. Many were said to have been repaired and used by the Finns.

Allies Poise For Nazi Blow Via Belgium

Germany Expected To Seek Decision In Flanders Again

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 28 (AP).—Britain's new army, nearly a million men in France and at home, is arraying its forces in northern France to meet any German blow that might come along the route through Belgium, followed by the Kaiser's legions in 1914.

British plans, closely coordinated with those of the French, are interpreted by military experts as intended, among other things, to guard against such a blow, which, wheeling south as a quarter century ago, would strike across the Flanders plain at Paris.

Neutral military men in Paris and London, sources close to the British general staff and Italian officers in Rome have expressed belief that Germany may seek a decision on the Flanders plain once more. Most of them assign late March or early April as the likely time for the Nazi spring offensive should there be one.

Reich Waits Better Weather

Such a drive may be delayed, the observers agree, but most of them are of the opinion that Germany, which they think could have some 300 divisions (about 4,500,000 men) under arms by spring, is waiting only for better weather conditions to seek a decision in battle.

The plan which many military men in London believe the Germans will follow was drawn up by the noted German strategist, Gen. Count von Schlieffen, in 1908 but remains in all its grandiose proportions: A wheeling movement of 1,500,000 men through Belgium, with its axis on the Ardennes forest and its outer flank enfilading Paris.

Today's commentators expect the German battle line to be extended to permit tank and armored divisions full scope on Holland's flat spaces. Such divisions would be able to avoid and to flank some of Belgium's strongest defensive positions, on which the British and French might try to stand if the Belgians called for aid.

In spite of the British and French efforts to build an unbreakable wall from Switzerland to the sea, forces moving with the speed and cohesion which marked the German drive through Poland and protected by a strong air force would have an excellent chance to break through, an Italian artillery man said.

Patrol Fighting Renewed

Paris, Feb. 28 (AP).—Renewed patrol fighting on the Western Front, accompanied by continued aerial activity, was reported tonight by military dispatches which said that French artillery had smashed German attempts to feel out advance positions.

At the same time official announcements disclosed that British reconnaissance planes had flown over Berlin—as well as Kiel, Cuxhaven and Hanover—again last night, and reported that two German planes, which participated in mass flights over France, had been downed in the past 48 hours.

The land action was reported particularly hot in the sector between the Moselle and Saar rivers, not far from the Luxemburg border, where the Nazis have struck again and again in the last ten days at French advance positions.

The Brussels newspaper, Le Soir, said today 1,000 residents of Verviers, Belgian industrial city 12 miles from the German border, had abandoned their homes after government warnings.

(Monday, Luxemburg, to the southeast of Verviers, reported large German troop movements.)

Swiss Hear Antiaircraft Fire

Romanshorn, Switzerland, Feb. 28 (AP).—Inhabitants along the Swiss shore of Lake Constanz were startled this afternoon by what sounded like an air raid on the old Zeppelin works across the lake near Friedrichshafen, Germany.

A heavy fog screened the factories, which now are making warplane motors, from the view of the Swiss, but German antiaircraft batteries along the German shore were heard firing sporadically for nearly 15 minutes around 3 p. m., and the sound of plane motors was heard.

Lloyd George Warns British Of Food Shortage Danger

Declares Nation Went Into War Unprepared on Nutriment Front; Whisky Output to Be Curtailed

Copyright by New York Times

London, Feb. 28.—David Lloyd George, British premier in the last war, warned an audience of well-fed luncheers at the Dorchester Hotel today that Great Britain's food position was worse now than it was in the former war. He urged a widespread home food production campaign "before it is too late."

He added a warning that Britain could not expect extensive aid from neutral countries and advised the government "don't be skidded into a war with Russia."

"I have one message," continued Lloyd George, "it is essential that the nation's food be guaranteed for a long war. If you want a short war you must be prepared for a long one—better a long war than a mean getout."

Great Britain, he contended, was unprepared on the food front. "The Germans learned a lesson in the last war when they were beaten by privation," he said. "Now they depend for 5 per cent of their food supplies upon overseas sources while we are dependent for 60 per cent."

Lloyd George reminded his hearers that they were not so well off as in the last war, that they have 5,000,000 more mouths to feed and 6,000,000 tons less shipping capacity.

Whisky Output to Be Cut

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 28.—The government's concern over food supplies was shown today by Food Minister W. S. Morrison's announcement that Britain's 1940 whisky output would be limited to one-third that of 1939, while breweries would get no more grain than last year and their sugar consumption would be cut 30 per cent.

Limited supply of grains for stock feeding was the reason for the restrictions, Morrison told the Commons.

Distillers commented that "there was enough whisky in stock to last for years to come," but that the reduced output might result in "an airpocket" in future stocks.

Auto Industry Hums, War Orders Credited

Detroit, Feb. 28 (AP).—The motorcar industry is swinging back into high level production activity much earlier than usual and trade circles are speculating upon what part war orders may have.

The increased output volume not only is contraseasonal, but it has started at a time when retailers' stocks generally are fairly well filled and production of the industry as a whole is slightly in excess of consumer demand.

NLRB Aide Rules Witnesses Safe In State Courts

Dallas, Tex., Feb. 28 (AP).—Trial Examiner R. B. Denham of the National Labor Relations Board ruled yesterday a witness in an NLRB proceeding is protected from prosecution in State courts in regard to matters testified to before the board.

He instructed James R. Longley, of Houston, witness in hearing of an NLRB complaint against the Ford Motor Co. here for alleged unfair labor practices, that he must reply to questions of labor board attorneys.

Longley thereupon testified he had been put to work "on a squad of men to keep the union out of the plant." He said this was in the summer of 1937.

Germany Offers Guarantee To Rumania for All Trade

Carol Must Choose Between Reich Deal or Independent Course as Allies Mass Troops Near Back Door to Balkans

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, Feb. 28.—Authoritative quarters see Rumania faced with a choice between accepting a German guarantee of her borders in return for a virtual Nazi monopoly of Rumanian trade, and continued independent action entailing practically complete mobilization of her civil and military resources.

These quarters believe King Carol's government must reach its decision by early next week, when Dr. Karl Clodius, Germany's leading economic expert, is due to visit Bucharest.

The German offer of a guarantee, authoritative sources said today, was received while the Rumanian cabinet was considering issuance of a royal decree mobilizing the nation's industrial life under government control, and Rumanian military authorities were preparing to call to the colors on March 1 an additional 200,000 reservists, swelling the army to 1,600,000.

According to the same quarters, Germany, in addition to guaranteeing Rumania's borders, would promise to prevail upon Hungary, Bulgaria and Russia to abandon their territorial claims on Rumania and to sign nonaggression pacts with King Carol.

In return, these sources said Germany would sponsor a new railway agreement between Rumania and Hungary to facilitate shipment to the Reich of huge quantities of Rumanian oil, wheat and other raw materials.

Bucharest quarters tonight saw little likelihood that Rumania would accept Germany's proposals because:

1. Acceptance would oblige Rumania to abandon her plan for civil mobilization similar to that under way in Turkey, and send at least 1,000,000 of her 1,400,000 men now under arms back to their jobs in fields and factories.

2. The presence of nearly 1,000,000 allied and Turkish troops within reach of Rumania's border necessarily makes Rumania cautious about collaboration with Germany.

3. The recent favorable trend of Allied relations with Rumania has resulted in resumption of shipment of French and British raw materials, war planes and armaments to Rumania.

4. There is possibility of large scale expansion of Italian-Rumanian economic relations.

'Glass Glove' Saves Man's Frozen Hands

Gravelly Point Worker Came to Hospital With Gangrene

How a "glass glove" has saved the hands of a Gravelly Point airport workman whose fingertips were frozen four weeks ago was revealed yesterday by Emergency Hospital.

The patient is William Beckton, 33, colored, of 346 F street southwest. Had his accident occurred a few years ago he probably would have lost his hands. Yesterday, as he returned to the hospital for his thrice-weekly "glove" treatment, he was told that he will retain the full use of his fingers and hands.

According to Beckton, the fingers of both hands gradually grew numb with cold as he was digging a ditch on the airport job. Next day the affected members pained but he went to work. After a few hours he had to go home.

For nearly two weeks he tried self-medication, then on bitter cold February 14 he trudged to Emergency Hospital and held up a pair of hands, swollen twice their normal size and the fingertips gangrenous.

Little hope for saving the hands was held by doctors but the patient was turned over to Mrs. Katherine Moncure, physiotherapist. "Glass glove" treatment was begun at once and the results, Mrs. Moncure said yesterday, "are remarkable."

Every Monday, Wednesday and Friday Beckton goes to the hospital for treatment. He lies on a table and his arms, first one then the other, are encased in the "glass glove." By causing artificial circulation, the device is comparable to the "iron lung," which does the same thing for respiration.

The machine pumps air in and out of the "glove." When the air comes in, the arm's blood vessels fill up; when it goes out, the blood is drawn off.

Traffic Death Held Accident

A coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict of accidental death in the case of William F. Stetson, 73, of 417 Massachusetts avenue northwest. Stetson died last Tuesday in Casualty Hospital of injuries suffered when he was struck February 18 by a taxicab at Sixth and G streets northwest. The jury released John P. Rowles, 47, of 1918 Calvert street northwest, driver of the car.

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS

Help 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes Flush Out Poisonous Waste

If you have an excess of acids in your blood, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may be overworked. These tiny filters and tubes are working day and night to help Nature rid your system of excess acids and poisonous waste.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Kidneys may need help the same as bowels, so ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Helen Fetter Cook and Constance Albright Snow present Jeanette MacDonald in a song recital Wednesday night in Constitution Hall. Assisting artist and accompanist: Giuseppe Bamboschek.

A throng of Jeanette MacDonald's admirers filled Constitution Hall last evening to see and hear "in person" a fair songstress whom they had frequently seen and heard on the screen and radio. It was an audience tense with a theatrical excitement, surcharged with a mass emotion expressed in tumultuous applause, and uncritically delighted with every song and aria. She was welcomed at her entrance with an enthusiasm that knew no abatement throughout the recital and increased the length of the program by many an extra number.

Within certain limitations Miss MacDonald's voice has the charm of lyric sweetness, limpidity of tone and clarity of timbre. These qualities were immediately evident in her opening group of Mozart's "Baci amorosi e cari," Schumann's "Du bist wie eine Blume" and Wolf's "Er ist's." The Schumann lied, in particular, was sung with tenderness and grace of phrasing.

Her second group was of quite a different complexion, containing Foster's "My Old Kentucky Home," Granados' "El Tra-la-la y el Pinteado," Weckerlin's "Maman dites-moi" and Clutsam's arrangement of "Coming Through the Rye." Listening to these, one became aware she was singing prettily more by rote than by musical instinct.

The weaknesses both in her voice and her interpretations came to the fore in the arias she had selected: the "Jewel Song" from "Faust" and the waltz song from "Romeo et Juliette." Her high tones lost sonority and color, and though they were not pinched, they lacked vibrancy and vitality. To these arias she added as encores "Sempre libera," "Un bel di' vedremo" and "Les filles de Cadix."

From the French lyric writers she chose Hue's "J'ai pleure en reve," and Debussy's "Fantoches" and "Romance." In her concluding group a song by her husband, Gene Raymond, entitled "Let Me Always Sing" was included with Finden's "Till I Wake," Liza Lehmann's "Daddy's Sweetheart," Hageman's "Do Not Go, My Love" and Ronald's "Love, I Have Won You."

Miss MacDonald's voice has flexibility and ease in fioritura, and its quality is pleasing as long as the tone is kept in moderation. She has not yet learned, however, to project the emotion of song and to infuse her voice with warmth.

Giuseppe Bamboschek, a faithful accompanist, contributed two solos to the program, bits of Liszt which are seldom exhibited these days. One was "In the Sistine Chapel," based on Mozart's "Ave Verum" and a phrase from Allegri's "Miserere," and the other a transcription of "La Serenata," a song by Rossini.

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Philadelphia Orchestra Tuesday night in Constitution Hall, with Artur Rubinstein as soloist. Program: Sinfonietta for Strings, Op. 40A (Edward Burlingame Hill), Symphony No. 3 in F major (Brahms), Piano Concerto in F minor (Chopin), "Finlandia" (Sibelius).

An American composer, Edward Burlingame Hill, and a Polish pianist, Artur Rubinstein, provided the rewarding moments in Tuesday evening's concert by the Philadelphia Orchestra before an audience that filled Constitution Hall. Hill's composition, programmed as a sinfonietta and entitled by the composer himself a concertino, was played for the first time in Washington to the delectation of those who hunger for new music and those of opposite tastes found delight in Rubinstein's superlatively fine revivification of Chopin's faded F minor concerto.

Hill's concertino for string orchestra, an amplification of his string quartet in C, is thoroughly characteristic of his individual talent. A late work of his, now only four years old, it exemplifies the mature style which he has attained after growing through the influences of MacDowell and the French impressionists. Not that either of these influences ever did him harm, for he absorbed from the one a true romanticism and from the other a concise and pointed manner of musical expression. There is no Gallic accent in his speech, which is unmistakeably American with a New England idiom.

Hill's music abounds in a quiet wit which evokes the smile of appreciation and not the shout of laughter. I style is compounded of melodic phrases almost epigrammatic in their neatness, biting harmonies which carefully avoid the commonplace, and a high vitality of spirits. The concertino opens with a movement slyly labeled "Allegro giocoso," but its content is best described as badinage on a serious theme, for the passages of lively chatter are merely interruptions in an intellectual discussion.

The slow movement is elegiac in mood, marked by deep feeling and instrumented with effective contrasts of color. The scherzo is sprightly and energetic, but still tinged with the emotion of the preceding movement, while the finale throws off melancholy and enters upon a jovial symposium. Throughout the work one is conscious that one is listening to a stylist who is in sure command of his medium.

Chopin's first piano concerto might not have been written had he not lived at a time when composer-pianists had to write concertos to prove that they were more than pianists. The fact that he was only 20 and that he knew very little about orchestration is probably the reason why the work is not solidly organized and calls for reinstrumentation by a skillful hand. Its enduring quality resides primarily in the richly poetic slow movement and in a few lyric passages elsewhere.

Artur Rubinstein's remarkable performance of the concerto was a sheer feat of magical incantation. It was as though he had summoned the spirit of the composer to his aid, for he imbued the music with poesy and played it with technical perfection. The plasticity of his phrasing, the subtle variations in his dynamics and the ease of his dextrous skill were factors in his extraordinary accomplishment. He was recalled eight times and though the audience was obviously clamoring for a solo, the "no encore" rule had evidently been clamped upon him.

To Check Constipation Get at Its Cause!

If constipation has you down so you feel heavy, tired and dopey, it's time you did something about it. And something more than just taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat the super-refined food most people eat, the chances are the difficulty is simple—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this common form of constipation is your trouble, eat Kellogg's All-Bran regularly, and drink plenty of water. All-Bran isn't a medicine—it's a crunchy, toasted cereal. And it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Includes vegetables and beverage. Served in the Alexander Room, 5:30 to 9.

1. Get at least eight hours' sleep every night. 2. Open windows wide before retiring so as to get plenty of fres

God Plans For Nations, Says Minister

Rev. S. M. Shoemaker Deplores Moral Law 'Sentimentalization'

God has the plan for every nation, the Rev. Samuel M. Shoemaker declared at yesterday's noonday Lenten rites at Epiphany Church.

Rector of Calvary Episcopal Church, New York City, and famed "Moral Rearmament" leader, the Rev. Mr. Shoemaker said that, in order to know God's will, "America needs to stop sentimentalizing over the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount, and face honestly the difference between ourselves and those essential laws."

He summarized the laws as absolute honesty, absolute purity, absolute unselfishness and absolute love, then said "you accept these abstractly: so do we all—and we expect the other fellow to live up to them. But do we live up to them?"

The Rev. Mr. Shoemaker speaks today and tomorrow at noon.

"God is No Stranger"

Preaching from the same pulpit later in the day at the weekly Washington Federation of Churches' union Lenten service, the Rev. William A. Keese said "the message of the cross tells us that God is no stranger to our suffering."

"Christ drank the cup of human woe into which was poured all the bitterness men have endured," the pastor of Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church, on American University campus, told the congregation. He was presented by the Rev. M. P. German, pastor of Bethany Baptist Church, presiding.

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, resident prelate of the Methodist Church, will speak today at 12:05 noon at the Penn Theater at noonday Lenten rites of Southeast Protestant churches. The Rev. Ralph W. Loew, assistant pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church, brought yesterday's message. Special music will be provided today by the Wilson Memorial Methodist Church, which is conducting this week's services. The Rev. George H. Bennett is pastor.

The Rev. Mark Depp to Talk

The Rev. Mark Depp, pastor of Christ Methodist Church, Pittsburgh, will address the weekly union Lenten rites of Chevy Chase Protestant congregations tonight at 8 o'clock, at St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Connecticut avenue and Everett street northwest.

Dr. Henry W. Snyder will be host pastor.

Treasury Aide Father Of 18th Child

One Set of Twins In Healthy Family; Oldest Is 22

For the eighteenth time, William Andrew White accepted congratulations on becoming a father when he went to work yesterday.

No. 18, born Tuesday night at Providence Hospital to the Treasury Department employe and his 43-year-old wife, is a boy. That makes the tenth son.

Mother and youngest were reported doing nicely last night while the baby's nine brothers and eight sisters waited patiently at their home, 1524 East Capitol street, for their first glimpse of the newest addition to Washington's largest family.

When their seventeenth child was born in January, 1938, so much to-do was raised by the press that the parents decided yesterday to bar photographers and interviewers. The father, however, courteously admitted a reporter into his residence yesterday and with consummate politeness asked that a group picture of the family be postponed.

The eldest child is William, 22. There is one pair of twins, John Joseph and Dorothy Julia, 16. All are healthy and in school, except the three eldest, who have completed their studies; and the youngest, still in the toddling stage.

Employer, Labor Spokesmen Agree on Changes in District Benefits for Jobless

Employer and Central Labor Union representatives yesterday virtually agreed on six proposed amendments to the District Unemployment Compensation Insurance Act.

Meeting with the compensation board in the office of Commissioner David McCoach, jr., the groups decided on the six specific points which will be taken into consideration by the Commissioners in their report on the McGehee bill.

These points are:

Raising the maximum weekly payment from $15 to $20; raising the basic duration of payments from 16 to 20 weeks.

$200 Eligibility Minimum

A compromise of $200 as the minimum past wage requirement to become eligible for benefits.

Provide for auditing of the tax receipts by the District auditor.

Use of a sliding scale tax plan by which the District fund for disbursement of unemployment benefits would be maintained between $10,000,000 and $12,000,000.

Adoption of the experience or merit rating plan.

Payment of benefits for partial unemployment of from $2 to $10, or not to exceed 80 per cent of the full-time benefit payment.

Following the meeting, Col. McCoach said the Board of Commissioners and the D. U. C. B., of which they are the majority members, would meet tomorrow to draft a report on the McGehee bill.

The increase in the employe benefits is now in the bill, which was introduced by Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi.

Under the present law, a person becomes eligible for the benefit payments if he has been gainfully employed for 13 weeks in the past year. Under the McGehee bill, this system would be changed so that a person would become eligible if he had earned $150 in the past year. Spokesmen for the employer groups, which were represented at the meeting yesterday by the Washington Board of Trade and the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, recommended $250. They compromised yesterday on $200.

Tax Changes Proposed

Under the sliding scale proposal, the D. U. C. B. would be directed to increase the pay roll tax in event the benefit reserves fall below $10,000,000 and decrease the tax should the surplus exceed $12,000,000. The present surplus is over $16,000,000 and is expected to exceed $20,000,000 by January 1.

Plans for the employer experience rating plan, which would provide for a lowering of the pay roll tax rate for the individual employer depending on the stability of employment for his workers, were worked out by the Board of Trade, Merchants and Manufacturers Association and other business groups, all urging early trial of the plan.

According to a statement by the employer groups the proposed plan "must be regarded as a method of assessing responsibility for unemployment at the place it belongs, and as a method for measuring the employer's experience with unemployment among his workers."

The present tax rate is 3 per cent of the total pay roll. Under the experience rating plan the rate would range from ½ of 1 per cent to 2.7 per cent. The present act contains a statement directing the D. U. C. B. to install a rating plan. The McGehee bill proposes a further study of the plan.

Plan Explained

Where there is a wide range of unemployment in a given industry, it is apparent that there is a place for incentive to stabilize employment, and an employer can, by his own efforts, secure a rate lower than if he makes no effort to regularize, the employers' statement pointed out.

The plan is explained as follows:

The experience rating procedure is to take the wage histories of employes who have drawn benefits and sort them by employer number (which is already shown on the report originally filled by the employer). These slips become what will be called "wages charged."

"District Factor"

At the end of each year the total amount of benefits paid in the District is divided by the total amount of wages charged for all employers in the District. This gives the average relationship between benefits actually paid and the wages in the base year of the employes who received benefits. It is referred to as the "District factor."

Once a year for each employer, the total amount of wages charged that have been placed in his file is compared with his total taxable pay roll. This indicates the degree of stability among his employes. That is if very few of them have applied for and received benefits there will be only a small amount of wages charged in that employer's file and he will therefore have a small percentage.

The percentage determined for each employer indicating his degree of stability, multiplied by the District experience factor, gives the tax rate which must be collected from him in order to reimburse the District unemployment compensation fund for his share of the benefits paid.

Limits Suggested

The employers maintain that two years of experience in the payment of benefits indicates that the District may safely set a maximum tax rate of 2.7 per cent and may have a minimum tax rate of one-half of 1 per cent. Within these limits the District will raise sufficient funds to reimburse it for the amount of benefits paid out, they stated.

Present at the meeting yesterday were Col. McCoach, John A. Marshall, executive director of the D. U. C. B.; Daniel J. Callahan and John Locher, both members of the board; Lawrence E. Williams, president of the Board of Trade; Arthur J. Sundlun, president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association; James Holden, Arthur L. Schoenthal and Fred S. Walker, representatives of the Central Labor Union; Charles H. Tompkins, building contractor; J. J. Hasley, employer and William Press, of the Board of Trade.

'The Story of Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet' Finds Edward G. Robinson Playing Superbly; Frederic Freed at Last From His Indentures

By Richard L. Coe

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell

A GREAT FILM will open at the Earle Theater tomorrow morning. "The Story of Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" is the Warner Brothers latest biography for the scientific film-shelf and an eminent successor to "The Story of Louis Pasteur."

It is not our intention to jump the critical gun by reviewing the film in advance, but, several hours after yesterday afternoon's screening for the drama desks, we are still too stirred to remain long silent. Because of the eloquent playing of Edward G. Robinson in the title role, a compassionate and forthright script and the shining art of Ruth Gordon, this emerges as a moving and illuminating film which will be long remembered.

Mr. Robinson's portrait of the German scientist is a splendid achievement, one that is particularly the more striking because of his long identification with sordid felons, with suave crooks, with individuals one might find amusing but never admirable. His Dr. Ehrlich is ever human, always moving and hearteningly sincere. As his soft-spoken wife, Mary Gordon, in her second screen role, turns in a characterization that is an artless contrast to her Mary Todd Lincoln of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois." The two roles could not be more different. Miss Gordon has not changed her surface appearance very much, but an inner glow achieves the variation.

Of these two performances, of the screen play by John Huston, Heinz Herald and Norman Burnside and of the other excellencies of "The Story of Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" we must contain ourself until Saturday morning's review.

For today our pirate 'prentice
Rises from indenture freed;
Strong his arm and keen his scent is,
He's a pirate now indeed.

Today, as Brooks Atkinson so lovingly reminded us last Sunday morning in the Times, is February 29, 1940 and, as all good Gilbert and Sullivanites must realize with a jar, Frederic, the pirate apprentice of "The Pirates of Penzance," has now reached his twenty-first birthday. That ingenious paradox has now come to a point which back in 1879 must have seemed like the end of the world. The two creators may have hardly expected their dutiful hero to live until 1940's Leap Year, but here he is. Fredric is now aged 82 and, like another Englishman, at long last has seen the end of his period of servitude.

So we mused what the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company might be doing this day. We had heard that they had disbanded because of the war, but a glimpse last week at some of the London magazines informed us that, in true British fashion, they were carrying on. Their big news was a fresh scenic investiture of "The Yeomen of the Guard," a production which was well received by the reviewers. To our own little ebony idol we have prayed that they are paying the proper respect to the ever-youthful Fredric by performing "The Pirates" tonight somewhere under the darkening skies. But anyway: Hail, Fredric! Congratulations, Mabel, and an even longer life to you both.

Yesterday, as we had intended to remind you, Cornelia Otis Skinner forsook "Edna His Wife" for an afternoon and evening with "The Loves of Charles II." It is difficult to write anything further about the amazing effectiveness of Miss Skinner's art, except to add that now the actress seems at the very height of her powers. Hers is no e-nun-ci-a-shun, but a remarkable diction all the same, carried to the very rafters of the National by a voice that has immense force, but a force always carefully under control. At her Saturday matinee, Miss Skinner will precede "The Empress Eugenie" with three sketches, the last of which will be "The Vanishing Red Man." The remaining performances all concern Edna.

Chalk up two more promising bookings for the National. Gladys George returns to the stage which claimed her for so long in "Personal Appearance" to play Margery Sharp's adaptation of her own novel, "The Nutmeg Tree." Now titled "Lady in Waiting," the play seems a natural for the full-blown comedienne to anyone who has read the daffy adventures in Miss Sharp's novel. Opens Monday, March 18.

John Garfield will be the star of the following week, appearing in "Heavenly Express," a new play by Albert Bein. Harry Carey, the vice president of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," and Aline MacMahon are featured in the cast which will be directed by Robert Lewis.

The man who wrote the screen play for "The Life of Emile Zola" and copped an Academy Award for his work was in town last night for a brief visit. Geza Herczeg, the Hungarian journalist who turned script-writer with such brilliant results, was an honored guest at the Variety Club where he chatted about the forthcoming "Florian." Mr. Herczeg adapted Felix Saltern's book to the screen and is so enthusiastic about the results of the film, that he is traveling about at his own expense telling of that colorful Austrian story. The all-important horses of the tale are being depicted in the film by the prize steeds from the stables of Maria Jeritza, who retired from the operatic stage to become Mrs. Winfield Sheehan, wife of "Florian's" producer.

Beginning the Beguine

ELEANOR POWELL AND FRED ASTAIRE as they dance the Cole Porter tune which that versatile composer has revived for his scoring of "Broadway Melody of 1940," opening tomorrow morning on the Capitol screen. This film, marking the first joint appearance of two of the day's leading dancers, features George Murphy and Frank Morgan

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

All I could think of while I was talking to Albert McCasker, head of Mutual Radio, was "cast your bread upon the waters." Seventeen years ago he was writing for the Morning Telegraph and wanted to get a permanent job for his best pal. McCasker was interested in the new baby called "radio," and being on a paper, he got reams of stuff daily from the picture studios in Hollywood. So he conceived the idea of putting Hollywood on the air, so his friend could have the job. Incidentally, he'd never been to California, and just a few weeks ago made his first visit here.

◆◆◆

Well, to go back, the friend didn't think the idea was so hot, but McCasker, who had already started it, had to continue. So he became the first radio Hollywood columnist, and broadcast twice weekly for three years, from Newark. And from that humble beginning, with only a desire to help a pal, McCasker worked his way up until now he's head of the whole Mutual Network. Sure, his friend became his head salesman and has been with him ever since.

◆◆◆

It was during those early days when he met Arthur Murray, the dancing instructor, who came to him and wanted to teach dancing over the air. Well, the idea intrigued McCasker—it was so screwy he knew it would get scads of publicity. Then, too, he liked Murray, who stuttered—not much—but the kind that tickles your funny bone. For instance, he couldn't say "foot," called it "fut." That tickled the customers. Murray went on, and after he'd been speaking on the radio on which "fut" to put first for about three months, on night he and McCasker left for home together, subwayed to Manhattan.

◆◆◆

They got out 'way down town, Murray walked over to a $14,000 Rolls-Royce, unlocked it and got in. His boss was amazed, and said: "Gee whiz, you never told me you were rich." Murray laughed: "I wasn't. This was paid for by the dimes that came in from my dancing lessons. If you're interested, come up to my office and I'll show you." Then McCasker saw Murray's 39 secretaries busily opening envelopes, taking out dimes, sending out dancing instructions by return mail.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 28 (INS).—When Loretta Young turned down a lucrative contract at Twentieth Century-Fox that would have netted her $300,000 a year, the town gossips said she was out of her mind. Such jobs, they argued, do not grow on trees. Yet picking and choosing her roles will earn Loretta even more money in 1940. When she finishes "The Doctor Takes a Wife" at Columbia, she moves to Universal for "The City" with Gloria Jean—and then she will star in "The Life of John Charles Fremont" for Walter Wanger.

LOUELLA PARSONS

I talked with John Wayne on the set at Republic and he told me that he will play Fremont, the early California pathfinder, while Loretta will be seen as his wife, Jessie Fremont. She was the daughter of United States Senator Benton, who hailed from Missouri, and it was Jessie's influence that was responsible for Fremont's political ambitions. He ran for President and was an extremely colorful figure of those early days.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The girl with Dick Foran at the house of Murphy was Willy Leach; Geraldine Fitzgerald will go to New York to have her baby, which is due in April; Elsa Maxwell entertained Eve Curie and Rouben Mamoulian at the "Grapes of Wrath" premiere; the rains caused a landslide around Bill Boyd's place and kept him from his own preview of the new "Hop Along Cassidy;" Rosalind Russell said farewell to Hollywood after the "Grapes" premiere. She was escorted by John Durant, brother of Tim; who was the Miss Stanton that Garson Kanin invited to go with him to the premiere? Warners have paged Ethel Merman for a musical; reports from New York are that the group theater will disband at the close of their current attraction. Greg Bautzer went to Ciro's and ran smack into Lana Turner and Artie Shaw, who were at adjoining tables. They no speak-ee; congratulations went to Herbert Marshall and Lee Russell from every member of the English colony. We were happy to have the authentic story of their marriage first; Terry Kilburn, on tour with "Swiss Family Robinson," was put on the "Chief" at Kansis City yesterday with a doctor and a nurse, suffering from a bad attack of the flu; Fred Niblo, veteran director, will play Jackie Cooper's father in "The Aldridge Family."

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

A Hit Revue Will Brighten Incoming Week

'Streets of Paris,' Three New Films Included in Billings

"THE STREETS OF PARIS." After a run of eight months in New York, this musical revue comes to the National Theater Monday evening for a week's engagement with its original cast intact. Bobby Clark, Luella Gear, Abbott and Costello and "the Brazilian Bombshell," Carmen Miranda, are the stars of the piece, which was produced by the Shuberts in association with Olsen and Johnson, the "Hellzapoppin'" stars. Miss Gear and Mr. Clark are noted for their many appearances in musical revues and the Abbott and Costello team is currently a ranking air favorite. Miss Miranda is the highly publicized songstress from Rio who introduced the popular "South American Way." "Think-a-Drink" Hoffman, Della Lind, Yvonne Bouvier and Gloria Gilbert are the featured members of the cast. The music is by Jimmie McHugh and Al Dubin. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

RKO-Keith's

"VIGIL IN THE NIGHT." Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne and Anne Shirley have the costarring roles in this picturization of the novel by Dr. A. J. Cronin, whose earlier "The Citadel" was a resounding screen success of last season. The setting is in English hospitals during the current war and the story relates the problems of a beautiful nurse in her devotion to a younger sister. Aherne plays a famous surgeon who captures her heart. The latest issue of "Information Please," featuring Christopher Morley as the guest expert, is the chief supporting subject. Opens this morning.

Capitol

"BROADWAY MELODY OF 1940." Eleanor Powell and Fred Astaire are costarred for the first time in this back-stage story of the Great White Way. George Murphy is featured with Frank Morgan, Florence Rice, Ian Hunter and Lynn Carver. The music and lyrics are by Cole Porter. The Capitol stage revue will be headlined by Jack Durant, whose comedy and impersonations on the same stage a few months ago won such favor that he has been signed for a quick return. Sam Jack Kaufman will be back to lead the Capitol orchestra and the Rhythm Rockets will present a group of new dances. Harris, Claire and Shannon; the Randall Sisters and the Romano Brothers complete the stage bill. Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

"THE STORY OF DR. EHRLICH'S MAGIC BULLET." Edward G. Robinson turns from his gangster impersonations to portray Dr. Paul Ehrlich, the German scientist, in a biographical film from the Warner Brothers Studios. Ruth Gordon, Otto Kruger, Donald Crisp, Maria Ouspenskaya, Montagu Love, Sig Rumann and Donald Meek are important in the supporting cast. The "C.B.S. Radio Revue" will be the stage attraction, presenting the songs of Jane Froman, the mental exercises of Prof. Quiz (who started his radio career in this city), and those mad dancers, the satirical Hartmans. Jerry Cooper, the Letrees and the Roxyettes complete the stage line-up. Opens tomorrow morning.

Palace

"GONE WITH THE WIND." The most talked-of film of the year enters its sixth week on F street tomorrow morning. Little remains to be said of the Civil War film which numbers in its cast Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, Olivia de Haviland, Leslie Howard and Thomas Mitchell. For information on hours of presentations, note the daily film table.

Metropolitan

"HIS GIRL FRIDAY." "The Front Page" with a turn-about of Hildy Johnson's sex, enables Rosalind Russell to play the volatile reporter. Cary Grant, Ralph Bellamy, Ernest Truex, Helen Mack, John Qualen, Gene Lockhart, Porter Hall, Cliff Edwards, Abner Biberman and Frank Orth are in the cast of this comedy returning for another downtown week after an engagement at the Earle. Opens tomorrow morning.

Columbia

"I TAKE THIS WOMAN." Spencer Tracy and Hedy Lamarr co-star in this romance of a serious physician and a social butterfly. The film recently played a week at the Capitol. Verree Teasdale, Kent Taylor, Laraine Day and Paul Cavanaugh are in the cast. Opens tomorrow morning.

Little

"MIDNIGHT." Claudette Colbert's most successful comedy since "It Happened One Night" is currently being revived at the Little. One of last season's merriest farces, it concerns the mad experiences of an American girl stranded in pre-war Paris. John Barrymore's portrayal of a slightly demented baron presages his current stage hit in New York. The cast includes Elaine Barrie (Mrs. Barrymore) Don Ameche, Monty Wolley, Francis Lederer, Mary Astor and Hedda Hopper.

Trans-Lux

"INFORMATION PLEASE." Number four in the series that is sweeping the country is the principal short subject at the newsreel house this week. Deems Taylor is the fourth of the smart quartet. "Quaint Old Holland," "Donald's Cousin Gus" and a Harriet Parsons' Screen Snapshot are the other brief features. Opens tomorrow morning.

Howard

BENNY CARTER, sepia master of the saxophone, brings his band to the Howard Theater tomorrow afternoon to costar with Billie Holiday in the new week's stage revue at the T street theater. Carter's music is a favorite with the recording public both here and abroad and Miss Holiday earned her early swing fame as a songstress with Artie Shaw. On the screen, Sidney Toler and Charlie Chan costar in "City of Darkness." Reserved seats are on sale for the midnight performance Saturday.

Atlas

BORRAH MINEVITCH and his Harmonica Rascals open a four-day engagement on the stage of the northeast house Saturday afternoon. Their routine will consist of swing and classical tunes in their inimitable style. Two other vaudeville acts and a double feature film attraction yet to be announced are also on the new bill.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Feb. 28.

MARION BENT, the veteran vaudevillian and wife of Pat Rooney—who headlined with him for many years as Rooney & Bent—is ailing seriously, and the physicians have called her family to her bedside . . . The Governors of a number of States will be summoned to Washington shortly, to testify concerning State trade barriers. The monopoly probe committee will dig up the facts, and the Department of Commerce will supervise the inquiry . . . Misfortune has dogged Ambassador Bullitt, ever since his return to this country. His daughter, Anne, now is in a Washington hospital, as a result of a fall while horse-back riding. His secretary also is in the hospital, a victim of flu.

MISSY LEHAND, President Roosevelt's secretary, insists that the Boston interview, in which she was quoted as having urged a third term and as stating that the President has aged 20 years during his term of office, was inaccurate . . . This is Miss LeHand's version of the story: She was asked how much she earns, and whether she likes her job. She stated her salary and said that she likes her job, but said nothing about a third term . . . Then she was asked whether the President has aged, since she's working for him. And Miss LeHand assured the reporters that the President has aged— naturally—since she's been in his employ for 20 years.

FERENC MOLNAR succeeded in getting some of his money into this country before he arrived here. Molnar is so delighted with his new home that he assures his friends: "Every European should send his money to another country—and then move there" . . . Molnar has been receiving many letters from all his inmates telling him how sorry they are that he no longer is with them, how much they miss him and how deeply his absence is felt . . ."Such sentiments would only be appreciated," he laughed, "if such letters had been sent to an inmate at a place like Devil's Island—instead of a wonderful place like New York."

THE "RONDO" which will be played over WQXR on March 6 was composed by Sam Jaffe, the actor . . . If the League of Nations ever should be restored to its previous station of importance, and if a composer should desire to write a "League of Nations March," he'd have to get permission from George T. Bye, literary agent for Eleanor Roosevelt. Bye wrote a "League of Nations March" almost 20 years ago. It was played only once—by John Philip Sousa—who induced Bye to get a copyright . . . Because of the war, Lord Beaverbrook has given up his famous country place, Cherkley, which featured a private radio station and a movie theater.

FOR MORE than 20 years Willie Howard has supported the man known to Broadway as Sir Josef Ginsburg, who styles himself the world's greatest radio star, actor, musician, etc.—second only to Willie Howard . . . Sir Josef, who was named king of the radio in a ceremony at which N. T. G. presided many years ago, now is 62—and lives at Howard's household in Great Neck . . . Because Josef is so dependent upon him, and because of Willie's affection for him, the star will take legal steps—as soon as he returns from his current road-tour—to adopt Ginsburg.

WIVES OF THE cabinet members will compete in a pie-baking contest against the wives of Supreme Court Justices, in a box-social to be held in Washington on March 12 for the benefit of the forgotten Spanish refugees. SEC Commissioner Leon Henderson is sponsoring the event . . . Moe Berg, the baseball player, told his friend, Oscar Levant, that he was signing the 1940 contract offered him. "Of course, you can't be a hold-out," said Levant. "You haven't a farm to which you can threaten to retire" . . . When Art Arthur, who wrote Sonja Henie's "Everything Happens at Night," heard that a print of it had gone down with a torpedoed Dutch ship, he wired his collaborator, Robert Harari: "That sub commander must have been a critic."

THE REPRESENTATIVES of a group of women's clubs in Los Angeles presented themselves backstage, in Alexander Woollcott's dressing-room, and read to him a citation for all his accomplishments . . . Woollcott, preparing to make his entrance in "The Man Who Came to Dinner," accepted the citation, and merely bowed . . . "Just a bow?" asked the spokesman. "Won't you just say a word?" . . . Woollcott nodded, fixed the group with a cold stare, and blurted one word: "Coo."

Rogge Tells Of Corruption In Louisiana

Officials Coveted Material Things, Prosecutor Relates

Many Louisiana public officials regarded their positions as "springboards for the acquisition of personal wealth and the accumulation of material things," O. John Rogge, Assistant Attorney General, yesterday told the Federal Bar Association here.

"We found that Louisiana officials thought little of public trust, but much of public funds," Rogge said in a speech before an association luncheon at the Army and Navy Club.

Some officers of the State, he said, "secured bribes, extorted kick-backs and constructed lavish homes."

"My criminal division," he continued, "discovered misuse and diversion of WPA materials in Louisiana, the running of contraband oil in violation of the Connally Act and the denial of civil liberties to citizens."

Although income tax laws and mail fraud statutes provided the two chief and general avenues for the pursuit of criminal politicians, said Rogge, "there were other more specific and more particular bases for prosecution along lines more closely identified with activities of the Federal Government."

Rogge said he intended to become better acquainted with District Attorneys and their activities in the various States through the possible medium of liaison officers in 10 circuit divisions.

Although he has not yet decided to send Department of Justice men into the field, Rogge said he felt much could be accomplished by working in close coordination with State prosecutors.

Dr. Anspacher to Talk On Psychic Phenomena

Dr. Louis K. Anspacher, member of the Institute for Psychical Research, and a former student under William James, will discuss "Psychical Phenomena" at 11 a. m. tomorrow in the Shoreham Hotel. His lecture is one of the Friday morning series of the Town Hall.

The split personality and alleged communication with the dead are among the topics Dr. Anspacher will take up.

$2,000 Bracelet to Aid Finns

A $2,000 diamond bracelet was presented to Finnish Minister Hjalmar Procope Tuesday to help buy arms for Finland's defense against Russia. The bracelet was the gift of Miss Isabella Cameron, of Baltimore.

Procope also received $25,000 from J. P. Stevens and Co., Inc., and the M. T. Stevens & Sons textile firm of New York, it was announced.

The bracelet, made by a Stockholm jeweler who has served as crown jeweler for the King of Sweden and former official jeweler for the Court of Russia, will be sold by the Washington section of Fighting Funds for Finland, Inc.

Mrs. Low Bacon, widow of the New York Representative, said the Washington section will be organized today at a meeting in her home, 1801 F street northwest, at 5 p. m.

12th Street Y. M. C. A. Campaign Opens April 8

The Twelfth Street Branch of the Y. M. C. A., the world's oldest "Y" unit for colored boys, will conduct its annual membership campaign from April 8 to 17, it was announced yesterday. R. B. De Frantz, of the National Council, Y. M. C. A., will lead the drive.

All Swedish-type armaments captured by Germany in Poland will be sold by the Nazis to Sweden under a deal consummated between Berlin and Stockholm, according to reports reaching diplomatic quarters here.

Before the German conquest of Poland, the Swedish Bofors armament plant had sold guns of heavier type to the Polish army. In addition, the Polish Geglielski factory manufactured antiaircraft guns of the Bofors type under Swedish patents.

Carmody Calls Meeting on Status Of U. S. Cafeterias

In an effort to solve the legal questions concerning the Welfare and Recreational Association's operation of cafeterias in Federal buildings, Federal Works Administrator Carmody has called an open hearing for 3 p. m. Friday, it was announced yesterday.

The status of the association, under fire from the Comptroller General, also has been questioned in a report to Carmody from his legal staff.

Carmody asked the association's trustees and its manager, Capt. F. W. Hoover, to attend the meeting.

Washington Industries—Milling

Lone Flour Plant Grinds on Canal

By Edward F. Ryan.

Washington's flour industry is built partly in a modern city's demand for bread, partly in a century and a half of tradition.

The city's only flour plant is the Wilkins Rogers Milling Co., at Potomac and K streets northwest. It is housed in two buildings, one more than 100 years old with brick walls 2 feet thick, used formerly as cotton plant, ice plant, flour mill, and now office and warehouse. The other is a modern six-story concrete, brick and steel structure, built in 1922 and housing the present mill.

The plant is on the hill between the old Chesapeake & Ohio Canal and the Potomac River. The canal, which used to bring loaded grain barges from the upland farms to feed the Georgetown mills, now supplies all the power used in the mill.

In the last century, Georgetown boasted a dozen mills at one time, eight flour mills and four grist mills. Some of the flour went down the Potomac and away to European markets.

Now the grain comes in by truck and railroad to the K street side of the mill. In the American milling industry, the Wilkins Rogers firm counts itself at the "end of the line," since the flour centers have shifted to the Middle West.

Operators of the mill are Howard L. Wilkins and Samuel H. Rogers. Without exaggeration they could be cast in the roles of traditional "jolly millers." Or they could be typed as businessmen who picked up a dead business and built it to a $2,000,000 annual volume.

Wilkins is 73 and president of the firm. He was born in New Jersey, but grew up on a farm near Mount Vernon. His family farm was near the old Dogue Run Mill, built by George Washington, a coincidence that takes added note because Wilkins later helped remodel the mill. He was educated in Washington schools.

Rogers, 61-year-old vice president, is the son of a Loudoun County miller, who taught him the flour business. He is the father of four boys, and he would like to see at least the oldest one go into the same business. Outside the mill his main hobby is raising thoroughbred horses on his Loudoun County farm.

The two joined in 1915 to take over the old Arlington Mill, built in 1847, according to a stone plaque in the wall of the new mill. It had been closed for three years. Their friends advised them against the venture. They went ahead, caught a slice of war-trade by selling flour to Italy, and later turned the mill over to producing flour for America's World War needs.

The old mill and its machinery were destroyed in a fire, July 4, 1922. The modern mill was built on the same site.

A first glance at the inside of the mill gives the impression that it was never finished. The interior is like a building still under construction, a tangle of girders, of gigantic funnels, pipes running at all angles, with a network of power belts winding endlessly from floor to floor.

Later you find that girders, funnels, pipes, belts are all parts of one huge machine, which transforms whole grain to flour, and corn to meal, with never a hand touching it.

Corn and wheat are mostly purchased directly from farms within a 75-mile radius.

The Clue that Trapped the Heirs of Huey Long

ON THE MORNING OF JUNE 7, 1939, a hot tip came in to the city desk of the New Orleans States, evening newspaper sister of the famous Times-Picayune.

When a truck drove up before a half-built house in the suburbs and began unloading window sash, the States' photographer was hiding behind a hedge. The picture he got touched off a string of giant firecrackers that blew hundreds of Louisiana politicos out of the public trough.

▶ For the license plate proved that the truck belonged to Louisiana State University—and the half-built house belonged to the wife of a colonel on the governor's staff. Just a drop in the bucket of graft that the political heirs of Huey Long had been passing around for years. But the first case that could be proved—libel-proof, airtight.

That night 64-year-old Jim Crown, the States' fighting editor, sat down on his bed and sobbed—reaction from months without respite in the front-line editorial trenches. "At last we get a break!"

▶ With the fuse once lit, the firecrackers kept popping around the cowering Longsters. Three men committed suicide; more than 200 faced federal and state indictments. It had been a great spree, but thanks to the battling Picayune papers, it was all over.

* * * *

They're in the great American tradition, the dignified old Times-Picayune and the rip-roaring, rough-and-tumble New Orleans States. They have a line behind them that reaches back to Ben Franklin and Sam Adams and Tom Paine.

When Jim Crown strides around his office, dictating editorials at the top of his leather lungs, Greeley and Dana keep step with him. Pulitzer and Nast pound him on the back. And through him William Lloyd Garrison speaks again: "I am in earnest. I will not equivocate; I will not excuse; I will not retreat a single inch; and I will be heard!"

▶ Courage is probably, next to truth, the greatest quality that a newspaper can have. For the world abounds in forces, actions, events, and people before which neither man, nor newspaper, nor the Newsmagazine, can be coldly objective. Silence, indifference, genteel or amiable omissions are not true impartiality—they are just what the forces of corruption or stupidity want, the broth in which they thrive.

▶ TIME has never believed that icy indifference or "pure objectivity" is either possible or desirable in news reporting. Any colorful, humanized story contains something of the mental attitudes and judgments of the men who wrote and edited it.

But over and above this is the sense of heightened responsibility that characterizes these times, as it has other periods of crisis. These days are big with destiny for our country and the world. And the Newsmagazine in this era has a deep and peculiar responsibility. It is, in a sense, the national newspaper; it has the same obligation to all the people of the U. S. that the best dailies feel toward the people of their cities. That obligation means more than finding and condemning the things that are wrong. It also means finding and supporting the things that are right.

▶ It's not so easy as it sounds. The world of right and wrong dresses in shades of gray. The pepper-and-salt of ordinary human nature... the protective coloration of the rascal... the unprepossessing garments that can hide a clean white motive.

▶ Studying that gray crowd-picture, penetrating its disguises, throwing a searchlight here and an X-ray there, is part of TIME's job. TIME queries its reporters and correspondents again and again: "What's behind this? Who's behind it? Give us the background." TIME listens to people—all kinds of people, with all kinds of causes and crusades—balances their ideas against events, against knowledge, horse sense, and plain old American morals.

And sometimes when every possible scrap of fact, every line of expert and inexpert opinion is on the table, TIME editors still miss the last train home, trying to decide what's right, who's right, and how to let the people know it.

▶ Judgments arrived at this way are not infallible, for nothing human is. But they are genuinely responsible. Essential to people who share TIME's attitudes—stimulating to people who don't. And backed by the courage of conviction.

This is one of a series of advertisements in which the Editors of TIME hope to give all the readers of this newspaper a clearer picture of the world of news-gathering, news-writing, and news-reading—and the part TIME plays in helping you to grasp, measure, and use the history of your lifetime as you live the story of your life.

Third-Term Resolution?

It may be impossible to restrain political-minded legislators who are determined to raise the third-term issue in the Senate. But responsible members of that body might at least reflect upon the futility and impropriety of passing an anti-third-term resolution.

The business of Congress is to enact national legislation and not to nominate or to prevent the nomination of candidates for the Presidency. One may search the Constitution in vain for any grant of power to either the Senate or House to prescribe the number of terms that a President may serve. In the absence of any such power the Senate can best preserve its dignity and prestige by leaving the question of a third term for President Roosevelt to the President himself, the Democratic Party and the American people.

In 1928 the Senate went out of its way to pass a resolution aimed at President Coolidge, even though he probably had no intention of seeking a second Presidential nomination. That move was obviously inspired by politics. It drew support only from Democrats and insurgent Republicans. Now the support for an anti-third-term resolution is coming from Republicans and dissident Democrats.

If such a resolution is pushed to a vote, its chief effect will be to stultify the veteran Senators who recorded their votes 12 years ago. Every one knows that such a resolution would be an expression of partisanship rather than principle. It would not necessarily mean that its supporters favor adherence to the two-term tradition under any and all circumstances, but only that they do not want President Roosevelt in the White House for four additional years.

Of course, a Senate resolution does not become a law. It is merely an expression of sentiment on the part of individuals who happen to be serving as national legislators. There seems to be no question that the Senate lowers its prestige when it chooses this method of entering into a strictly political controversy.

No doubt some members of the Senate are sincerely convinced that no President under any circumstances should be allowed to remain in the White House more than eight years. The logical course for them to take is to sponsor a constitutional amendment forbidding third terms. Much can be said both for and against such an amendment, but discussion of the issue on this basis would at least have a ring of sincerity that is lacking in anti-third-term resolution movement.

The two-term tradition appears to have a strong hold upon the American people. It rests on the sound belief that no individual is indispensable in a democracy. Leaders who covet continued popular esteem and goodwill in this country must not even create a suspicion that they would like to perpetuate their power indefinitely. They have an obligation to abide by the spirit as well as the letter of American democracy. If any leader forgets this obligation, he exposes himself to severe discipline at the hands of the electorate.

Congress would do well to recognize, however, that this is a question for the people to decide. Opponents of the Administration have complained bitterly when the President has encroached upon the powers of Congress. That in itself should induce them to think twice when they are tempted to indulge in legislative interference with the free choice of a Chief Executive.

Asking Too Much

It is customary for Government departments to request larger appropriations than they have any hope of receiving. By such means they attempt to protect themselves against the effects of anticipated cuts in their estimates. Similarly economy advocates often demand larger reductions in expenditures than they have any expectation of securing.

It is probably good tactics for organizations such as the National Economy League to set a goal of achievement which is not immediately attainable. But in its latest program the league appears to have gone much too far beyond the limits of the politically feasible. Almost anybody could outline a budget-balancing plan, if he felt at liberty to cut estimates as indiscriminately as the league has done.

The constructive budget balancers know perfectly well that progress can be achieved only by degrees. It cannot be achieved by demanding reductions totaling $1,745,000,000, entailing drastic cuts in outlays for relief, for public works and for agriculture.

To advance such a program at a time when Congress is struggling to effect modest economies in the face of pressure to spend more shows poor judgment. The best way to promote the cause of economy is to support and encourage those members of Congress who are not merely talking economy but are also trying to make headway against the spenders. It is a waste of time and energy to present plans for quick budget-balancing that Congress will simply ignore.

Two Cents For Finland

Today marks the end of the third month of the Russian invasion of Finland. During that period the American people, through individual donations, have contributed to the Finnish cause the equivalent of one uncanceled 2-cent stamp apiece.

A 2-cent stamp may, therefore, logically be regarded as the measure of valuation which the average American places on the preservation of Finnish independence. Of course there has also been a great chorus of praise for the heroic resistance of the Finnish soldiers. There has been a flood of emotional expression and plenty of denunciation of the barbarity of the Russian invasion. But reduced to a cold practical cash basis the per capita American contribution to the support of Finland can be defined at almost precisely 2 cents.

This is not really the fault of the American people. The vast majority of them fully realize that the fate of Finland, as an outpost of democratic principles, is not and cannot be a matter of indifference to this country. The vast majority of Americans, in spite of many urgent demands upon their individual resources, would quickly assess their personal interest in the Finnish cause at many times 2 cents and would gladly pay accordingly. But they have had no direction and no helpful advice from their Government. So they have let the matter slide, during days and hours which may well prove to have been among the most decisive in world history.

The debate on aid for Finland as developed in the House this week has been almost the essence of futility. While the Red armies have steadily smashed forward, through the crumbling Mannerheim Line and down from the north as well, conscientious Congressmen have been trying to ascertain whether the bill to increase the lending authority of the Export-Import Bank is or is not in reality a measure to assist Finland. Those who decided that it is not are to be congratulated. At least they are not deluding themselves into thinking that anything in the legislation approved yesterday will prove of practical value in preserving Scandinavia from becoming a Nazi-Communist satellite.

The fault does not lie with Congress. It rests with the Administration. If the President had shown the courage of his convictions; if Secreary Hull had realized that the preservation of democracies is more vital than the preservation of trade agreements between democracies, a lead for outright help to Finland would have been given. Congress would have followed that lead, the American public would have wholeheartedly indorsed it and the Red flood would have been rolled back from the threshold of Scandinavia, over which it is now lapping.

A reversal of the present trend is still possible. For three months, Finland, with a population about equal to that of North Carolina, has stood off the attacks of a nation whose manpower exceeds that of the United States, Canada, Mexico and Central America combined. The individual superiority of the Finnish democrat over the Russian Communist is such that it has almost balanced the numerical odds of 50 to 1 in Stalin's favor. The character of the defense has demonstrated that with relatively little outside assistance Finland would be able to hold its own.

Some of that essential assistance is now being provided. Sweden, in spite of hostile German pressure, has sent hundreds of volunteers and large quantities of arms and ammunition. Norway has made similar contributions. At the risk of depriving themselves of essential weapons, the British and French governments are shipping to Finland increasing quantities of airplanes and other munitions. The end is not yet and even under terrific punishment the weary, far-flung Finnish lines are holding.

But if they continue to hold—if for the first time in recent years unbridled aggression becomes unprofitable—there will be no credit in the outcome for the United States. Two cents is the valuation which we have individually placed on Finnish independence. At that figure our interest in the issue will be assessed by Moscow and Berlin. And on the basis of that assessment the character of their future policy will be based.

Down To Brass Tax

District officials have good reason to be alarmed over the threat in Congress to exempt thousands of Washingtonians who maintain legal residences in the States from payment of the local income tax. Enactment of any such measure would leave the District with a substantial deficit. Indeed, it would undermine the central part of the tax structure which Congress set up last year.

As Representative Nichols' subcommittee takes up this issue, the most hopeful solution seems to be some arrangement whereby local residents properly taxed by the District will be permitted to maintain their voting privileges in the States without being subjected to a third tax upon their incomes. Should this prove to be impractical, the subcommittee will once more face the task of overhauling the local revenue system set up last year.

The Absentee Voters' Bureau estimates that 68,000 persons living in Washington vote in the States. If that estimate is correct, exemption of this group, or any substantial part of it, from payment of the local income tax would destroy its usefulness. Any levy on income permitting such whosesale exemptions would be too discriminatory to stand. It is unthinkable that Congress would thus penalize disfranchised residents of the Nation's Capital for the benefit of those fortunate enough to retain voting rights in the States.

So Mr. Nichols' committee, at the very beginning of its study, ought to recognize the impracticability of exempting from the District tax those who maintain voting rights in the States. The only reasonable choice is between some means of offsetting State income taxes against the District tax and complete revision of the revenue system which Congress recently enacted for Washington.

The Ohio Elections

Ohio's special election on Tuesday produced gratifying results for the Republican Party. Only one of the two seats in the House of Representatives captured by the G. O. P. represents a net gain for the minority. But this turn-over in the Seventeenth District, coupled with the overwhelming victory of Mrs. Frances P. Bolton in the Twenty-second District, constitutes a notable victory for the Republicans.

In both instances voting was light. Mrs. Bolton received less than two-fifths the number of ballots cast for her husband, the late Chester C. Bolton, in 1938. But the Republican percentage of the total vote shows a substantial increase. In the Seventeenth District J. Harry McGregor turned a Democratic majority of 5,000 votes in 1938 into a Republican majority of 4,500 this week, in spite of the fact that the total vote was halved.

Apparently the current voting represents the minimum strength of the two political organizations. But this in turn indicates that the G. O. P. machine is now more strongly entrenched in Ohio than its rival. So far as the Buckeye State is concerned, the returns sustain the Republican contention that the trend against the New Deal manifested in the 1938 elections is still running. That conclusion is further strengthened by the fact that the issue of the Roosevelt Administration's domestic policies was clearly drawn in the Ohio contests.

The Republicans have good reason to celebrate their victory in two Congressional districts of Ohio. But of course it would be rash to draw definite conclusions from these returns as to what the trend will be in 435 Congressional districts next November.

Education For Cripples

For two years now the Works Progress Administration has come to the rescue of Washington's shut-in children by allocating funds for visiting teachers so these handicapped youngsters may at least receive the benefits of an education. This project was at first approved by the WPA only as a demonstration and later continued on an emergency basis when the Budget Bureau and Congress denied a requested appropriation.

Unless money for this purpose is appropriated in the bill now before Congress, however, more than 200 physically handicapped children will probably be left without any means of education, as the WPA cannot be expected to continue for a third year a job which probably belongs to the Board of Education.

With this fact in mind, a coordinating committee representing 21 local organizations has passed a resolution requesting Congress to allocate $22,400 to carry on this vital work. A similar allowance was approved last year by the Senate only to be later stricken from the District supply bill.

It is strongly to be hoped that this time Congress will recognize the urgency of removing this second handicap from crippled and bed-ridden youngsters. Funds for this purpose could not conceivably be denied under the guise of economy. Condemnation of handicapped boys and girls to ignorance would be dearly paid for, not only by the helpless children, but also by the community as a whole.

Letters To The Editor

The Other Side

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mrs. Ella Twigg is horrified to think that Irish youths are not allowed to go into railway stations and theaters to kill old men, women, and children! Roger Casement was a piker compared to them! What would happen to a couple of Cubans if they killed one old man, two women, and two children in one of our theaters? Those felons killed those people in England—not because they were invading Ireland!

Mrs. Twigg is like a lot of people who never saw Ireland and have read only one side.

Do you know that the six northern counties are the highest educated counties in all Ireland and that they do not want to be free of England? Maybe you have not read of all the Canadians, Australians, New Zealanders, Hindus, and South Africans (many of whom are of Irish descent) that are willing to give their all that England may live. Don't you realize that I, an American, could not have read Mrs. Twigg's letter if it were not written in English?

Picket Lines

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The labor leaders who justify the picketing of an F street business house, where union wages are being paid to members of a rival group, take the ground that they want their members to patronize only those merchants who patronize the particular union doing the picketing.

What is sauce for the goose should be sauce for the gander. The father of a family having a boy coming out of high school, who finds a labor organization saying to his boy, in substance, "Sorry, son, but we are not permitting our members to take on any more apprentices," and who sees that same labor organization ready to picket any firm which permits his boy to work nonunion, might well feel that it was time to put the interests of the members of his own family ahead of groups seeking to establish a monopoly for the "ins" of the crafts, no matter what happens to the "outs."

The public patience is getting slightly frayed with this sort of thing, and it may result in a picket line becoming a valuable asset to the business house against which it is directed.

Would-Be Volunteer

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am a would-be volunteer in the Finnish army, and lest any American labor under the delusion that this Nation is aiding Finland I would like to point out a few facts which I have learned by sad experience. Oceans of crocodile tears have been shed; these are the laws of our great democratic land which owes its own existence to the aid of foreign volunteers.

No American may enlist in the United States in the army of any foreign nation.

No passports are being granted to any country in Europe, unless the applicant can prove business or other urgent reason.

No freighter or steamship captain may take a passenger who has no passport.

Nice vicious little circle, isn't it? We don't ask them to risk their necks or their pocketbooks. We'll pay our own way and take our own chances, signing away our right of appeal to the American Government for the duration of our enlistment if that's all that's bothering them.

Give passports to American citizens who will sign a release of responsibility, in order that Finland may get the sort of help she needs from this country: trained pilots and machine-gunners.

And quickly, for God's sake.

Lighting At Union Station

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: None but the most captious and unreasonable of Traffic Director Van Duzer's critics will fail to concede that, in the matter of the Union Station Plaza, he has at length scored a bull's-eye. Scorning makeshift remedies, or partial solutions, Van Duzer has gone straight to the heart of the difficulty, and has solved the traffic problem by eliminating traffic.

The Plaza is now, for the first time in decades, completely free of wheeled conveyances—and this has been accomplished by the simple and economical expedient of Van Duzer's $50,000 light system (modeled closely after the maze contrivances widely used for experiments with mice in psychological laboratories).

It was master-thinking to apply this solution in front of the Union Station, where thousands of visitors from all over America disembark daily, and where District officials have the best opportunity of exhibiting their skill in handling municipal affairs.

In a few years, and at the cost of a few million dollars, this solution could be applied to every busy intersection in the District, and automobiles could be effectively excluded from the District (where they now seriously hamper pedestrian traffic and confuse the minds of America's statesmen.)

DANA DOTEN.
Washington, Feb. 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: During the last week we have witnessed another bone-headed act of the traffic director, and I use the expression traffic director advisedly because I think Traffic Jammer would be better, in the installation of traffic lights on the Union Station Plaza.

It seems to me that now is the time to let Mr. Van Duzer know that the drivers and pedestrians alike in this city want no more of these expert delusions but some common sense handling of traffic that most anyone with an elementary knowledge of traffic would find comparatively easy.

For some months now, we have been spared the dilemma of nightmares and headaches that beset a driver at Thomas Circle but soon that lightless heaven for drivers will be plastered with do's, don'ts and whatnots which far from making the city safe for someone will make it a headache for everyone. As it is traffic moves very nicely but when those lights are turned on watch out.

Lincoln's Relations With Gen. Halleck

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Fifty years ago the opinion was frequently expressed that the true story of the Civil War would never be told, for the reason that the reputations of many prominent men would thereby be destroyed. The recent flood of Lincoln books is an indication of the revival of interest in the fascinating story of this great conflict.

To students of the military history of this period, Gen. Henry Wager Halleck still remains a very mysterious person. Sadly neglected by historians, he receives only scant mention in the vast literature of the Civil War, although his influence runs through out its entire story.

As the commander of our great armies during this critical period of national crisis, he was generally condemned by contemporaries as being utterly incompetent, and was charged with full responsibility for the repeated disasters that befell the Union armies in the field.

Few men in public life have been made the subject of such personal abuse, unfair criticism and vituperation as was Gen. Halleck. Strange as it may seem, the most outspoken and malignant censure came from members of President Lincoln's own Cabinet. Lincoln, grievously irritated by the attempt to ridicule and besmirch the character and motives of his friend and military adviser, continued to retain him in high command in spite of the incessant clamor for his dismissal.

During Lincoln's four years in Washington, no one was more intimately associated with him than Halleck, yet there exists no written record of this association. It appears very strange, indeed, that historians have never thought it worth while to ask why Lincoln kept Halleck in high command, or to explore the relationship existing between them.

Some day this mystery will be solved. Then will simple justice be done to a man who unselfishly served his country with distinction during a great crisis in our history, and who deserved a far better fate than he received at the hands of his contemporaries and historians in general.

"Simplifies Things"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. W. Campbell Armstrong in his recent letter to The Post has nicely solved the third term problem. His plan is that Mr. Roosevelt shall accept a third term and at the same time promise that he will resign as soon as peace is restored and that in the meantime he will turn the affairs of Government (except foreign relations and national defense) over to the Vice President. It is true that the Constitution prescribes definite functions for the President which he may not legally delegate to anyone else, but why bother about the jolly old Constitution? After all, it is only folklore.

And then there is the American tradition that it is unsafe to give Presidential powers to any man for more than two terms, but why bother about a funny old tradition?

Mr. Armstrong tells us that Mr. Roosevelt can have a third term if he wants it. That simplifies things nicely. All we have to do now is to wait until he tells us what he wants.

The Post Impressionist

"In The Field"

In Washington, people are always talking about "the field." In those big, dry reports "the field" is a big, dry place, full of statistics and not like the towns we lived in before we came to Washington. Big, dry reports leave things out.

Last summer I was working on a line gang, building light lines for Rural Electrification projects. That was all through upper New York, in Cherry Valley, New Berlin, Litchfield Springs and Edmonton. All those places are in New York, and I could prove it if I had a map, a big map.

There were seven in the gang, not counting the big line-truck that carried the tools, dug pole-holes and picked up the poles with its winch.

There was a lot of romance in bringing electricity to out of the way places, but it was never easy. All through that country kids were wishing they were linemen and linemen were wishing they were kids. The confusion was vast, but understandable.

Despite an occasional loud squawk at being shooed away from half-naked electricity, the kids were often more reasonable than their elders. At least they shooed easier.

"Dag nab it," said one elder, "you ain't cuttin' down that chestnut 'cause I have to light matches to milk them cows. You're worse'n the blight."

Since the chestnut would have burned down in the line anyhow, he finally let us chop it down—and into nice pieces for his stove. There were some who said he won the argument. I said so, for one, having been largely instrumental in chopping the embattled farmer his next two years' firewood.

Probably the loudest, if not the clearest, objection ever registered against us came from an agriculturist of undetermined, but probably European, extraction. We never were quite sure what the trouble was. The neighbors said he never got much chance to practice his English because he didn't like people and chased them off his property.

That happened to the group which went to explain to him about REA cooperatives, the neighbors said. From that hint we managed to reconstruct his objection. He kept pointing at the pole in front of his house, which was bare, and then at the one on the next farm which had a transformer and wires leading into the house.

"He wants lights," said the foreman and offered to take it up with the company. It wasn't enough, action was what he wanted. Then the truck driver helpfully mentioned the Great White Father, and we finally got away by saying President Roosevelt loudly several times in a row.

The ones that gave us trouble, though, were unusual. Most people were excited about getting electricity. They would give us apples and stand around asking all sorts of questions. In this way they could often delay the coming of electricity for hours.

Most of the time there would be no lights until the company sent a man around to inspect the wiring. After that the power would be turned into the line.

Sometimes, however, it would be a short spur and the wiring would have all been inspected beforehand. Then the new line could be tapped right into a "hot line." They could just go in and snap on the lights.

An immediate on-the-spot demonstration like that boomed our stock considerably, especially among the younger citizens. Some of them had suspected all along that we were fakers, but the lights stopped them cold. It cost the cowboy and fire-fighting professions a lot of support, too, and virtually assured the country of a supply of linemen for some time to come.

One of our customers fell curiously into a class between the elders and the kids. He was the most enthusiastic. It wasn't a question of electricity being new to him. He had a lot of money and a house in Brooklyn.

His house was at the end of the new line, and it took several days to build out to it. Every few hours, though, he would find some excuse to come and talk to us. In the most offhand manner possible to a good actor he would work around to a casual question about how we were coming along. But as the excitement worked into him he got less and less subtle. "About how long will it take you now?" he would ask.

The last day was too much for him. "How long till you get to my house?" he kept asking. On being promised faithfully for the tenth time that all the wires would be in before night, he got out his station wagon and drove to town. The next time we saw him he was bouncing back over the road with a big refrigerator and a vacuum cleaner in the back of the station wagon. On his second trip he brought a radio, a washer and some smaller gadgets like toasters, waffle irons and desk lamps.

There was a good deal of speculation among the gang about what he could possibly think of on his third trip. He came back with a couple of flood lights, one of which he wanted for the roof, the other to go on a pole in the front yard. He was going to light everything up. That, he told us, would be swell.

At about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, just as Dutch, the first class lineman, was going down the road to tap the new spur into the "hot line," a young disaster befell. It began to rain, and rain hard. Not only was it against our principles to work in the pouring rain, but it is dangerous to work hot wire in the rain. Water conducts electricity.

Dutch went up, though, and spent an hour on top of the pole, being very careful. He said the guy wouldn't sleep all night if he didn't. As it was nobody got much sleep. Our grateful Edison fancier gave us a party in honor of the occasion.

The party took place out on the lawn. Both flood lights were blazing. The radio was playing, the washer was churning (rather pointlessly) and every light in the house was lit.

Completely taken in by the near daylight, the chickens didn't get a wink of sleep until about 1 in the morning.

Fair Enough

The Vanishing Dollar

SOME OF MY COLLEAGUES have been worrying themselves thin over the proposition that a dollar simply vanishes and isn't any more after it has been wagered ten times at a race track where the percentage amounts to a dime. The theory is that the dollar shrinks 10 per cent each time it comes to the post, but I am happy to be able to report that in practice it remains a dollar. I don't know why this is, but, nevertheless, it is, as anyone knows who ever won a bet or knew anyone who did.

The bettor's dollar and the taxpayer's dollar have about the same sort of experience, and somehow manage to come through them whole. Otherwise in some States, such as Illinois, where they have a sales tax, a dollar would be chewed away to nothing in a few minutes. Otherwise, also, on the mutuel horse tracks some people would be paid off in 90-cent and 40-cent and 20-cent dollars, and some of them in nothing-dollars, and you would have not only the most baffling confusion but disorder, contusions and abrasions.

One man would be lucky enough to get back, say, six 80-cent dollars, three 30-centers and one nothing-dollar for an average of 57 cents per dollar, whereas another bloke winning a 10-dollar bet might be paid off in five 20-cent dollars, one dime-dollar and four nothing-dollars for an average of 11 cents per dollar. Anyone can see that this would be bound to cause strife and the repeal of the racing laws.

The theory of wear and tear on the wagered dollar is merely something for guardhouse mathematicians, legislatures and voters to talk about, and it has been chewed like an old shoe in a kennel of pups.

In New York the bookmakers—a noble band of chiselers—organized a lobby to defeat the mutuel proposal and had the nerve to argue so when it was notorious that mutuel tracks paid much higher returns than the New York rings, where the bookmakers had a free, untaxed monopoly on a popular vice.

The fact has been that the bookmakers conspire to regulate prices or odds, mostly downward. To some extent they have been justified in this, because the overhead for a bookmaker is much higher than that for a battery of mutuel machines. An individual bookmaker takes down probably 25 per cent of every dollar bet, but, still, when the bookmaker does pay off he uses valid, undamaged 100-cent dollars. He would be lynched if he didn't.

The question whether it is advisable or, better say, beneficial to a community to permit mutuel betting is a light off a different match. If the community is landlocked, so to speak, and merely bets local money into its own machines, the traffic diminishes and presently amounts to little more than nothing. But Rhode Island, for example, drains money from Boston, Connecticut and New York, and Florida, of course, soaks up cash from everywhere east of the Rockies—much of it stolen or grafted money, incidentally, brought in by the criminal scum of which Mr. J. Edgar Hoover has been muttering from time to time this winter.

BUT NO COMMUNITY, except Monte Carlo, and possibly some minor exceptions that you have in mind, ever contrives to reduce its regular taxes by the amount that it receives from gambling. The Irish amassed a big fund for their hospital and public medical services with their hospitals sweep, of which the United States for a long time was the principal patron, but the revenue came from the outside.

Originally the English bought vast numbers of lottery tickets, but there came an international dispute over the default of interest payments on Irish debts held by the English, and, in retaliation, the English forbade the Irish lottery in their country. I believe they offered the usual moral excuses, but actually they were sore, not pious.

If and when New York gets mutuel betting facilities great will be the revenues therefrom, but the taxpayers will receive no rebate on that account. They ought to, but they won't, and in a year or so everyone will forget all about the naive hope that the wages of sin would ease the load.

I hate to see the people worry unnecessarily, so it is a pleasure to announce with absolute certainty that no matter how many times a dollar has been wagered and trimmed by a dime each time, it remains a dollar-dollar and not a dime-dollar or a nothing-dollar when the winner presents his ticket at the pay window. I hope everyone will feel better now.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Mid-July Convention

IN THIS DEPARTMENT'S opinion the Republicans have a big advantage over the Democrats in convention dates. The G. O. P. will hold its national microphone carnival June 24, when there is a fair chance of comfortable weather, while the Democrats will convene July 15, probably in the middle of a heat wave.

Unless there is a weather upset The Democrats will be competing with the national yen for an ice-cream soda and a cool breeze. A radio blasting the torrid goings-on at a political convention is no bargain on a hot July afternoon or evening.

The Republicans, haranguing in mid-June will get the breaks. The humidity, the mosquitoes and the rush to vacation resorts will not have set in. Taking a convention by radio and newspaper won't be hard. But July 15 . . . say it ain't so, Jim!

By mid-July everybody will be starting a vacation, getting set at the shore cottage or tinkering with an outboard motor. The State of the Nation will seem a trivial concern. Nomination speeches will run a bad third to beach parties, yacht club dances and swimming fetes.

Concern over the future of America will be eclipsed by concern over how to keep red ants out of the pantry.

A keynote speech will be of no consequence compared to the hunt for an ocean breeze. Grave discourses about the budget will be overshadowed in millions of homes by the desire to leap into the fliver and get an "all hot" and a bottle of beer.

The only platform America will be interested in on July 15 will be a diving platform.

The peepul's choice will be nobody except a man who can fix the electric fan, cure a sunburn and know what to do to keep mosquitoes out of the sunporch.

Mr. Farley, for once, you have made a mistake. The country may rebel against the Democratic Party for even subjecting it to a convention in July. You'd better arrange for a Northwest wind. And send over some ice-cream cones.

Aiding Finland

By Mark Sullivan

Study In 'Playing Safe'

LAST WEEK I wrote that Finland needs soldiers, manpower—not necessarily much, yet imperatively some. Reporting the judgment of others, I wrote that Finland needs somewhere between 75,000 and 350,000 soldiers; that with such an addition to her own army, Finland might be able to hold out indefinitely. This judgment, so far as I know, remains tenable.

I wrote further that "the most appropriate immediate source of more soldiers for Finland was Sweden, because, if Finland goes down, Sweden will be next under the guns of Russia. This judgment, too, seems fair, although there are other appropriate sources of soldiers for Finland, especially Britain and France.

But in emphasizing the position of Sweden, in suggesting that Sweden ought to help with an organized armed force, I failed to take account of all her circumstances. Sweden lies next to Finland—but also next to Germany, in the sense that Germany is just across the Baltic. As Sweden must be concerned about Finland, so must she be watchful about Germany.

ABOUT THE RELATION between Sweden and Germany, newspaper dispatches from Europe and other sources of information, give a picture that is complex yet understandable. Apparently Germany does not object to Sweden giving aid to Finland so long as the aid is informal. At least, the fact is that either Sweden as a nation, or the people of Sweden, as individuals and groups, give immense help to Finland in informal ways. About this, already going on for several weeks, Germany seems to make no threats to Sweden.

But it is likewise apparent that the statesmen of Sweden feel it would be extremely dangerous for her, acting formally as a government, to give aid to Finland in the form of an organized army—to take any step which would have the color of making a military alliance with Finland, or of taking up arms against Russia. If Sweden did that, Russia would probably call upon Germany to attack Sweden. And Germany could not readily refuse. Besides, even without request from Russia, Germany would have reasons of her own for descending upon Sweden—Sweden's iron ore is valuable to Germany. Germany could readily attack not only Sweden but Finland.

Hence Swedish statesmen, including King Gustav, feel that her own and Finland's cause is best served by refraining from sending an organized army to Finland, or any other formal act of war. They feel it is best to confine Sweden's help for Finland to what the King called "other ways."

ABOUT THE SOUNDNESS of this judgment, anyone is free to differ. Sweden is in a "spot." She has to choose between two dangers. If Sweden sees Finland fall, Sweden herself is at once under the guns of Russia. But if Sweden sends an army to save Finland, Sweden comes under the guns of Germany. There is, in Sweden and elsewhere, a school of thought which believes her best course would be to send an army to Finland and take the chance of whatever might come. However that may be, it ill becomes America, 3,000 miles away and smugly safe herself, to suggest what Sweden should do.

The informal help that Sweden gives Finland is enormous. When King Gustav called it "not inconsiderable assistance," he achieved a triumph of under-statement. Information from Europe says there has gone to Finland from Sweden, in addition to many volunteer soldiers, $25,000,000 in cash and $70,000,000 in arms and other supplies. That is an immense total. Sweden is a nation of 6,000,000 people. If we, a nation of 130,000,000, gave in proportion, we would send $2,000,000,000.

Actually our help to Finland has been puny. Through the Government Export-Import Bank we have loaned $10,000,000. Just now Congress is authorizing an additional $20,000,000. Aside from our Government, former President Hoover's Finnish Relief Fund has collected some $2,000,000. Other volunteer agencies have collected slighter amounts. Our total, given and in sight, is just about a third what little Sweden has given.

OUR GOVERNMENT stipend has been given only after serious delay and in a spirit of cautious "playing safe." President Roosevelt and Congress each waited for the other to take the initiative and responsibility. When, finally, Mr. Roosevelt made the recommendation to Congress, he did it in a manner of "it's up to you:" "The facts in regard to Finland are just as fully in the possession of every member of Congress as they are in the Executive," he said in his message to Congress. That message was on January 15. And only today is Congress finally voting the loan. Cautiously, in deference to pacifist sentiment in America, we stipulate that the money must not be spent for the arms that Finland desperately needs, it must be for nonmilitary supplies.

We are afraid even to call it a loan to Finland. Nowhere in the bill authorizing the loan does the word "Finland" appear. It is put in the form of an appropriation for the Export-Import Bank. Further to dilute any courage or forthrightness our action may have, we use this $20,000,000 loan to Finland as an excuse for a total appropriation to the Export-Import Bank of $100,000,000, the other $80,000,000 to be loaned by the Administration to other countries in its discretion.

If, as a Government, we feel we must be paltry, we can, as individuals, save our self-respect. The "Finnish Relief Fund, Inc.," headed by Mr. Hoover, will receive and transmit gifts. It's head office is 420 Lexington avenue, New York City. There are local branches in many cities.

The War Cabinet

By Lieut. Comdr. Stephen King-Hall

Special Correspondence of The Post

"Typical British Compromise"

London.

ON FEBRUARY 1 the House of Commons debated a Labor-Party motion to the effect that a minister should be appointed whose duty it would be to plan the economic resources of the country. A government backbench amendment was moved to the effect that all was the best in the best of worlds, but, of course, the government could be relied upon to make the best into something better, if such feat was possible.

Both the Labor-Party motion and the amendment were open to criticism, the first because it set about making a necessary reform in the wrong way, and the second because it suggested a degree of self-satisfaction and complacency with the existing arrangements which would be very dangerous if it were at all widespread.

Speakers from all sides of the house soon discovered that it was quite impossible to discuss the motion without giving consideration to the fundamental issue of the composition of the war cabinet.

IN PREPARATION for this debate, in which I was fortunate enough to catch the speaker's eye, I had made an examination of the experiences of the year 1917, and by researches led to some interesting discoveries.

It will be remembered by those who are old enough to remember that when Mr. Lloyd George overthrew Mr. Asquith and in coalition with Mr. Bonar Law formed a government with a mandate to take any measures necessary for the vigorous prosecution of the war, he formed a war cabinet.

It began with five members, became seven and ended up with six. Its functions were clearly defined in its first report when it is written that it was set up in order "to give that resolute central direction which became more imperative the more the population and resources of the nation had to be organized for a single purpose—the defeat of German militarism." Its members consisted—with one exception—of ministers without portfolio, that is to say, without departmental duties. The exception was Mr. Bonar Law, who was chancellor of the exchequer and led the House of Commons.

In a speech on the 19th of June, 1918, Lord Curzon, himself a member of the war cabinet, said: "The ministers who were appointed to it were deliberately chosen, because for the most part they were without portfolio; they were therefore freed from the general administrative work, and were regarded as more likely to be able to devote their whole energy to the prosecution of the task with which they were charged." The task, of course, to which Lord Curzon was referring was the supreme direction of the war.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS have passed since "the population and resources of the nation had to be organized for a single purpose—the defeat of German militarism"—and we are once more engaged on that formidable task.

Once more we have a war cabinet, but an examination of its structure can not but raise doubts as to whether it is in fact the type of instrument found to be essential in 1917-18. It includes the three defense ministers and their so-called coordinator, Lord Chatfield. It includes the secretary of state for foreign affairs (excluded in the 1917 war cabinet) and the chancellor of the exchequer.

All these people have departments to attend to, and must to some extent, in the case of the services to a large extent, be administrators. It is a universally accepted rule of good organization that it is a fatal error to change a man with the dual responsibility of administration or supply and policy. It is quite useless to expect one brain to deal with the day to day business of administration, and at the same time concern itself with the larger issues of long term policy.

In these circumstances it is impossible to resist the conclusion that the present war cabinet is not in fact a body whose structure enables its members to devote the whole of their time and energy to the general direction of the war in its widest aspects.

IT IS SOMETHING half way between a pesce time cabinet and a proper war cabinet. It is in fact a very typical British compromise and I shall be surprised if in the next few months it does not evolve along the line of becoming less and less a collection of department ministers and more and more an organ composed of men whose exclusive function is the supreme conduct of the war.

For so long as the war remains in its present state of suspended animation, the existing arrangements may be good enough, but I doubt whether they would survive the terrific strains and stresses which will come upon us when and if the great war machines meet in head-on collision.

Ambulance Volunteers Reach French Army Zone

With the French Armies, Feb. 28.—The first detachment of American Ambulance Volunteers has now reached the army zone and soon will be operating in field conditions. Coming from Paris in easy stages a column of 22 motor ambulances, repair shop and cook car now has been assigned to certain units of the French army. Its arrival was marked by informal ceremonies and much curious interest was manifest.

The next few days will be devoted to making contacts and becoming familiar with the area in which it will operate. Personnel and officers have been cordially greeted by the French and from the very minute of arrival cordial relations have been established.

It may be mentioned that the American unit will be located far from the British Ambulance Section with women drivers.

The Great St. Lawrence Project

Premier Hepburn Of Ontario Now Supports It

By G. Raleigh Parkin.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Montreal.

ONCE MORE the St. Lawrence Deep Waterway question is before the Canadian public and a draft treaty is reported to be in the final stages of negotiation. No question of public policy placed before Canadians in the last 20 years has been more difficult for the average citizen to form a clear-cut view on than this issue of whether or not to proceed with the creation of the St. Lawrence Deep Waterway. The scale of the project is so huge, the technical factors involved so intricate, the ultimate cost necessarily somewhat uncertain, and both the immediate and ultimate economic consequences appear so difficult to predict with any accuracy that the ordinary individual is apt to feel helpless, in the face of all these complexities, in forming any definite opinion on its merits.

IT WAS in 1921 that the International Joint Commission recommended that Canada and the United States should negotiate a treaty to enlarge and improve the St. Lawrence waterway. In 1932 a treaty was actually signed, but failed to pass the Senate; while in 1938 when the United States Government again raised the proposal it became impossible for the Canadian government to act because of the hostile attitude then adopted by the Ontario government. It has been the complete change in the Ontario government's attitude in recent months which has been the main factor enabling the Dominion government to resume the negotiations in Washington.

The St. Lawrence Deep Waterway project is both a navigation and a power enterprise. The revival of the project at this time despite the heavy expenditures in which the Dominion government in going to be involved because of the war appears to arise primarily from the desire to proceed with the power enterprise. In addition, the persistent interest of successive Dominion governments, whether Conservative or Liberal, in the project would appear to have been greatly influenced by considerations connected with Western Canada and the desire now, as in the past where railways were concerned, to develop and maintain transcontinental communications to the full.

It is consideration of power requirements which has made Mr. Hepburn, Ontario's premier, change from an attitude of complete hostility to one of support. Demand for electric power has been rising in Ontario as elsewhere in Canada and the United States. This has presented Ontario with a problem which will best be understood if a few general facts regarding Canadian water power resources and Ontario's own position are borne in mind.

Over 90 per cent of Canadian electrical output is derived from water power, which has been the mainspring of industrial progress in the two central provinces of Ontario and Quebec, neither of which has any indigenous coal supplies. Eighty per cent of all hydroelectric power in Canada is generated in Ontario and Quebec, and this development in Canada's two central provinces has been a major factor in investment activity and industrial development. Private enterprise and public ownership have both played important roles in this development. While development in Quebec has been almost entirely by private enterprise, Ontario represents an outstanding example of a development through public ownership, the Hydroelectric Power Commission of Ontario being the most important publicly owned system in Canada and also one of the largest power undertakings in the world.

The existence in one province—Ontario—of a great system of public ownership whose raison d'etre was to distribute power at cost to an ever-widening range of rural and industrial communities while next door was another province—Quebec—where the supply of power to similar types of community was in the hands of private enterprise whose raison d'etre was the making of profit, has not unnaturally provided the basis for much controversy over the hydroelectric question in Canada.

Specifically, Hydro in Ontario has at intervals been faced with the necessity of deciding between alternative sources from which to obtain the new power to meet the rapidly increasing demands of the last 20 years. These alternatives included the development of certain provincial water powers available without involving the Boundary Waters Treaty; the use of international waters in the St. Lawrence system, which involved the Dominion and required negotiations with the United States; the erection of steam plants which meant dependence upon imported coal from the United States; the purchase of power from private enterprise in Quebec; and the development of inter-provincial waters which required negotiations with government and private interests in Quebec.

During the last 15 years Ontario had adopted a policy of long term contracts with private enterprise in Quebec. The Ontario government's later repudiation of these contracts and its subsequent unsuccessful attempt, because of the United States Government's opposition, to secure the right to divert certain Ontario waters into the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence system as a basis for power development, is now a matter of history.

Now, Ontario's Hydro officials, faced once more with the necessity of deciding how they will plan to deal with increasing requirements in the next few years, appear to see in the St. Lawrence development a means of satisfying at the same time their more immediate as well as their longer-term needs. The extra requirement that may arise through war-created industrial activity will not be met by the Deep Waterway development itself because there would be no chance of this being completed for a considerable number of years. But the negotiation of the treaty would certainly carry with it permission for Ontario to proceed with the diversion unsuccessfully suggested in 1937, and this development could be made a source of power at a considerable earlier date.

INDUSTRIAL and commercial interests centering in Montreal remain opposed to the project, seeing in it a threat to the dominant position of Montreal as a seaport and also, perhaps, through further extension of the government-owned hydroelectric system in Ontario, a threat to the future position of the privately-owned power companies in Quebec. Moreover, they take the view that this is no time for the Dominion government to embark on large and possibly uncertain outlays when they have to face the huge additional expenditures likely to be involved by the war, and further, when Canada's two great railways are suffering from difficulties which a new competing form of communication would, in their opinion, only enhance.

JOSEPH ADELARD GODBOUT
Liberal Premier of Quebec.

Montreal Business Interests, However, Remain Opposed

Although Mr. Godbout, the new Liberal premier of Quebec, is on record some years ago as opposed to the project, he has said nothing recently which indicates that he will throw the weight of his government against it. Speaking about a month ago he stated that the Quebec government was closely interested in the matter but implied that it had not as yet been fully or finally consulted as to its attitude.

Western opinion and interests have been vigorously expressed in the columns of the important and influential Winnipeg Free Press. It has stressed the desirability of properly utilizing the immense opportunity that nature has provided in the waterway leading into the heart of the continent; the permanent stimulus to industrial development in Ontario and Quebec and the important advantages that will accrue to Ontario and the Prairie Provinces from the navigation aspects of the enterprise.

CERTAIN BROAD issues cannot be overlooked and appear to be in the Dominion government's mind.

In a recent election broadcast of February 21st, Mr. MacKenzie King reminded Canadians that Canadian unity had been founded at least as much on the basis of east-west transportation as on common sentiment. This statement has a clear bearing on the question of the St. Lawrence Waterway project. The maintenance of Canadian unity has always been a difficult task. Economic and political developments of the last two decades have made its attainment if anything more difficult than previously because the developments of new staple products such as pulp and paper and base metals in the eastern provinces have come into competition with western wheat, the basic staple of the earlier period. This has lessened and will continue to lessen the earlier underlying unity of interest which existed in the Canadian economy.

Therefore some risks of immediate loss, some immediate problems of adjustment, might, a generation hence, appear to be small prices to have paid for the wider political and economic benefits that may by that time have ensued. Certainly a good many individual Canadians are inclined to view the matter in such a light. Such people feel the development is inevitable and certainly desirable ultimately. They believe that there will always be individual interests who will claim that any present time is inopportune and therefore they are inclined, on a larger view, to be willing to take such risks as may exist. There seems some reason to believe that the Dominion government itself may have been influenced by similar broad considerations.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Gloria Vanderbilt Growing Into Lovely Young Creature

New York, Feb. 28.

WHAT sort of a young girl is it whose sixteenth birthday is page one news in her home town? Well, in our case it is Gloria Laura Vanderbilt, who in two years has grown from the usual stringy gawk to a very lovely young creature who goes out with beaux and everything when she gets time off from the Providence school where she is being finished in the conventional way.

Alice Hughes

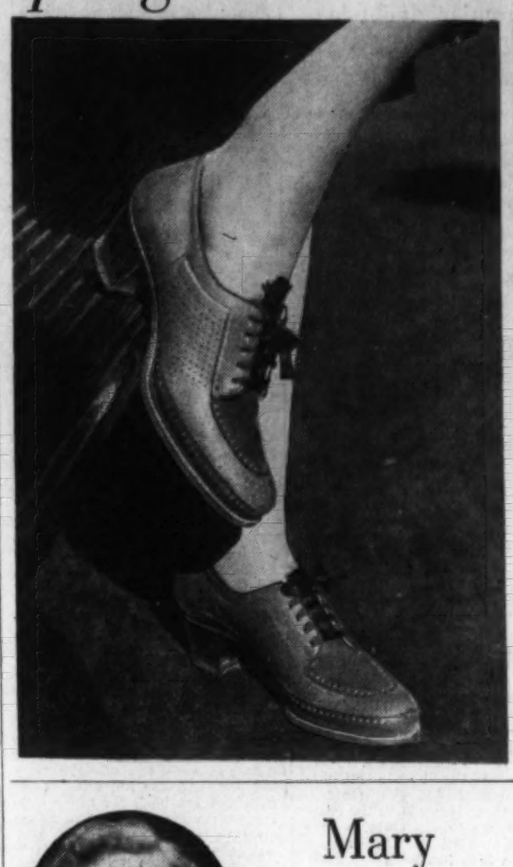
The pitiless spotlight has never spared that kid. Her mother, the beautiful Gloria Morgan, was married to Reginald Vanderbilt at 17, and widowed at 20 when her husband went down with an Atlantic liner. When the child was 10, her mother and her artistic-social aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, staged a regular Pier 6 brawl in court over her custody, with the aunt winning most points. No punches were pulled, and no holds barred in that wretched setto.

Even to this day young Gloria is squired around by a private flatfoot. Some day she'll come into over $4,000,000, from her father's estate, which is no alfalfa in the marriage market these days. So she'll never lack for sleek young fellows hanging around on the chance of a date or so.

No, the little princess will be let off nothing, as the gunfire over her sixteenth birthday now indicates. She may never be as beautiful as her mother, who is now said to be somewhat ailing in California, but as she fills out she shows every prospect of being an extremely pretty girl. The local scribes, pharisees and gossips have already given her the kiss of death by assuring us that she will be the super-debutante of 1942, which will undoubtedly be the case, for she is rich, wears the Vanderbilt label and photographs like a cameraman's dream. So there is little Gloria, drowned in floodlights at 16. It may be nice to be a pretty, rich little girl. I really wouldn't know, personally. But sometimes I have very grave doubts.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—"Till leap year makes it 29," which accounts for this odd day, of course. We've managed to dig up, naturally, a pretty little girl who is actually only 2 years old, although she was born eight years ago. Her name is Dorothy Futterer, and she is naturally pretty sore about the whole thing. Drat the geniuses who thought up the calender, anyway!

Spring Shoe Wardrobe to Do Duty From Morning to Midnight



If every woman were fortunate enough to be able to march into her favorite bootery for an entire new selection of shoes she might choose a wardrobe such as is pictured here. None of these shoes are costly, but all are comfortable and springlike. At left are classic walking oxfords in brown and tan calf—a good groundwork for active country sports. Above (left) is the everyday trotteur in serviceable serge and patent—a reliable suit shoe that fits like a glove. Above (right) is a dramatic afternoon shoe guaranteed to make you feel like Cinderella, as heels and trim are of a new transparent crystal-like product. At right are the perfect all-around evening sandals of gold kid and metallic brocade

Mary Haworth's Mail

Repenting His 20 Years' Vicious Misconduct, Man Asks How to Make Amends to Estranged Family

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As I am going to be in Washington only until the end of the week, I hope you may be able to answer this in your column (which is new and interesting to me) within the next few days. Your column has impressed me so much that I am, for the first time, seeking an impersonal and anonymous analysis of my problem . . . I will try to be brief.

I am a man 45 years old who, until a year ago, had a good, kind, true wife and two fine children—a boy 19 and a girl 17. Looking back over the years with considerably more clarity of vision than I formerly had, I see now that I must have made life hell for all of them. I was unfaithful, abusive, miserly and had an ungovernable temper, which I had never been taught to control. I never made a companion of my children, or any effort to take my wife out socially.

Things went from bad to worse until one day my wife and children moved out of the house. Then, for the first time in my life, I took to drinking to excess. And even while trying to effect a reconciliation with my wife, I attempted to use force and domination instead of affection and understanding. What a complete fool I was! Finally my wife refused (and still refuses) to see me. In the meantime, the children had been sent away to school and she, though ill-equipped, went to work at a small wage. I haven't contributed anything to the support of my wife and children, though my income is ample. I thought I could force them to return for economic reasons. I now realize this was a cruel mistake.

My life is miserable and I am so remorseful that I find it difficult to keep on going. I have given up all hope of winning back my wife, whom I still dearly love, but I would like to redeem myself with my children, if that is possible. But while drinking, I unjustly slandered their mother (without cause), not only to them but to others, until I doubt they will ever forgive me. I can't even forgive myself.

I have stopped drinking but existence is unbearable the way it is now. To look ahead down the years and be alienated from my family is a tragic prospect. I want so earnestly, to make amends and don't know how to begin. Can you tell me?

VISITOR TO WASHINGTON.

Actions, Not Words, Tell Change of Heart

DEAR V. T. W.: Start your practical demonstration of repentant good will toward your family by making a generous property settlement (with no strings attached) upon your wife—the details of which can be worked out with your bank's or attorney's assistance. This contribution should be so devised as to permanently relieve her of the necessity of working for a small wage—leaving her free to work for work's sake, if she so desires. See what can be done, in an unostentatious and impersonal way, toward financing your children's education and maintenance. All this should be done as a form of amends for past miserliness, and not as a pecuniary bid for restoration to favor.

As for your slanderous remarks about your wife, retract them explicitly in writing. Compose a letter to her, carbons of which may be sent to your son and daughter, withdrawing in 1-2-3 order every defamatory charge you have leveled against her blameless character. In forthright notes to your children, to which the carbons are attached, explain (much as you have explained here) your realization of, and desire to atone insofar as possible for, your vicious behavior of past years.

You might even employ in essence many of the phrases you have used here, beginning with the words, "Looking back over the years, etc.," and carrying through to the point where you express the wish to redeem yourself with them, even while relinquishing all hope of winning back their mother. Tell them she is good, kind and true, deserving of your highest praise; that you will always lover her and that she is innocent (as you herewith record) of your every shameful accusation. Be matter of fact rather than maudlin in your representations and be prepared to have your communications either ignored or acknowledged with bitter skepticism. But follow the procedure outlined if you are, indeed, 100 per cent sincere in your wish to expiate your repetitious offenses against decency.

I cannot guarantee reconciliation with your children if such action is taken. But I have observed that nearly-grown sons and daughters are compassionate, for the most part, in weighing parental shortcomings—particularly when parents acknowledge their flagrant misdeeds in a spirit of honest humility and give concrete evidence of an irrevocable decision to behave worthily in future.

Young people are impatiently scornful, however, of wordy promises unsupported by specific and admirable action; and they detest whimpering sentimentality in elders, from whom they expect a spartan's or stoic's calm acceptance of disaster. Bear in mind that this is the sort of performance your wife has been turning in for years; and if you aspire to reclaim a half portion of your children's affection you must begin now to keep pace with her example.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

15 Connecticut Avenue Shops Join in Event; To Aid Blood Bank

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE ALL-AMERICAN theme in fashions will dominate the seventh annual Connecticut avenue style showing, to be held March 11 at the Mayflower Hotel. This show is expected to climax the spectacular pre-Easter parades which have been attracting crowds since 1934.

The 15 shops that will present the newest spring costumes are enthusiastic over the prospects of featuring domestic fashions exclusively. Reliant a bit upon Paris for impetus in the past, the Connecticut Avenue Association this year will present Easter bonnets, ensembles and accessories, all designed, inspired and made in America.

Off to New York Centers

Already Connecticut avenue shop owners are leaving for New York to bring back distinctive designs from such American couturiers as Nettie Rosenstein, Charles Armour, Helen Cookman, Carnegie and Sally Milgrim.

These shops are especially enthusiastic this year, since the net proceeds from the promenade will go to the blood and serum bank of the Children's Hospital. Washington shoppers will be interested in the three style shows in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom (the first at 2 p. m. for which tickets are reserved, and at 5 p. m. and 8 p. m.), because, in recent years, many of them have based their Easter wardrobe plans on these authoritative showings. Those who desire early seatings can purchase tickets now at the DuPont circle branches of the Riggs National Bank and the Hamilton National and at the Seventeenth and H street branch of the Lincoln National Bank.

Debutantes as Mannequins

Quite as interested as the shops themselves are junior league members who rate the Children's Hospital Fund one of their "pet" charities. Popular debutantes of the season will probably serve as promenade mannequins, among them Patricia Uline Hill and Nancy Strong. They will model such outstanding styles as the torso silhouette, the "little boy's coat," the braid-edged twill reefer and suit, the symbol printed silk crepe, the flower tinted pastel woolens—domestic not imported—and the crackle-crisp paper taffeta dance gown. The vigorous tricolor theme in suits, accessories and millinery will add a patriotic touch.

Committee on Arrangements

Chairman—Now girls, the banquet is the fifteenth and we simply must get busy. Suppose we meet at 2 o'clock Saturday——

Mrs. Doodle—Mr. Doodle's always home Saturdays and I can't leave him.

Mrs. Preen—Saturday's a bad day, getting ready for Sunday and everything. Let's put it off until next week.

Chairman—All right—say Monday at 2——

Mrs. Joyner—I have a board meeting Monday afternoon.

Chairman—Well then, Tuesday——

Mrs. Gadd—I'm invited to a very lovely luncheon Tuesday——

Chairman—Couldn't you come after the luncheon?

Mrs. Preen—Wait! I couldn't come Tuesday afternoon. It's my time at the beauty shop.

Chairman—All right, Wednesday——

Mrs. Gadd—I'm going to the matinee Wednesday afternoon.

Chairman—Then we'll say Thursday——

Chorus—That's maid's day off!

Chairman—I hate to wait as long as Friday, but I suppose——

Mrs. Gadd—I'm leaving town Friday for the week-end.

Chairman—Well, we'll simply have to hold the meeting anyway. We can't wait.

Mrs. Doodle—Say, I couldn't come Friday or Saturday. I'm expecting Mr. Doodle's mother.

Chairman—Well, if we wait until the next Monday that leaves us less than two weeks——

Mrs. Joyner—That's the second Monday and I have another board meeting.

Mrs. Godd—I'm not sure now early I'll be back that Monday. Besides' I'll be so worn out——

Chairman—Well, suppose we just start in a week from Tuesday and work like mad——

Mrs. Preen—I'm getting my permanent a week from Tuesday.

Chairman—Couldn't you change the date?

Mrs. Preen—No, you see I have to have time for another shampoo before the banquet.

Chairman—Well, we can't wait a day longer. Suppose we say Tuesday night?

Mrs. Doodle—I never leave Mr. Doodle at nights.

Mrs. Preen—Horace doesn't like for me to be out alone at nights.

Mrs. Joyner—My Daughters of Cleopatra are holding their men's night Tuesday the fifth——

Chairman—Well I'm simply going to set a date for 10 o'clock Wednesday the sixth and everybody will have to come!

Mrs. Joyner—Wait till I look at my year book. I'm pretty sure I have a meeting——

Mrs. Preen—That's my morning to take my violet ray treatment.

Chairman—Al right, then. Now this is final—Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Gad—Say, I'd have to be a little late. That's the day of the Swank luncheon.

Mrs. Doodle—I'd have to get away early. Mr. Doodle always comes home early on Wednesdays.

Mrs. Joyner—I couldn't come in before 4. I have a meeting——

Mrs. Doodle—Well, I'd have to leave at 4——

Mrs. Preen—I'd have to leave at 3:30. I'm pouring tea——

Mrs. Gadd—I know I couldn't get there before 3:30——

Chairman—All right! We'll meet at 4 a. m. Thursday, the 7th! The meeting is adjourned!

Women Take Helm Today At Hecht's

Male Executives Will Step Aside In Leap Year Event

WOMEN in the fashion world is hardly a new story but women in complete charge of a nationally known store is news.

For a number of years the Hecht Co. has been conscious of the executive ability of its women employes as a glance at its employe roster will testify—two-thirds of the personnel being women.

MRS. EHLIS

Perhaps the male executives of this store are conscious of the talents of the 50-odd female executives in responsible positions, for they will, for today—Leap Year Day only—turn over the inner workings of their store to the women themselves. Mr. Charles B. Dulcan, sr., manager of the Hecht store, has entrusted his usual duties for the day to his assistant, Mrs. Mildred Long Ehlis, lock, stock and barrel.

Maxine Morris Moves Up

The normal general merchandise managing duties of the day, usually performed by Harry Davidow, go to Miss Maxine Morris, long known in Washington for her outstanding ready to wear fashion coordination work at the Hecht store, while Miss Violette B. Sutton takes over Bert Sarazan's duties as publicity director.

All executive bachelors in the store have been quizzed on the subject of women in business, in the manner of radio's "Information Please." It was interesting to discover that the men on the whole were sadly lacking in their knowledge of such outstanding women in business as Mrs. Hortense Odlum, president of Bonwit Teller's, and Mary Lewis, former publicity directress of Saks Fifth avenue and Best & Co.

March to Bring Highest Danger From Rickets

With March arriving, the high point in rickets prevalence lies ahead. Rickets is the common nutritional disease of childhood which, if severe, often causes improperly formed bones. It is usually caused by lack of sufficient calcium, phosphorus, and the vitamin D needed to put these minerals to work.

A study at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, shows that rickets hits a peak in March after the long, sun-poor months when children are indoors and do not receive enough vitamin D from sunlight.

"On the basis of recent surveys in American cities," says Dr. Fred O. Tonney in "Vitamin D in Child Health," "rickets, in some degree, is conceded to be present in at least 50 per cent of the urban child population under 2 years of age." Many surveys place the percentage higher.

For many years the only antirachitic agent known was cod liver oil. Now with the coming of fluid and evaporated vitamin D milks, rickets, to a large extent, can be readily prevented.

Glycerine Method Preserves Leaves

To preserve autumn leaves and add a warm decorative touch to your living room, a simple glycerine-gelatin method may be utilized with good results.

First spread the leaves and press them in a pan with alternate layers of fine dry sand which has been heated as hot as the hand can bear. After the sand cools, the leaves are removed, smoothed with a hot iron, dipped in the varnish given below and allowed to dry in the air. The vanish consists of:

Gelatin ..... 11 ounces
Pure glycerine ..... 9 ounces

Soften the gelatin by soaking it in cold water and then dissolve it in the glycerine which has been heated to 212 degrees F.

Weave a Belt And Pocketbook

HOW distinctive that homespun look! Yes, a lovely tricolor bag-and-belt ensemble of soft yarn will add a dashing note to your spring costume. And you weave it easily on a dishcloth foundation.

"It's ultra smart in violet, purple and American Beauty. Or would you like gray, yellow, soft green?

You begin by sewing together white open-mesh dishcloths to make a flat bag 8 inches deep and 9 inches wide. To keep the bag stretched and make weaving easier, force inside it a piece of stiff cardboard slightly larger in size.

Now start at the lower right and weave with violet 4-ply Germantown around both sides of bag. Go over and under the white dishcloth threads which are your warp. Stop 1½ inches from top.

Next, turn the bag, bringing right side to bottom. Beginning at the lower right corner, weave around bag with purple 4-ply Germantown—using only the violet threads as warp. Continue to top. To make an attractive border, turn the bag back to its original position and fill in the 1½ inches with American Beauty 4-ply Germantown, using purple threads as warp. And now line your bag, add a zipper.

Liquor Board 'Wobbles,' Says Witness

ABC Yields To Capitol Pressure Probers Told

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday was accused of "wobbling" in its decisions under Congressional pressure, by Mrs. Leslie Wright, president of the Forest Hill Citizens Association, after the House subcommittee investigating liquor licensing had heard Thomas J. Connors, Georgetown licensee, deny that police inspectors had tried to extort a bribe from him.

Calling attention to the renewal of two decisions in the Leo Rossiter and Ralph A. Lee cases, Mrs. Wright said:

"We citizens are not going to feel safe anymore if the board changes its rulings under Capitol pressure and opens up the city to carpetbaggers from Baltimore."

Mrs. Wright, who also spoke for the Woodrow Wilson Home School Association, asserted that the ABC Board "hasn't the guts to enforce the law as it should be in some cases" and that Thomas E. Lodge, the chairman, "hasn't the courage of his convictions."

Cites Curb Ruling Change

She complained that the board had persuaded the corporation counsel to change a ruling so as to prohibit curb service for the sale of on-sale beer.

As a consequence boys and girls, especially from Chevy Chase, have been driven to "unspeakable places in Maryland" because of the prohibition.

"Our boys and girls don't want to drink unless someone tells them they can't," she added.

Connors denied flatly the testimony of Claude S. Martin, executive secretary of the District Bartenders' Union, last Friday that he had been approached by two police inspectors who asked for money.

"I know nothing of the incident," he said. "The first I heard of it was last Friday when Mr. Martin told me about his testimony."

"Incident Not Discussed"

Connors was asked whether police visited his restaurant last Friday after newspapers had published Martin's testimony. He replied that police frequently visited his place, but that the incident was not discussed.

Upon advice of an attorney for the bartenders union, however, Connors called Lieut. Hartman at police headquarters to deny that he had made any charges against police inspectors.

Charles E. Morganston, an attorney, submitted an amendment to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act proposing that dealers whose licenses are suspended be allowed to appeal to the United States District Court rather than to the commissioners.

Today the subcommittee will hear Dale Crowley, of the Anti-saloon League; Wilbur LeRoe, jr., of the Washington Federation of Churches, and three attorneys, Dave Blanken, Denny Hughes and Ralph Cusick. Chairman Eberharter said that hearings may be extended into the afternoon so that citizens association spokesman may testify.

President, Party Cruise North Into Caribbean

Aboard U. S. S. Lang at Sea, Feb. 28 (AP) (via Wireless).—President Roosevelt cruised northward into the calm Caribbean today, en route home after his business-mixed-with-pleasure voyage through the Panama Canal.

The cruiser Tuscaloosa, bearing the Presidential party, and the escorting destroyers Lang and Jouett, maintained an average speed of 20 knots in passing Nicaragua, Honduras and British Honduras.

The President's immediate destination remained undisclosed.

Hoover Leads Ace G-Men in Hunt; Film and Radio Stars on List; FBI Chief Defended at Capitol

By Stanley Carroll

International News Service Staff Writer

Headed by J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Nation's ace G-men converged on Miami last night to run down the authors of 20 extortion notes addressed to some of the wealthiest families in the country wintering there.

Names of those who have received the threatening letters were being guarded. Several Hollywood and radio luminaries also in Florida are reported to have been the recipients of threatening notes addressed to them in Miami and Palm Beach.

Forty fugitives who have sought refuge in the Miami area during the last two months have been rounded up by G-men on white slave and other Federal charges in their campaign. These include confidence men, bank embezzlers, impersonators and automobile thieves.

Meanwhile, there was defense of Hoover on Capitol Hill following published criticism of his activities.

Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, decrying the "slurs" thrown at Hoover and the G-men because of their Florida activities in rounding up white slavers, said:

"Mr. Hoover has been the most effective agent in fighting crime that this Nation has known. If he thinks that his presence is necessary in Florida at a time when the wealthiest people in the country are flocking there for their winter vacations, I abide fully by his judgment, which has proven so correct for such a long time."

Senator Townsend (Republican), of Delaware, told International News Service:

"I have implicit confidence in Mr. Hoover and believe that he should be at the seat of any trouble which has developed or might develop."

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, deplored efforts to depict Hoover in the role of a winter vacationist. He said:

"Time and again some people have criticized Mr. Hoover because he goes North, East, South and West. Right now, I think it is his job to be in Florida where many of the wealthiest people of the country are concentrated, and gangsters have been congregating."

Of reports that Hoover was spending a "fabulous amount" for residence in Florida during his anti-crime campaign, Justice Department officials said Hoover receives only $5 per diem expenses while he is away from his office.

$500,000 Suit Filed Against Drivers' Union

Pickets Made Base For D. C. Company's Unique Libel Action

A local teamsters' union yesterday was the target of a new legal weapon, a libel suit based on a picket line placard. The suit was a $500,000 damage action filed in District Court by the Consolidated Terminal Corporation, local ice manufacturers.

Labor attorneys here said it was the first instance they recalled when a picket's placard had been made a direct cause for a libel suit against a labor union.

In addition to the placards, the suit charged that the union had libeled the company in a postcard, alleged to have been circulated among the firm's customers, and also declared that the union and four of its officers had conspired to restrain trade.

Officers Named In Suit

Named as defendants were Local 639 of the Drivers, Chauffeurs and Helpers Union, an affiliate of the Teamsters Joint Council No. 55, and also an affiliate of the A. F. of L.; and the local's officers, Charles Bell, president; Samuel Welch, vice president; L. A. Trainham, secretary, and Stuart M. Keyser.

The union local, with Bell, Keyser and Trainham, and two other officials were indicted here last fall on the charge of conspiracy to tie up local building during a jurisdictional dispute with the engineers' union. A demurrer to the indictment is pending.

Yesterday's suit asked $100,000 on each of two libel counts, and $100,000 judgment with triple damages, for alleged conspiracy in restraint of trade.

Employes Never Unionized

The company, a Delaware corporation with offices at Eleventh and E streets southwest, and several plants in nearby Maryland and Virginia, declared that its employes had never been unionized, that it had enjoyed "cordial, peaceful and friendly relations with its employes."

Early in January, the suit said, the union mailed to customers of the company a postcard stating that the company "refuses to recognize or deal with organized labor," and that the union "would greatly appreciate your co-operation with our efforts to secure union conditions in the said company."

Later, it was charged, the union placed out pickets with placards saying "Terminal Ice Unfair to Drivers', Chauffeurs', Helpers' Local Union 639."

The ice company said both statements were "malicious libel."

The suit was filed by Morris W. Bennett, vice president and general manager of the firm, through Attorneys William E. Leahy and William J. Hughes.

Hodgkin's Disease Studied for Clew to Cause of Cancer

By Gerald G. Gross

Post Staff Writer

Just as the police frequently track down a hoodlum because he may lead them, perhaps unwittingly, to a notorious killer, so the National Cancer Institute is now attempting to arrest cancer by "pinning something" on Hodgkin's disease.

First described about a century ago by the Englishman, Dr. Thomas Hodgkin, the affliction is as mystifying as cancer. It takes less than 2,000 lives a year in this country, compared with cancer's tens of thousands of victims.

Dr. Newton E. Wayson, who has been assigned by the National Cancer Institute to make an intensive study of Hodgkin's disease, yesterday described its characteristics, expressing the conviction that when its cause is discovered a great step will have been taken toward solution of the cancer riddle, and perhaps leukemia as well.

Common Among Young

Whereas cancer generally strikes in later life, Hodgkin's disease and leukemia are most common among children and young adults. In the latter, death is usually a matter of weeks, but in Hodgkin's disease, which is marked by swelling of the lymph nodes, the patient may live from three to ten years or longer after recognition of the case, Dr. Wayson said.

One of the few things known about cancer is that it is definitely a neoplasm, or new tissue, morbid in character. But in Hodgkin's disease, one school believes it to be neoplastic while another is equally certain it is an infection of normal tissue.

"Two competent doctors may examine a lymphatic specimen excised from a Hodgkin's patient," said Dr. Wayson, "and come to conflicting conclusions, each being able to justify them. One is sure he is looking at an infection caused by some micro-organism while the other is equally certain that what he sees through the microscope is a neoplasm."

In his investigations, Dr. Wayson is ever on the lookout for the presence of bacteria in the lymphatic tissue specimens under examination. If it can be determined, over a long period of time, that germs of any certain type are to be found in great quantities in an appreciable number of these specimens, an important stride will have been taken in the conquest of Hodgkin's disease—and probably cancer, too.

Cases Infrequent

To date, said Dr. Wayson, nothing conclusive, either affirmatively or negatively, has been achieved. He is confident, however, that every crumb of knowledge picked up about this controversial affliction named for an English physician will be of value in cancer research.

For its own sake, Hodgkin's disease is hardly worth such an intensive inquiry as he is now conducting at the National Institute of Health, said Dr. Wayson, explaining that its death rate is only a little more than 1 per 100,000 population and cases occur but infrequently.

It is interesting to note, however, he added, that both the case and death rates jumped about 30 per cent between 1930 and 1936. This may not necessarily indicate increasing prevalence, he pointed out, but may be due at least in part to diagnostic improvement.

Victims of the disease suffer enlargement of the lymphatic glands in the neck and other parts of the body. By interfering mechanically with the normal functions of the spleen, heart, kidneys or other organs, these swellings do their worst damage.

Dr. Clifford Jope Declines Teaching Place in Texas

Second rejection of an offer of the professorship of Christian ministry at Texas Christian University, Fort Worth, was revealed here yesterday by Dr. Clifford H. Jope, pastor of Ninth Street Christian Church, Ninth and D streets northeast.

A desire to continue in the preaching field was given as the reason for Dr. Jope's rejection.

With a congregational membership of 1,622, the Ninth Street Church is the largest of its denomination on the Atlantic Seaboard.

Patricia Hurley Is Honor Guest At Dinner Party Given by Lewises

Sir Willmott and His Lady Entertain For Debutante Bride-to-Be, Who Has Chosen April 12 for Wedding Date

Several dinners—the Capital's favorite form of Lenten diversion—made last evening a gay one for officials, visiting foreigners, and a bride-to-be.

Miss Patricia Hurley, daughter of the former Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick Hurley, was feted at a small dinner given by Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis at their home on Massachusetts avenue. Miss Hurley has, we hear, selected April 12 as the date of her wedding to Dr. Henry B. Gwynn, and the popular debutante and her fiance will doubtless be the center of dozens of parties from now until their marriage.

There were ten in last evening's group, all of them friends of the young couple. They included the Misses Stellita Stapleton, Edith Wright, Achsah Dorsey and Rufus Johnson, Lyle O'Rourke and Lloyd Embrick.

Brookes, Blisses Give Dinners

Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin and Senator and Mrs. Robert Taft were the ranking guests at the pleasant dinner given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Brooke at their red brick house on N street in Georgetown. Others in the company were Mr. and Mrs. William Castle, Capt. and Mrs. Paul Bastedo, Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Charles Stone, daughter of the hosts, Mrs. George Scott, of Richmond, and Walter Jacob, of New York, who is spending some time here on work for the Government. He is staying at the Anchorage.

Mrs. Stone, who has been visiting her parents for the last week, will return tonight to her home in New York. She will stop in Annapolis en route to dine with Commander and Mrs. Jerauld Wright at their home in the Navy Yard.

Mrs. Brooke will go to New York the middle of next month to take in the National Garden Show and to attend the meeting of the National Board of Girl Scouts, in which she has been active for a number of years.

Beautiful Dumbarton Oaks in Georgetown was the scene of a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss. They entertained in honor of a Finnish friend of theirs who is passing through Washington, and among the guests were the Chief of Staff of the Army and Mrs. George Marshall.

The Scarlett-Rhett era was not "gone with the wind" in the Fort Myer hop room last evening when Miss Ruth Ellen Patton, daughter of the Commandant and Mrs. George S. Patton, gave a dance with the guests wearing costumes of that time. Bat wing collars, hooped skirts and checkered vests lent an antebellum atmosphere to the austere hop room, and the guests danced until a late hour. Miss Patton was hostess at dinner beforehand.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Downs were also hosts at dinner last evening, entertaining at Downscrest. Those present included Mr. and Mrs. James L. Houghteling and Mrs. Donald McPherson, of Chicago, who is visiting the Houghtelings.

Luncheons Dot Social Calendar

Several agreeable luncheon parties added to yesterday's gayety. Mrs. Thurman Arnold, wife of the Assistant Attorney General, entertained a small group in honor of Mrs. Curtice Hitchcock, wife of the well known publisher of the firm of Reynal & Hitchcock. The visitor is the daughter of Sir Raymond Unwin, past president of the Royal Institute of British Architects and active in slum clearance projects in England.

Sharing honors with Mrs. Hitchcock was Mrs. Richard Patterson, whose husband served as Assistant Secretary of Commerce until a short time ago.

Mrs. Edgar Goodrich entertained at a luncheon yesterday afternoon at her home on Forrest lane, in Wesley Heights. The house was decked in spring blooms and the hostess received, wearing a smart print frock in mauve and yellow tones. The long table was covered with lace and centered by a bouquet of yellow jonquils and purple iris.

Guests included Mrs. D. Worth Clark, wife of the Senator from Idaho, who just returned yesterday morning from Tulsa, Okla., where she visited her parents. Others there were Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. Francis Winslow, Mrs. DeWitt Wing, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. Bulkley Griffin, Mrs. Raymond Clapper and Mrs. Brice Tolle.

Admiral Lais Entertains 200 At Reception

Italian Naval Attache Gives First Affair; Daughter Is Hostess

Entertaining at his first reception since his arrival, the new Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy, Admiral Alberto Lais, was host yesterday afternoon to some 200 guests in the East Room of the Hotel Mayflower.

Looking extremely chic was Miss Edna Lais, who is acting as hostess for her father until Signora Lais arrives from Italy. Miss Lais, who yesterday wore a chocolate-brown crepe frock cut on simple lines, and a corsage of gardenias, recently arrived from Boston, where she was in school. Signora Lais, who is the former Miss Gertrude Evans, of New York City, will arrive in the spring.

Capt. Cugia Attends; De la Torre Assists

The genial host had arranged a lavish buffet. The table was centered by bright spring flowers, snapdragons, pussywillow and carnations. Helping things to run smoothly was the Assistant Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy, Lieut. Filo de la Torre, and among those attending the party was the retiring attache, Capt. Don Umberto Cugia, who will sail shortly for Rome.

Pettengills Present; Prochniks Guests

The Italian Ambassador and Princess Calonna, she smart in black, were there, as were Admiral and Mrs. George Pettengill and Gen. and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb. Mrs. Pettengill was garbed in all red. Others there included the Naval Attache of the German Embassy and Frau Whitthoft Emden, she wearing a navy ensemble; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik and Admiral and Mrs. Richard F. Field, who spent many years in Rome when Admiral Field was Naval Attache.

Others included Admiral and Mrs. Chester Nimitz, the Naval Attache of the Brazilian Embassy and Senhora de Araujo, Admiral and Mrs. Chester Nimitz, Admiral and Mrs. H. F. Leary, Admiral and Mrs. A. W. Johnson, Admiral and Mrs. Henry H. Hough and Admiral and Mrs. S. J. Horn.

Fotitches to Give Dinner Tonight For 22 Guests

The Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch will give a dinner for 22 tonight at the legation on Sixteenth street. Ranking guests will be the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz and the British Ambassador, Lord Lothian.

Mme. Fotitch has discontinued for the season the informal "at homes" which she has been giving.

Mrs. Ralph William Close, wife of the South American Minister, who has been ill, will not be "at home" tomorrow.

"Won't You Come Into My Parlor— For a Cup of China Tea?"

Mrs. Brien McMahon (left) and Mrs. Verne Simmons practice up on their best party phrases, for they will both be hostesses at a tea to be given at the Congressional Country Club on Sunday. Mrs. Simmons' husband is chairman of the reception. Mrs. McMahon and her husband, the former Assistant Attorney General, have just returned from their honeymoon in Mexico

Mrs. Friendly Wed in N. Y.

Mrs. Clark Howell, sr., of Atlanta, has announced the marriage of her daughter, Mrs. Nancy Carr Friendly, of Warrenton, Va., to Franklin Webster Dorman, son of Mrs. Dorman and the late Dr. F. A. Dorman, of New York.

The ceremony took place in New York yesterday at the apartment of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Mattes. Only members of the families, including the bride's two children, were present. The ceremony was performed at 4 o'clock, after which the couple left for Miami. From there they will fly to Nassau for a honeymoon.

Mr. Dorman has large woolen mills in Parsons, W. Va., and maintains offices in New York. It is understood that on their return from their wedding trip the couple will live for a while in the Warrenton house Mrs. Friendly has leased, moving in the spring to Woodburn, the old Keith estate on the edge of town, which she owns. Through her mother, Mrs. Friendly is related to the Cannons of North Carolina, whose cotton mills are famous throughout the South.

Mrs. Massingale Gives a Luncheon

Mrs. Sam Massingale, wife of Representative Massingale, entertained at luncheon yesterday for wives of members of the Oklahoma delegation in Congress and several other friends.

The Oklahomans present were Mrs. Elmer Thomas, Mrs. Josh Lee, Mrs. Wilburn Cartwright, Mrs. Jed Johnson, Mrs. Will Rogers, Mrs. Wesley Disney, Mrs. Jack Nichols, Mrs. Phil Ferguson, Mrs. S. Mike Munroney, and Mrs. Lyle Boren.

Others present were Mrs. U. S. Guyer, Mrs. Buell Snyder, Mrs. Aaron Ford, Mrs. Preston B. McGoodwin, Mrs. Paul Walker, Mrs. Russell Brown, Mrs. Frank Boykin, Mrs. T. P. Gore, Mrs. W. W. Blackney, Mrs. Samuel Wilder King, Mrs. Daniel A. McDugal, Mrs. Malcolm Tarver, Mrs. M. A. Ronjue, Mrs. J. Hardin Peterson, Mrs. Nat Patton, Mrs. J. S. Buchanan, sr., Mrs. J. S. Buchanan, jr., Mrs. Harry Bond, Mrs. Mansur Stewart, Miss Malvina Stephenson, Mrs. James Hugh Nelson.

Mrs. Joseph Byrns Visiting Washington

Mrs. Joseph W. Byrns, of Nashville, Tenn., widow of Speaker Byrns, is here for part of the spring season.

She is staying at the Mayflower where her brother-in-law, John Byrns, and his wife have occupied an apartment for the past month.

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

Society Gossip Columnist of France 300 Years Ago Set Pace for Moderns

IN THESE DAYS of gossip columns and candid camera shots, when members of cafe society trample each other to get within radius of Jerome Zerbe's flash bulb, or Cholly Knickerbocker's vision, it is interesting to reflect that one of the best gossip writers of all time flourished 300 years ago. This purveyor of news was Mme. de Sevigne, who, in letters to her absent daughter, described Paris life at such length that her correspondence now fills seven large volumes.

Not content with describing only brilliant parties and court life, the seventeenth century grande dame wrote entertainingly of recipes, costumes, and even trials for husband poisonings in which several of her celebrated acquaintances found themselves involved.

The first of the gossip writers tells at length how one of these ladies was burned at the stake for certain "crimes and impiety." After an account of the execution she says: "One of the judges, to whom my son happened to mention his surprise at persons being burnt alived in a slow fire, made answer, 'My dear sir, there are some indulgences granted to the women in favor of their sex.' 'How, pray sir?' Are they strangled?' 'No, sir, they are covered with faggots, and the executioner tears off their heads with iron hooks.' So you see, my dear child, this is not so dreadful as we have been told it was."

TURNING TO more cheerful subjects, Mme. de Sevigne describes a suit worn by Prince de Conti at his wedding to Mlle. de Blois. "It was embroidered with diamonds of an immense size, in the pattern of black velvet figures, on a straw colored ground. It is sad the ground had but an indifferent effect, and that Mme. de Langeron, who is the soul of all the dresses at the Conde Mansion, fell sick in consequence. In fact, these are the things which admit of no consolation . . . The lining of the Prince de Conti's coat was black satin, studded with diamonds. This is all I know of the matter. I will tell you what I can learn in the evening."

Heels flourished up high circles even in the seventeenth century, evidently, for Mme. de Sevigne writes her absent daughter of "poor Bertillac," who it seems had fallen madly in love with "the insensible C."

"He witnessed the rising flame, and saw that she used no effort to suppress it. He lost not a moment, but came at once to the point and caused her to pawn her jewels to enable him to hold out a little longer at cards. He was seen to come to Mme. de Quintin's with a thousand louis d'ors, which he chinked all the way; his extreme gratitude compelled him to tell where and how he had obtained them. This conduct has so sensibly affected La Bertillac that she has become, as formerly, stupid with surprise; so that, her blood and spirits being perfectly stagnated, she is now actually bloated and gangrened, and I may say at death's door."

DESCRIBING a seventeenth century soiree, Mme. de Sevigne tells of being invited to sup in a garden with a party which included La Rochefoucauld. "There were waterworks, bowers, terraces, six hautboys in one corner, six violins in another, the most melodius flutes, a supper which seemed to be prepared by enchantment, an admirable bass-viol and a resplendent moon."

HURTLING BACK to the twentieth century, we find that: Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, of New York, will extend her stay here to the end of the week. She came down for the Polish Ambassador's party on Tuesday for pianist Rubinstein . . . Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis will give a dinner party March 7 . . . Mrs. Marshall Exnicios has asked friends in for cocktails tomorrow in honor of Mrs. George Pulver. The latter is here from Southern Pines for a visit . . . Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Angell, of New York, are among the Mont Tremblant fans . . . They have gone skiing there.

Grayson-Harrison Nuptials Set for Saturday at Cathedral

Canon Lucas to Perform Ceremony; Quiet Breakfast at Eustis Home Will Precede Honeymoon

Mrs. Cary Grayson and George L. Harrison, president of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, will be married on Saturday at 12:30 in the Little Sanctuary of the National Cathedral. A breakfast will follow at the home of Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, of Georgetown.

The ceremony and party afterwards will be attended only by intimate friends and relatives. After a honeymoon, Mr. Harrison and his bride are expected to divide their time between his home in New York and Mrs. Grayson's farm in Upperville, Va.

The Rev. Albert M. Lucas, headmaster of St. Alban's School for Boys, and a canon of the cathedral, will officiate at the ceremony. The couple obtained a license on Tuesday.

The marriage is of great interest to Capital society, in which Mrs. Grayson has taken an active part for 25 years. This winter, she has kept regular hours at the Red Cross. William Grayson, her youngest son, now at the University of the South at Sewannee, and the two older boys, James Gordon and Cary, jr., at Yale, will attend the ceremony.

Mr. Harrison has been associated with the Federal Reserve System since 1914 and became president of the New York Bank in 1936. He is a member of the central committee of the American Red Cross.

Miss Clarke Buys House In Georgetown

New Orleans Native Driven From London By European War

Miss Edith Clarke, one of the many Americans driven by the war from England, has decided to settle in Washington and has purchased the handsome old house at 3265 N street in Georgetown.

A native of New Orleans, Miss Clarke has lived in London for the past few years in a house where Charles Dickens wrote "David Copperfield." Since her return she has been making her headquarters at the Sulgrave Club in Washington.

Her new house is in the block of residences built in 1780 and known as Stoddard's Row. It has seven fireplaces and the original and beautiful mantlepieces. Residents of the same row include Representative and Mrs. James Wadsworth, Mr. and Mrs. E. Cortland Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Howland Chase and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Louchheim, who leased the home which Mrs. McCook Knox bought and did over several years ago.

Miss Clarke is at present visiting friends in New Orleans, but will return in several weeks to supervise the restoration of her house. She will stay at the Sulgrave Club until it is ready.

Mrs. Meredith Ill With 'Flu

Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith, ill at her residence here with a bad case of 'flu, has canceled her social engagements.

With her for a visit is her daughter, Mrs. F. O. Bohen, of Des Moines, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Horton, of Des Moines who have been house guests of Mrs. Meredith, have returned to their home. Mr. Horton is president of the First National Bank of Des Moines and has been attending a bankers' meeting in New York.

Can't Ignore the War, Mrs. Morgenthau Says

B'rai B'rith Auxiliary Told Conflict Should Not Be Dismissed Here With 'It's None of Our Business'

By Jessie Ash Arndt
Post Club Editor

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, addressing members of the Women's Auxiliary of B'nai B'rith at their rainbow tea yesterday afternoon, declared people of this country could not ignore the war in Europe.

"We must make it our business in two ways," she declared. "First, the more obvious way of doing all we can, of course, within the limits of our neutrality to help those abroad who have been hurt, physically, economically, morally and spiritually. Second, we must struggle here in the United States, day in and day out, to make this democracy of ours so strong—so strong through the freedom of the individual, through his opportunity to earn a decent living, to live a decent life, and to worship God in his own way—that here in our country we may continue to live at peace with out fellowmen."

"I am happy to know what B'nai B'rith has done to meet problems here and, with the Red Cross and others, to help a war-torn world," she said.

"When people say this war is no business of ours, frankly I haven't the slightest notion what they can be talking about. No business of ours—an amazing phrase. You and I would not be here today, our free democracy would not exist unless our forbears had cared enough about keeping alive those concepts of liberty and freedom and the dignity of the individual—those concepts which today are so sorely threatened. Yet some can say this is no business of ours. Of course, it's our business, not in a militaristic way, but in the way you, of B'nai B'rith, Miss Mabel Boardman and the Red Cross, the Friends Association and the countless refugee organizations see it.

"Tragic though it is to have people uprooted from homesteads, driven hither and yon, husbands torn from wives, and children from their parents, that, to me, is not the greatest tragedy. The greatest tragedy is that many of us do not yet seem to realize that the sinister forces unleashed in the world today are forces against the foundation of religion itself. This is a war to wipe out Christianity. Make no mistake of that. We Jews and Gentiles alike, believing in the Jewish-Christian concept of the dignity of the human being as an individual before God and his fellow man, must make this war our business."

Miss Boardman, who was also a guest of honor at the tea, given in the Chinese room of the Mayflower Hotel, also spoke briefly. She expressed appreciation for the cooperation of the B'nai B'rith with the Red Cross. The local branch has supplied 300 blankets for refugees and 35,000 women of the organization throughout the country, have contributed to the blanket fund.

Other honor guests included Mrs. Nathan Straus, Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith, the Misses Solomon and Phil Regan, who contributed a group of songs to the program.

The president, Mrs. Herman Hertzberg, presided, and outlined the work of the organization. Mrs. Louis Ottenberg offered the opening prayer; Mrs. David Kushner presented dramatic monologue "Wishes;" there were piano solos by Arsenio Raylon, and Rabbi Ely Pilchek talked on "Hillel House" at Maryland University.

The chairman of the tea, Mrs. Morris Gewirz, was assisted by Mrs. H. D. Shapiro, Mrs. Alvin Newmyer, Mrs. Jack Blau, Mrs. Maurice Bisgyer, Mrs. Milton Strausberger, Mrs. Al Tempchin, Mrs. Harry A. Badt, Mrs. Bea Brill, Mrs. Herbt Diamond, Mrs. Maurice Goldberg, Mrs. Philip Rosen, Mrs. Harry Goldman, Mrs. Mensh, Mrs. Ned Bord, Mrs. Samuel Dessoff and Mrs. Harry Douglas, with large committee serving under them.

The tea tables were decorated with forsythia and mimosa and lighted with yellow candles.

R. Henry Norwebs Return to Capital

The newly appointed United States Ambassador to Peru and Mrs. R. Henry Norweb have returned to Washington and will be at the Mayflower until Saturday.

The Norwebs have just arrived from a trip to the Dominican Republic where they completed their packing at the legation where Mr. Norweb served as Minister before his recent appointment.

On Saturday they will leave for their home in Cleveland to do some more packing. They will go on to New York from there, planning to sail on March 22 for Lima, Peru.

Mrs. D. T. Brown Is Reelected By Women's Democratic Club

Organization Holds Annual Services At Wilson's Tomb in Cathedral; Mrs. Hubbard Conducts Memorial

Mrs. D. Tucker Brown was reelected yesterday as president of the Woman's National Democratic Club.

The election took place at the annual meeting, held at the clubhouse, 1526 New Hampshire avenue, yesterday afternoon, following a luncheon and the annual service at the tomb of President Wilson at the National Cathedral.

Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard, former president of the club, conducted the memorial service and placed the wreath on his tomb.

Following the luncheon, polls were open from 2 to 5 at the clubhouse. The business meeting included reports of the officers and chairmen of standing committees.

Officers serving with Mrs. Brown will include Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of Senator Pepper, of Florida, first vice president; Mrs. Mark Bristol, who is now ill but has long been an active member of the club, second vice president; Mrs. Allen Cleveland Phelps, treasurer, all reelected; Miss Elaine Exton, newly elected recording secretary, succeeding Mrs. Joseph Grigsby, who resigned; Mrs. Barton Stone Embry, elected corresponding secretary, succeeding Mrs. Frederick Weigster, whose term has expired.

The board of governors, whose terms will expire in 1944, include Mrs. Brown, Mrs. J. Harry Covington, Mrs. John B. Gordon, Mrs. William Beverly Mason, and Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross. For the term expiring in 1943, Mrs. Morris Sheppard was elected.

It was announced that the tea which was to have been given this Saturday in honor of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, has been postponed until March 9, due to Miss Perkins' absence from the city this week-end.

Miss Servis To Address Arlington Clubs

Venture Group To Join Soroptimists In Dinner Tonight

Miss Martha R. Servis, executive secretary of the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs, tonight will be the guest speaker at a joint dinner meeting of the Arlington County Soroptimist Club and the Arlington County Venture Club, at the Little Tea House in Arlington. Mrs. Pearle W. Sharpe, president of the Arlington County Soroptimist Clubs, will preside, and will install the officers of the Venture Club, which is sponsored by the Soroptimists.

An informal reception for Miss Servis will be held from 6 to 7.

Miss Viola Almony, director of the South Atlantic region of the American Federation, will be present, as well as representatives of the Baltimore, Alexandria, Washington, Montgomery County, Westminster and Prince Georges County clubs.

The officers of the Venture Club to be installed are Miss Betty Brown, president; Miss Francis Grainger, vice president; Miss Marie Jensen, secretary, and Miss Catherine Sheehan, treasurer.

Mrs. Helen R. Sharpe, of Arlington County, will be soloist, accompanied by Mrs. Martha Thompson Hunton, and Miss Betsy Fisher, of the Washington Club, will play for the club singing.

Mrs. Katharine Winston is chairman of the program committee, assisted by Miss Gertrude Crocker, Miss Vera Conrad and Mrs. Kathleen Clarke.

There will be a tea in honor of Miss Servis at the home of Mrs. Winston, 3809 Fourth street north, Arlington, from 4 to 5:30 this afternoon.

Yesterday, she was honor guest at the luncheon meeting of the Washington Soroptimists at the Willard Hotel. She spoke briefly, telling of the steady growth of the organization, which now has 122 clubs in America and 120 in other countries.

Miss Mary Burke, president of the club, presided, and Elinor Lee, program chairman, presented Mme. Rousseau, who talked on character analysis according to the signs of the zodiac.

CLARENCE PHILLIPS, bursar for the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, yesterday afternoon presented an illustrated lecture, "New Pictures of Old Virginia," at the fellowship tea of the District branch of the National League of American Pen Women. The program was in charge of the journalism and non-fiction group of the branch with Mrs. Bertha Shanks Chaney and Mrs. Blanche H. Abee as hostesses. Assisting were Miss Elizabeth Aldrich, Phyllis Wright, Roberta Wakefield, and Mrs. Edward R. Seal.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, associate chairman of music, presented Mrs. James Lee Oliver as vocal soloist with Mrs. Warren Grimes, accompanist.

HOME AGAIN—Miss Henrietta C. Malahy, who has been secretary-manager of the Women's City Club for the last six months, leaves today for Cleveland, where she will be director of the food advertising department of the Cleveland News.

Miss Malahy is returning to a position which she held for nine years before coming to Washington. Previous to that she was on the advertising staff for foods of the New York Herald Tribune, Good Housekeeping and Chicago Tribune.

G. O. P. Tea—Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster was guest of honor yesterday at the weekly silver tea of the League of Republican Women. She and Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose received with the club president, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann.

The book review was of William Lyon Phelps Autobiography with Letter, by Mrs. Elizabeth Mewshaw. Pouring were Mrs. James E. Barnes, Mrs. Maurice H. Thatcher, Mrs. Bruce Baird, Mrs. Edson W. Briggs, Mrs. Carl Droop and Miss Daisy Prentice.

Mrs. Briggs had as her guest her sister, Mrs. Arthur W. Dew. Among other guests were Mrs. Bruce Barton, Mrs. John Taber, Mrs. Clarence Hancock, Mrs. Virginia White Speel, Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, Mrs. Strickland Gillilan, Mrs. Jerome J. Wilbur, Mrs. Charles J. Williamson, Mrs. Cleveland Newton, Mrs. Robert P. Green.

GUESSING CONTEST—Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler provided an amusing contest for members of Chapter B of the P. E. O. Tuesday afternoon following the luncheon at which they were entertained by Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt at her apartment in the Northumberland. She had prepared posters, with signs and pictures taken from advertisements, representing the last names of the members. Everybody was included in the poster collection and everyone took part in the contest.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs and a member of Chapter G, was the guest speaker of the afternoon—her subject was "Daniel in the Lions Den." Mrs. R. M. Wolfe presided in the absence of the president.

PRESIDENT ON HAND—Members of the Sunshine and Community Society are looking forward to welcoming their president, Mrs. W. W. Deal, Monday at their March meeting, 2460 Sixteenth street. She will be there to preside, having recovered from an illness that kept her away from several meetings. The program will be soprano solos by Betty Lee Fox, accompanied by George Harold Miller.

OFF FOR GEORGIA—Mrs. Edward B. Clarke, an active member of the Washington Club, the Twentieth Century and the Women's National Press Club, has left for a visit in Thomasville, Ga.

Beta Sigma Phi Photographs Made

The District of Columbia Council of Beta Sigma Phi met last night at the Lee House, Fifteenth and L streets northwest, where pictures were taken for The Torch, the international magazine of the sorority, by Isham Perkins.

Plans were discussed for delegates to attend the Middle-Eastern Area Council meeting to be held at Bethlehem, Pa., March 10 and final arrangements made for the dance to be given by the council for the ten local chapters this evening at the Roger Smith Hotel.

A luncheon also will be given Saturday at 1:30 p. m. for the council and members of all local chapters in the Neptune Room.

Mrs. Morgan Bradford Returns From Mexico

Mrs. Morgan Bradford has returned after a trip of several weeks to Mexico. During her visit she visited Cichen-Itza, in Yucatan, scene of beautiful Aztec ruins of interest to archaeologists. In Mexico City, she was entertained several times by the United States Ambassador and Mrs. Josephus Daniels, saw a bullfight and visited the floating gardens at Xochimilco.

Returning to New York on the liner Monterey, Mrs. Bradford stopped at Mozambique en route.

'Aviation Party' Entertains Guests Of Van Zandts

An "aviation party" was that given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. John Parker Van Zandt in their apartment at the Westchester. The entire board of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, of which the host is consultant, as well as others who are air-minded had been asked for a cocktail.

Mrs. Van Zandt, as keenly interested in flying as her husband, has written many articles on the subject. She and her husband owned a plane at one time and Mr. Van Zandt used to pilot it himself.

The hostess wore a floor-length mauve gown with rhinestone clips at the neckline. Her tea table was centered with jonquils and sweet peas.

Dean H. G. Doyle Is Luncheon Host

Dean Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Phi Beta Kappa Chapter of George Washington University, entertained informally at luncheon at the Cosmos Club yesterday in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Oscar M. Voorhees, of New Brunswick, N. J.

Dr. Voorhees, historian of the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa, is to speak this evening at 8:15 at a joint meeting of the George Washington University Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa (Alpha of the District of Columbia) and the D. C. Alumni Association of Phi Beta Kappa, in the Hall of Government, George Washington University, Twenty-first and G streets.

Among the guests at the luncheon were Wade H. Ellis, president of the D. C. Phi Beta Kappa Association; Dr. Francis J. Hemelt, secretary of the association; Dean George N. Henning, formerly president of the George Washington niversity Chapter, and the other officers of the chapter, Dr. Robert W. Bolwell, Prof. Florence M. Mears and Miss Edith Mortensen.

Her subject will be "The Romance of Trees," and she will include stories and legends of the pepper, eucalyptus, palm and the redwood trees of Santa Cruz.

Three books of poems have been published by Mrs. Bush "Cipriana," "The Silver Tree" and her latest, "High Heritage." Many of her poems have been published in magazines throughout the country. She has addressed the club previously.

The wives of the new members of the California delegation in Congress will assist at the tea table.

Sen. Herring's Son Here

Senator Clyde L. Herring, of Iowa, has his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. LaVerne B. Herring of Des Moines, as his guests at the Mayflower. They plan to be here for about a week.

Phi Omega Pi, 30 Years Old To Celebrate

The Phi Omega Pi Alumnae Club of the District and of Baltimore, are uniting in celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of their sorority with a luncheon of the two clubs at Mrs. K's Toll House Tavern Saturday at 1:30 p. m.

In March, 1910, Phi Omega Pi was founded by a group of 15 girls at the University of Nebraska. In 1933, the merger of Phi Omega Pi and Sigma Phi Beta formed what is today known as the Phi Omega Pi Sorority. The organization now numbers 55 units and is a member of National Pan-Hellenic Congress.

The sorority annually contributes to the work for the prevention of blindness among Kentucky children. It has established a ward in the Good Samaritan Hospital at Lexington.

Mrs. Shelby Faulkner, 3127 Rittenhouse street northwest, is in charge of arrangements for the luncheon, with Mrs. Alex Wetmore assisting her.

Police Added To Combat Crime Wave

2 Suspects Seized Hour After Holdup; Taxi Driver Slugged, Robbed by Fares

While the capture of two holdup suspects and the safe return of several stolen automobiles gave impetus last night to the Washington police drive on crime, a taxi driver was slugged by two unidentified passengers, robbed and left unconscious in his cab.

Despite an augmented police force, the crime wave persisted, and police in many precincts reported the usual number of housebreakings, purse snatching and other larcenies.

Additional patrolmen were operating in precincts named by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan Police, as the most serious crime areas. In addition, the detective force, the pick-up and homicide squads were working with extraordinary vigilance, members of these divisions staying on the job for long hours overtime.

Head Badly Injured

Lester T. McKellips, 37, of 330 Fourteenth street northeast, picked up two colored men and took them to Ninth and R streets northwest, he told police. There he was hit on the head with a heavy object, and an undetermined amount of money was taken from him.

At Garfield Hospital, where he was taken, McKellips was said to be in a serious condition suffering a concussion and possible skull fracture.

Police were holding two men who, they said, had been identified as the pair that robbed Cecil B. Shreve, 25, night manager of a service station at Eleventh street and Vermont avenue northwest, of $25. The suspects were caught in the 1300 block of Kingman Place northwest—about four blocks from the scene of the holdup—in the act of transferring license plates.

The car on which the men were fixing the plates was not the same one that had been used in the holdup, police said. The car used in the robbery was identified as one stolen from Harvey C. Wright, 2124 I street northwest. The second car, also stolen, was the property of Kenneth Barber, 2807 Sherman avenue northwest, police said.

Shreve, whose station is within the area heavily policed because of the number of crimes, said he was accosted about 8 p. m. by two colored men—a tall man who brandished a knife, and a short man who carried a rusty, nickel-plated pistol.

The robbers took $20 from Shreve's person, and obtained some $5 from the cash register. Then they ordered the manager into a rear room and fled. Shreve noted the license numbers through a window.

About the same time two boys were holding up a Capital Transit bus as it reached the end of its route in Forest Glen, Md. The boys ordered James F. Raney, of 5181 Powhatan street, Washington, driver and sole occupant of the bus, to turn over the contents of his cash box. It contained more than $10.

Thieves Wreck Car

Late last night a stolen car belonging to Collanell Stephens, 807 Second street southwest, was returned after a 15-block chase in which Motorcycle Patrolman R. T. Myer finally forced the escaping robbers to abandon the car.

The car was stolen at 6 p. m., Stephens told police, and about 7:30 o'clock Myer saw it as he cruised along K street southwest. He gave chase. At South Capitol and K streets he pulled along side, only to be forced suddenly to the left as the driver of the car swerved the vehicle in front of the motorcycle. At South Capitol and M streets the driver crashed into a parked car owned by Alonzo Gibson, 1839 Fourth street northwest. The two occupants of the stolen car jumped to the sidewalk and disappeared in an alley.

While no other armed robberies were reported for the day, police received reports of numerous housebreakings and thefts.

Catherine T. Evans, a Maritime Commission clerk, of McLean, Va., lost a purse containing $8 in cash and $50 worth of jewelry while she played table tennis last evening in the 1300 block of E street northwest.

Waiter Robbed

James Gibbs, a waiter, of 1622 Eleventh street northwest, was robbed of a watch, $18 in cash and articles of apparel early Wednesday morning while he was asleep.

Mary Wallace, 4938 Washington place northeast, reported that between 9 a. m. and 2 p. m. yesterday her house was entered, and that her husband's overcoat, shoes and electric shaver had been stolen.

An unsuccessful attempt was made to snatch the pocketbook of Hazel Cartwright, of 920 R street northwest, at Tenth and Westminster streets northwest.

A pocketbook containing $105 and two diamond rings was stolen from her beauty shop at 1624 H street northwest, Estelle Wiltshire, of 524 Thirteenth street northeast, reported.

A 20-year-old colored man was captured yesterday fleeing from a grocery store at 1618 Fourteenth street northwest. Police said he had entered the store by breaking a transom window and had stolen about $3 from a cash register.

One dollar in pennies and a .32-caliber revolver were taken from a filling station at 4717 Wisconsin avenue northwest, William B. Wren, proprietor, told police.

Additional uniformed patrolmen "to act as a crime deterrent" were ordered to the streets last night by Police Chief Ernest W. Brown following a meeting of police inspectors and captains yesterday.

It was agreed, Maj. Brown said, that the presence of plain-clothes men on the streets probably is not so helpful as uniformed policemen.

Brown indicated that some progress was being made in the investigation of the holdup-murder Monday of Herman Sirkis, 42.

Brown also announced he had posted $100 reward for the "arrest and conviction" of the two colored slayers. This amount brings to $300 the reward offered.

Trinidad Unit Asks Funds To Fight Crime

Citizens Group Urges Protection For Northeast Section

Funds to employ sufficient policemen to protect the Northeast section during the present and possible future crime waves were asked of Congress in a resolution adopted last night by the Trinidad Citizens Association, meeting in Wheatley School. Mrs. J. M. Selby, vice president, presided.

The association commended the Public Utilities Commission for appointing an engineer to survey the District with a view to supplying natural gas throughout. Another resolution protested the "inefficiency" of the assessor's office in increasing automobile assessments over last year.

A committee was appointed to ask the Washington Terminal Co. to paint the viaduct white at Second and H streets northeast for greater visibility. The Capital Traction Co. will be asked by another committee to restore "local" street car service to Fifteenth and H streets northeast.

Janney P.-T. A.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, yesterday came to the aid of Tenleytown residents who are seeking a rehearing of the zoning case in their neighborhood.

After listening to a delegation from the Janney Parent-Teacher Association, he called District officials and urged a rehearing.

"From my conversation with zoning officials," he said, "I believe that a rehearing will be granted. The women have some good arguments."

A delegation from schools and churches in the area near Wisconsin avenue and Albemarle street northwest will visit Commissioner Melvin today to renew their protest. Headed by Rossa Downing, attorney for Immaculata Convent, the delegation was appointed at a meeting of 60 citizens last night in St Ann's School.

Reaffirmation of Principles Of 1776 Urged by 3 Faiths

800 at Jewish Center Hear Sen. Walsh, Dr. Parsons, Rabbi Metz, Mrs. Howard Stress Religious Origin of Democracy

Nearly 800 Jews heard spokesmen for their own and Christian faiths agree last night that reaffirmation of the principles of the writers of the Declaration of Independence is needed to cleanse America of class hatreds and to secure her democracy.

Speakers at an interfaith meeting in the Jewish Community Center were Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts; the Rev. Wilfred Parsons, dean of Georgetown University Graduate School; Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, of Adas Israel Congregation, and Mrs. Georgette Howard.

Each in various ways emphasized as essential to the future of the Nation regeneration of the faith of the founding fathers in the equality of man, endowed by his Creator with "certain inalienable rights."

Rejection of the religious basis of civilization, said Father Parsons, results in acceptance by a people of the notion that their rights and liberties are the endowment of the state and its rulers.

Rabbi Metz asked his hearers if they ever had considered why the post-war democracies of Europe toppled at the first assault while American democracy endured a civil war and other crises for 150 years. His answer was that in Germany, at least, democracy was "merely a technique of government," whereas in America it was "rooted in religious fervor."

"If there is anything of value in American democracy declared Senator Walsh, "it is that here religious freedom is secured, that here it is right for a man to turn to his God and to ask him in his own way and at his own shrine for guidance."

"I have never been able to understand," Walsh continued, "how any group believing in God could retain any sort of hostility toward any other group. . . . If intolerance has found a place in other parts of the world God knows it ought to have no place here."

Mrs. Howard, nationally known lecturer, observed a growing Nationwide "demand for a living faith in a power higher than ourselves."

Faith Held Vital

If society believes that its rights came from God it will not tolerate their denial by any government, Father Parsons said. "If you dethrone God from His place then the next person to be dethroned is you," he added.

Father Parsons declared that some of the Nation's stanchest liberals deny the existence of God as a Creator and "hold principles out of which come despotism."

"Let us examine our thoughts," he urged, "and make sure we have no traitors in our minds."

Rabbi Metz warned of disruptive influences of the existence of economic injustices. He said: "When man is afraid of the future he loses reason and becomes the easy victim of demogogic guile."

Five Injured In Auto Crash At D. C. Line

Mother and Baby Among Victims; Aged Couple Hurt

Five persons were injured in a head-on collision at Chestnut avenue and the District line yesterday.

The victims were taken to the Washington Sanitarium by the rescue squad of the Takoma Park, Md., Volunteer Fire Department.

The injured are Mrs. C. W. Spargo, 26, 8200 Saratoga avenue, Silver Spring, Md., and her 2½-year-old son, Joseph; Byron Hovis, 23, 110 Valey road, Brookmont, Md., driver and brother of Mrs. Spargo, and Mr. and Mrs. David Rorsion, each 77 years old, of Everett, Mich., who are visiting at 213 Baltimore avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

Mrs. Spargo suffered a fractured ankle, bruises and cuts about both legs. Her child was cut and scratched about the head. Mrs. Rorsion was treated for a fractured leg, cuts and shock and her husband for cuts about the chin, hands and leg. Hovis suffered skull lacerations and bruises on his face and arms.

Rorsion was driving north on Chestnut avenue and Hovis' car was bound south.

Meantime, in Police Court yesterday, a jury returned the twenty-ninth conviction under the negligent homicide act against Clarence L. Thomas, 38, of 907 M street southwest.

He was found guilty in the death of Mrs. Carrie Howard, 38, of the M street address, who died last October 7. Judge Edward M. Curran postponed sentence until March 6.

Mrs. Howard, a passenger in Thomas' machine, died as a result of a three-car collision at Seventeenth street and Massachusetts avenue southeast.

400 Elks Hear Plan for U.S. To Avoid War

Can Stay Out, if It Tends Own Knitting, Rep. Gearhart Says

By minding its own business the United States can keep out of the European war, Representative Gearhart (Republican), California, told 400 Elks last night at the Americanism week dinner of the Washington lodge.

The lodge, celebrating the week with 600,000 Elks throughout the Nation, were presented with a copy of the original draft of the Bill of Rights by Representative Murdock (Democrat), of Arizona.

The war in Europe, said Gearhart, is "nought but a gigantic real estate deal," whose outcome "will not affect America's destiny one whit unless we permit ourselves to be drawn into the vortex." "The reason they fight," he said, "is of their own making . . . it should be their armies, not ours, that should bear the brunt of it."

"Is there an obligation," he asked, "resting on the shoulders of the American people to right every wrong, stamp out every evil, adjust every inequality, eliminate every injustice that may raise its ugly head in every corner of this far-flung world?

"Have we not enough wrongs to right; enough evils to stamp out; enough inequalities to adjust; enough injustices to eliminate right here in our own country to keep us reasonably well occupied in the days immediately to come without running around the world looking for something to do? Cannot we serve America well—humanity best—by governing ourselves well; by solving correctly and with promptitude the manifold problems of America, the governmental problems with which we are daily beset?"

He urged that "we prove to the world . . . that democracy and self-government . . . will work by making it work."

Capital News In Brief

Flees in Flames

The janitor at 822 Eighteenth street northwest, investigating screams in the basement yesterday, found a man running around with his clothes on fire. The janitor seized the fire extinguisher and ran to his aid.

The flaming intruder took fright and fled through a rear door, so the janitor applied the fire eztinguisher to the pile of waste paper the uninvited guest had been using for a bed.

Startled tenants turned in a fire alarm, but the flames were out when the firemen arrived They concluded the intruder must have fallen asleep while smoking a cigarette.

Fire Record

Fire alarms answered yesterday and last night included:

9:10 a. m.—3822 Warren street northwest, trash in cellar.

12:28 p. m.—[illegible] Eighteenth street northwest, man burned.

12:53 p. m.—[illegible] Eighth street southeast, furnace.

Bill to Regulate D. C. Fire And Casualty Insurance Drawn

Measure Would Put Other Firms On Same Plane With Life Companies; Randolph Ready to Introduce Law

A bill to regulate the fire and casualty insurance business in the District on a basis comparable to the supervision over life insurance has been drafted by District authorities for introduction in Congress, The Post learned yesterday.

Representative Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, said he understood the bill had been sent to the Speaker's office, and that he would introduce it as soon as it has been routed to him.

Meanwhile, the suggestion that social security old age compensation should be extended to insurance agents found support yesterday in testimony, before the Monopoly Committee, by local insurance company officials and agents.

Agents' Compensation Probed

The committee questioned five District witnesses with regard to problems involving the selection and compensation of agents.

Albert F. Jordan, superintendent of insurance, in a recent letter to Harrison Brand, jr., executive secretary of the Washington Board of Trade, explained the provisions of the new bill.

"Under the present law," he declared, "the superintendent is required to issue a fire and casualty agent's license to any applicant who is prepared to pay the prescribed license fee, even though such applicant is known to the department to be entirely ignorant of the insurance business, wholly dishonest and in every respect untrustworthy."

Could Suspend Licenses

The bill, he said, would authorize him to revoke or suspend the authority of any company to do business if it had become insolvent or its capital or surplus were impaired, if its condition were such that further transaction of business would be hazardous to policyholders, creditors or the public, if it has refused to pay a valid final judgment, violated District laws or exceeded its charter powers, refused to submit its books to reasonable inspection, secretly shifted its liabilities to another company, or if its corporate existence has been dissolved in the State of incorporation.

Another provision would strike at "bootleg insurance" by imposing on purchasers of insurance in companies not licensed in the District the 2 per cent insurance premium tax. Jordan said this would "materially increase the revenues of the District."

Bond Required

Insurance brokers would be required to give a $5,000 bond and to meet certain standard requirements. The license fee for brokers, meanwhile, would be reduced. Jordan expected this to increase revenues, since he believed many agents would take out a broker's license rather than transfer their brokerage business to others.

Witnesses who testified before the Monopoly Committee were Col. Lawrence C. Crawford, agent-broker; Thomas R. Crowley, of Crowley & Marr, general agents for the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co.; Harold D. Krafft, general agent for the Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co., Philadelphia; D. D. Lambert, agent for the Travelers' Insurance Co., Hartford, Conn., and James A. Maloney, agent for the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Arlington Burial Today for Widow Of Van Valkenburg

Following funeral services conducted yesterday in St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, Mrs. Thusnelda Van Valkenburg will be buried today in Arlington Cemetery. She died here Monday.

Mrs. Van Valkenburg who was 71, was the widow of Carlton Van Valkenburg, architect, who launched the first Bal Boheme of the Arts Club of Washington. She was also a sister of Heinrich Meyn, the concert singer.

Born in Germany, Mrs. Van Valkenburg came to the United States in 1891. She married in 1911 in Onteora, N. Y. Mr. Van Valkenburg moved from New York to Washington soon after the World War, and Mrs. Van Valkenburg followed him to the Capital in 1925.

5-Cent Milk For Needy Held Near

Efforts Being Made For Distribution Within a Month, Dr. Gaumnitz Says

Milk for needy families at 5 cents a quart may be a practical reality within a month, Dr. Edwin Gaumnitz, director of marketing and marketing agreements of the Department of Agriculture, declared last night.

Pointing out that the two major problems of determining who shall get the milk and how it is to be distributed remain to be solved, Dr. Gaumnitz declined to forecast the exact date the plan would go into operation. "But we are trying to get it done inside a month," he said.

Dr. Gaumitz and Robert E. Bondy, director of the Board of Public Welfare, explained the problems involved in the low-cost milk program at an open meeting of the District of Columbia Health Forum in the Georgetown Public Library. Fifty persons were present, including several delegates from Georgetown civic organizations.

Bondy pointed out that the District relief rolls could not be used as a basis for relief distribution, as they were cut far too low as a result of the department's lack of funds.

By adding to the 6,235 families on relief those certified for WPA jobs who have no such jobs, a total sale of 10,000 quarts of 5-cent milk a day might be expected, he said. If the entire District WPA rolls were included, this quantity might be doubled, he estimated.

Dr. Gaumnitz explained that 10,000 to 20,000 quarts per day was too small a quantity to be distributed through stores on a milk stamp basis, as it would average only four to eight quarts per day per store.

The alternative method of distribution through milk stations would mean trips of half a mile to a mile for the relief clients, more than half of whom are old people, Bondy said. The minimum cost of the system would be $13,000 a year, he said, even if no rent is paid for the stations.

The Rev. Harry V. Porter presided at the meeting.

Salary War With Leading Hurler Ends

Wire to Pitcher's Home Gets Results; Griffith Refuses To Divulge Salary

By a Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 28.—Truce in the long-drawn-out salary war between President Clark Griffith of the Nationals and Pitcher Emil (Dutch) Leonard, his winner of 20 games and loser of 8 last year, was declared late tonight when the portly knuckle-baller wired acceptance his contract.

Griffith followed custom by refusing to divulge terms.

Earlier in the evening Griffith, after having corresponded by mail over the winter, wired a fresh offer to Leonard in an attempt to settle the controversy in time for the Belgian right-hander to report at training camp on schedule, March 1. The answer came a few hours later.

Twenty-four hours before Griffith's announcement that an agreement had been reached, the president of the Washington club disclosed that "we are in the neighborhood of $5,000 apart."

The signing of Leonard, which followed the return to the fold of Infielder Cecil Travis, reduced the Nats' unsigned players to two—Rookie Shortstop Jimmy Pofahl and Catcher Tony Giuliani.

Giuliani is understood to be dissatisfied with his contract. Pofahl, according to Griffith, was tendered a new offer a month ago, but has not even acknowledged receipt of it.

Bobby Riggs, Mrs. Fabyan Net Winners

Both Advance in Indoor Play; McNeill Also in Semifinals

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 28.—The National indoor tennis championships took on a tricity hue today as players from Chicago, Boston and Los Angeles dominated the quarter-finals competition.

Bobby Riggs, who possesses almost every worthwhile title except this one and the French championship, and his fellow Chicagoan, Frank A. Froehling, stormed into the semifinals of the men's singles, where they will have to contend with each other.

Riggs fiddled around in the first set of his match with S. A. Davenport of New York, but then became the serious workman that he can be and disposed of his foe 7—5, 6—4, 6—1.

Play Overtime

Froehling, unseeded former Northwestern University player, almost had to pay rent for using the courts overtime in beating Southpaw Marvin Kantrowitz of New York, 6—2, 1—6, 6—3, 6—4.

In the other semifinal match tomorrow Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, will be paired against Frank J. Bowden, of New York.

Boston and Los Angeles shared honors in the women's singles quarter-finals.

Top-seeded Sarah Palfrey Fabyan swept gracefully past Charlotte C. McNeill, of Bound Brook, N. J., 6—1, 6—4, and fourth-seeded Katherine Winthrop finally conquered Louise Raymond, of Scarsdale, N. Y., 7—5, 5—7, 6—2, for Boston's behalf.

Defending Champion Wins

The Los Angeles victories were gained by Defending Champion Pauline Betz, who had an easy time conquering Norma Taubele, of New York, 6—3, 6—2, and by Gracyn Wheeler, who once was ranked nationally and who today stopped Millicent Hirsh, of New York, 9—7, 7—5.

Like the all-Chicago upper bracket of the men's simifinals, the two Boston women will play each other and the two Los Angeles women will collide.

Riggs and his partner, Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., No. 1 seeded combination, scored the principal doubles conquest of the day by romping over Ray Palmer, of New York, and Alfred L. Jarvis, of Tenafly, N. J., 8—6, 6—4.

And then Cooke and Mrs. Fabyan, top seeded mixed doubles team, nearly shut out Betty Rosenquist and Judah Lober, both of New York, 6—0, 6—1.

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 28.—Dewitt Page, of Bristol, Conn., died here today just after the finish of the seventh race from coronary thrombosis. He collapsed in his box an hour after his entry won the juvenile stake championship event here today.

Page, who raced his horses under the nom de plume of Maemere Farm, was pronounced dead a few minutes later. He had been carried to the track hospital quarters. Page's wife was sitting with him in a front box near the finish line when her husband collapsed.

Filly Won Stake

Page's 2-year-old filly, Maemante, had won the Hialeah juvenile championship in the featured race.

Mr. Page was president of the New Departure Manufacturing Co., located in Bristol and Meriden, Conn. The New England sportsman was fond of golfing, fishing and hunting in addition to his love of the thoroughbred.

He had been interested in racing nearly 15 years, and first was attracted to the sport when he attended an auction sale of thoroughbreds. He bid in a trio of yearlings to begin his career as an owner and, accompanied by his wife, has been a regular bidder at the Saratoga sales ever since.

Page was believed to be close to 70 years old. He was living on his yacht Maemere moored at Miami Beach.

Honored His Wife

The name "Maemere" is derived from a combination of Mae, Mrs. Page's name, and mere, or "mother," which Mrs. Page is affectionately called.

The Pages spend their winters here and the rest of the year in Connecticut and New York.

Many famous thoroughbreds whose names begin with "Mae" have scored numerous stake triumphs in the famous black, white diamonds and cap of the Bristol industrialist and sportsman.

Post-A. A. U. Deadline Set Monday Night

Three Extra Days Given Managers of Local Sandlotters

In an effort to cooperate with team managers and tourney officials preparing for the District A. A. U. basketball championships, sponsored by The Post, the entry deadline has been extended from tomorrow to Monday night and the opening games set back to next Wednesday night, March 6, in Heurich gymnasium.

Teams were having difficulty in meeting with the short notice requirements on the tourney, thus they were given the weekend and all day Monday to prepare the team and individual player blanks in the three classes of competition, unlimited and 145 in the boys and the unlimited girls.

The defending champions in the unlimited class, United Typewriters, showed they will be the team to beat when they routed G. A. O., 39-26, in a Recreation League encounter. The Recreation play will add to the annual rivalries of the A. A. U. event, to determine the city champion.

Government bureau sponsored teams are expected to comprise a majority of the entries, particularly in the girls class, where Rockville's defending champions have been disbanded and such newcomers as F. B. I., Treasury and Aggies will challenge the supremacy of the suburban teams, always hard to beat in the feminine section of the tourney.

The Post sports department and the Boys Club of Washington, at 230 C street northwest, both have a plentiful supply of entry blanks on hand but with the deadline moved back three days the supply will probably be depleted before Monday midnight. Complete rules and other information is printed on the entry blanks.

The Washington Post trophies have been ordered for the three winning teams, while the individual members of the teams receive gold medals. The losing finalist will be awarded silver medals.

Goldberg Wins Special '1,000'

Newark, N. J., Feb. 28 (INS).—Sanford Goldberg, New York's flying fireman, won his second special 1,000-yard run in two weeks at the 113th Regiment Armory tonight by overtaking Joe Kazlowski, of St. Francis College, of Brooklyn, on the last lap to win in 2:20.1.

Goldberg, representing the Millrose A. A., in the New Jersey A. A. U. track meet, let out with his powerful smooth stride with four of the six laps remaining and passed Kazlowski with half a lap to go to win by 5 yards. Ed Dunham, of Columbia Council, of Brooklyn, finished third several strides behind Kazlowski.

Rookie Sidney Hudson Darling of Nats' Camp

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 28.—Seventy-year-old Clark Griffith felt the urge to walk from the players' bench onto the field and stand behind the pitcher's box. Manager Bucky Harris and Coach Clyde Milan joined him there, and for 20 minutes the trio surveyed with avid interest the pitching delivery of a tall, young rookie who has become the darling of the Nats' camp.

He is Sidney Hudson, and the Nats' bosses were in close attendance today because young Hudson was letting out a notch in pitching to the batters. Griffith and Harris were getting their first peep at the fast ball which prompted the Nats to pay most of $12,000 for this class D leaguer.

They seemed to like what they had bought. A stylish delivery quite unbecoming a class D novice elicited nods of approval as Hudson fogged the ball up to the plate. Griffith chawed at the remnants of his cigar in rapt attention as Hudson sent the ball down the middle with a distinct early-season zip.

Manager Harris was voluble at the end of Hudson's term on the mound. "He's the cleverest young fellow I've seen come along since Schoolboy Rowe broke in under me with the Tigers in 1931," said Harris. "Fellows like him don't learn how to pitch in a couple of years. He's in an advanced stage because he's just naturally a pitcher."

"Pitching action," on which Harris lays such importance, is one of the chief recommendations of Hudson, according to the Nats' manager. "One of the things I'm impressed with about Hudson is the way he behaves out there on the rubber. He's not timid, he's self-controlled, and he makes the batter realize he knows how to pitch. That's important."

It is no secret that the Nats' bosses

Harrison Tops First Round In Florida Golf

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 28.—E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, Little Rock, Ark., professional, clipped three strokes from par for a 68 and the first round lead in the $3,000 54-hole St. Petersburg Open Golf Tournament at the Lakewood Country Club here today.

Harrison, recovering from a bogey 5 on the first hole, shot 13 pars and four birdies, displaying unerring touch with his putter. He held a one-stroke lead over Jimmy Demaret, smiling Houston (Tex.) professional and leading money winner of the winter tournament campaign.

Sammy Snead, the defending champion from Shawnee, Pa., who defeated Henry Picard in a 25-hole play-off for first money last year, occupied third place with his 70, the only other card better than par.

Clayton Heafner, Linville, N. C.; Byron Nelson, United States Open champion, from Toledo, Ohio, and Billy Burke, former National Open titleholder, of Bellclair, Fla., equaled par with 71's.

The 72-bracket included John Revolta, Evanston, Ill., and Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., former P. G. A. champions, and Ben Hogan, also from White Plains.

The 60 low professionals and ten low amateurs qualified for the final 36 holes tomorrow. First money is $700.

Violets Hold 10-7 Margin At Halftime

N. Y. U. Scoreless From Floor for First 11 Minutes; Hoyas Wilt in Second Half

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Feb. 28.—After a first half in which it plumbed the depths of attacking futility, New York University's unbeaten basketball team came to life, blasted Georgetown off the Madison Square Garden court and won its eighteenth game of its all-winning campaign tonight.

In the other division of a double-header which attracted 9,653 spectators, Pitt scored its seventh successive victory over Fordham, 57 to 37, pouring it onto the hapless Rams after a close, exciting first period.

You have to go back a long way into Violet court history to find a game in the opening stages of its tussle with the Hoyas. N. Y. U. went 10 minutes and 42 seconds before it caged a field goal and it got only two more before the period ended. Its foul shooting, though, was as good as its firing from outside was wretched so the Violet reached intermission with a 10-7 edge on even more inaccurate Georgetown.

Make 2 Shots Good

In those first 20 minutes, N. Y. U. hit with only three of its 30 shots from the floor while the Hoyas sank a like number out of 41. And it wasn't all attributable to great defensive play. The shooting was just bad.

Having given such a terrible account of itself, N. Y. U. came out in the second half and played the basketball which has carried it so far along the primrose path of victory that only one game remains between the Bronx Bombers and a season unmarred by defeat.

In the first four minutes of the second period, N. Y. U., driving hard, passing sharply and shooting like Finnish snipers, scored 12 points, 2 more than it had in the entire first half. Georgetown, paced by the set shooting of Jim Kiernan, a sophomore from St. Simon Stock School in the Bronx, pulled back to within 6 points of the Violet, then away went N. Y. U. on an 8-point sally and all element of contest disappeared from the game.

From that point on, N. Y. U. swarmed all over the Hoyas, rolled for 10 points in three minutes and wound up with two field goals in the last 30 seconds.

Stevens Tops Scorers

The brilliant floor play and shooting of bald Benny Auerback and his splendid captain, Bobby Lewis, had N. Y. U. really rolling in the second half, and their efforts were supported by the opportunism of Red Stevens and Ralph Kaplowitz. Stevens topped the scorers with 14 points, Kaplowitz and Auerbach 9 and Lewis 8. Kiernan, who was doing a lot of shooting, hit for 6 field goals for Georgetown.

N. Y. U. made exactly half of its field goal attempts good in the second half, throwing in 17 out of 34. In the face of such accuracy, Georgetown was helpless and added to its woes by shooting so wildly that it sank only 11 of its 58 shots.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 28.

Nobody, it seems, has bothered to tell Cecil Travis that he is no longer the Nats' shortstop. In fact, he has never been asked if he is agreeable to playing third base, but that is where he will play next season according to the gentlemen who operate the Washington Ball Club.

POVICH

There has been quite some to-do about the Nats' infield shift involving Travis, which sends Third Baseman Buddy Lewis to the outfield, but the one man who has not been officially appraised of the move is Mr. Travis himself. In his Georgia drawl, Travis was wondering aloud about his new status on the club.

"Ah heard repo'ts that ah was gonna play third base next season, but ah don't know if it's some kind of a rumor or a real repo't," said the soft-spoken Travis on his arrival in camp today. "Ah kinda wish somebody would tell me if ah'm a shortstop or a third baseman. Ah guess though, it don't matter much."

Travis' official ignorance of his new post is not surprising to folks who have been around the gentlemen who operate the Washington team. It could happen only on the Nats'. On another club there would be conferences with the player concerned, statements would be issued to the press and the whole business conducted with some formality.

But not on the Washington team. The operation of the Nats is delightfully informal. The administration of the club is a relic of the horse-and-buggy days. Only on the Washington team, for example, could any such mix-up on the dates of reporting have occurred as did occur this season. Clark Griffith said the team would report February 15. When that date arrived there wasn't a player on the scene. "I'd have sworn I told somebody to have the players here by February 15," Mr. Griffith said.

In the case of Travis, the Nats' bosses are taking it for granted that the obliging young Georgian won't object to playing third base. He never objects to anything much. He was saying today that he guessed that it would be all right.

"Ah always figured anybody who could play shortstop could play third base," said Travis. "They tell me this Jimmy Pofahl who's coming from Minneapolis is a bearcat around shortstop and maybe he'll play a piece of third base for me," he smiled with his rare humor.

In the Nats' camp there is no official doubt of Travis' ability to play third base. There is general recognition of the fact that his play at shortstop last season was brilliant and that the transition to third will not be difficult.

The tall Georgian broke in with the Nats as a third baseman and for two years he filled the post acceptably. Washington fans, spoiled by Ossie Bluege's incomparable presence at the bag for nigh onto 16 years forgave Travis his fielding lapses on account of the power in his bat. But never was he termed a poor third baseman.

The only reason Travis was moved off third base was because young Buddy Lewis came along from Chattanooga with his promise of lending more punch to the Nats' batting order. But Lewis proved a strange case. Hailed as a clever young infielder, who might not be able to hit big league pitching, he blossomed as a potent slugger and a very ordinary third baseman. Most infielders improve defensively with the years, but Lewis proved the rare example of a young player actually retrogressing as a fielder.

Travis has proved one of the best investments Griffith ever made. Kid Elberfeld, the old infielder, peddled him to the Nats' Chattanooga farm for $300 in 1932 with the approval of Coach Clyde Milan. Before the season was over, he was Chattanooga's regular third baseman and hailed as a natural hitter.

The first day that Travis broke into the Washington lineup, in 1934, is unforgettable to the small company of fans who saw that game against the Cleveland Indians. Travis, with his odd, cramped left-handed stance, blasted a single to left field on his first trip. Next time at bat, he bounced a single over the third baseman's head. Again, he singled sharply over the bag. Two more hits he made that day, five for five.

And they were, seemingly, five lucky hits by a brash rookie making his debut. No lefthander figured to hit balls to leftfield like that. It just simply didn't add up. But later events proved that those hits weren't lucky that they were to be typical Travis hits. He has been hitting to leftfield ever since and proving that he is one of the fine natural batters in the big leagues.

"Ah was pulling the ball to rightfield last year, like they told me to, but ah know ah hit best to left," said Travis. "Ah don't know if ah'm gonna trifle with that pulling business next season. That was the first time ah never hit .300 in mah life. Ah thing ah'm gonna keep hitting the only way ah know how. Nobody ever booed a base hit."

American U., Ahead 6 Times, Defeated by Terrors, 43-41

Western Maryland Takes 13-0 Lead; Staves Off Eagles' Rallies to Win

By Al Hailey

A second half that was full of spills and roughhouse action saw American University's basketball team take command of the lead exactly six times last night only to lose in the final seconds of play, 43-41, to Western Maryland in the A. U. gymnasium.

The Eagles, seeking to avenge an early-season 50-41 defeat at the hands of the Green Terrors, started out like a team in a dream and were held scoreless for seven and one-half minutes while Western Maryland enjoyed a brief field day and ran up 13 points.

It was Dutch Schulze who started American's delayed scoring attack that brought them up to a 22-to-22 tie at half time.

See-Saw Affair

Neither team was able to take a lead of more than two points—most of the time it was a see-saw affair with a slight one-point margin—and in the late stages the tension between the players resulted in a temporary flareup between A. U.'s 6-foot-5 center, Carl Byham, and the Terrors' Bob Stropp that ended with Stropp knocked flat on the floor after a jump for the ball. The embryo feud was quickly dissipated, however, in a burst of apologies from both parties.

A. U. jumped into the lead for the first time when Byham, who was all over the floor on offense and defense, got the jump on the Terrors as the second half opened and made it 24-22. The score was immediately tied and changed hands until Schulze, on a seemingly impossible shot from under the basket, put A. U. in front, 32-30.

Terrors in Rally

With Don Honeman and Irv Blasi setting the pace, Western Maryland came back with a rush. Blasi left the game on fouls shortly afterward, and the Eagles came back until with but three minutes to play the score stood at 38-37, Eagles.

The Terrors went into high gear again, pulled away to 43 to 40. Then with just three seconds left Capt. George Brown was fouled and given a free shot at the basket. A. U. took time out to formulate a bit of desperate strategy, but after Brown sank the free shot to make it, 43-41, the final whistle halted the business.

Savold Has Cold; May Force Delay In Pastor Battle

By International News Service

New York, Feb. 28.—Lee Savold, Des Moines, Iowa, heavyweight, today came up with a cold and slight fever which kept him from completing his training stint in the gymnasium and endangered his 12-rounder with Bob Pastor scheduled for Madison Square Garden Friday night.

Savold was examined by Dr. William Walker, the New York boxing commission physician, and Dr. S. L. Meylackson. They will examine him again at 10 a. m. tomorrow to learn definitely whether he will be in shape to fight as scheduled.

Sacred Heart Girls In Rockville Event

Four girl basketball teams are entered in the Sportsmanship Tournament to be held at Richard Montgomery High School in Rockville, tomorrow and Saturday. The teams are Poolesville, Sherwood, Sacred Heart and Montgomery, the host team.

Sacred Heart of Washington, new team to the tourney, may surprise the favored Richard Montgomery Club.

Friday night at 6:30 Sherwood will engage Poolesville; Montgomery will play Sacred Heart at 7:30 and the winners play the next night. Loren F. Schott, principal of Richard Montgomery, and originator of the tourney, will present a trophy to the winning team.

Merrick Takes First Half S.E. Championship

The first half championship of the Southeast Boys Club Basketball League went to Merrick yesterday when it defeated the Southeast Crows, 40 to 19. Thompson's 13 points were higher for the game.

In other league engagements yesterday, the Cards beat the Terps, 60 to 10; Silver Streaks tripped the Golden Panthers, 36 to 19; Trojans beat the All-Stars, 23 to 11; the Crows beat Capitol Clippers, 33 to 27; the Panthers beat the Blanks, 33 to 18; Merrick beat Northeast Celtics, 41 to 12; Long Island beat Mustangs, 23 to 22; Grady Rovers beat the Southeast Dux, and Merrick beat Southeast Reds, 48 to 25.

Kreevich and Hayes Sign With Chicago; Al Simmons Stars In A's Workout

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 28.—Catcher Bill Dickey signed a 1940 contract with the New York Yankees today which was reported to call for 20,500, a $2,500 increase over last year.

Another pitcher, Spurgeon (Spud) Chandler reported to the training camp.

Charlie Ruffing remains the only pitching holdout. Ruffing, at home in Long Beach, Calif., is asking a $5,000 increase over the $20,000 he got in 1939. There are five other players unsigned—outfielders Joe DiMaggio, Mike Chartak and Bill Matheson and infielders Joe Gordon and Red Rolfe.

Red Sox Workout

Sarasota, Fla., Feb. 28.—Manager Joe Cronin and a handful of early Red Sox arrivals went through an informal workout today as the main body of battery candidates headed for this training camp. Cronin has scheduled the first formal workout for Friday.

Although he was not under obligations to report until late next week, Ted Williams, the sophomore outfield star, will arrive here tomorrow with a party that entrained at Boston this morning. Cronin said he intended to give Williams an extra week's drilling on fielding grounders and mastering slow-ball pitching, which gave him a bit of trouble last season.

Stengel Works Rookies

Bradenton, Fla., Feb. 28.—Manager Casey Stengel welcomed his first batch of Boston Bees rgeulars into camp tonight and told one and all that serious training would start tomorrow morning.

Before joining the welcoming committee at the railroad station, Stengel put his rookie squad through another practice game. He appeared greatly impressed by the work that has been accomplished by his youngsters, and he predicted that at least four of them would help the club.

Stengel will have one of the largest squads to handle since he took over the Bees, and he has planned double workouts daily for the first week or so.

Allen, Hudlin Absent

Fort Myers, Fla., Feb. 28.—Manager Oscar Vitt led a squad of 27 Cleveland Indians, mainly batterymen, through their first spring workout today.

Of 19 pitchers on the Tribe's roster, the only absentees were Johnny Allen and Willis Hudlin, still unsigned, and Johnny Broaca, who recently agreed to terms after holding back several weeks. Catcher Frankie Pytlak, another holdout, also was missing.

Vitt turned over to Coach Luke Sewell the job of teaching control to two young speedball hurlers, Johnny Humphries and Bill Zuber. The Tribe's chief credits Sewell with the improvement last season of Southpaw Al Milnar, who won 14 games.

Brown Lone Holdout

Pasadena, Calif., Feb 28 (AP).—Outfielder Mike Krevich and Infielder Jackie Hayes came to terms with the Chicago White Sox today, leaving Pitcher Clint Brown as the only holdout.

Harry Grabiner, Sox vice president, said, "We have offered Brown as much as we can afford to pay him and the offer is final."

McCoy's Pain Eased

Anaheim, Calif., Feb. 28.—While the younger players stand around admiringly, old Al Simmons is slamming out a lot of solid line drives in the Athletics' training camp.

"Gee, he's great," said Second Baseman Benny McCoy. Look at that swing."

Manager Connie Mack expects Simmons to help with the younger players besides doing his share in the field and at the plate.

McCoy, who turned up with a sore arm yesterday, said the pain had eased today.

Newsom Unreported

Lakeland, Fla., Feb. 28.—Manager Del Baker, of the Detroit Tigers, indicated today he was getting peeved over Pitcher Buck Newsom's absence.

Newsom is four days late already for spring training, and Baker, with a trace of sarcasm in his voice, said Buck had advised that "urgent business" was keeping him away.

The veteran twirler is expected in camp tomorrow. The Tiger batterymen began work last Sunday.

Pirates Work Hard

San Bernardino, Calif., Feb. 28 (AP). The Pittsburgh Pirates had their first workout under the direction of new Manager Frankie Frisch today, and it left them groggy.

Bethesda Closes Its Regular Season With a Bang

Bethesda Wins, 41-34, Over St. Albans Five

With a scintillating record of 19 victories and 5 defeats, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High came to the end of its regular cage schedule yesterday at St. Albans, where it took an early lead and kept its margin safe to beat the host club, 41-34.

It was the third triumph for the Bethesdans in as many days, Landon having bowed on Monday, and Blair having taken a stinging 51-30 setback Tuesday. The successful suburbanites now look to the Metropolitan Tournament starting next week and to several tourney offers out of town.

Paced again by Johnny Shumate, the team's highest scorer, Bethesda jumped into a 14-9 lead at the first half and staved off several Saint rallies yesterday. It was out in front, 29-19, at the half and 35-29 at the three-quarters mark.

Shumate turned in 12 points, second only to the 13 markers registered by St. Albans' Bill Terry. Bob Cremins, star of Bethesda's triumph over Blair, played but one quarter but tacked 8 valuable points to the winners' total. Bill Hannon was second high for the losers with 8.

Bisons Win, 79-55, Over N.C. Teachers

Howard University cagers ran up their biggest total of the year last night on the local floor as they swamped Winston-Salem Teachers, of Winston-Salem, N. C., by a 79-55 count. The victory brought the Bisons' record up all-even in 14 games.

A large crowd saw the locals soar into a 33-23 lead at half time, and in the second half go wild behind the brilliant scoring of its three stars, Capt. Jimmy Parker, Bill Giles and Maurice Jackson. The trio scored 23, 18 and 16 points, respectively.

Cunningham and McCluskey Write Acceptance to C. U.

Stars to Appear Here Saturday Night in Maki Mile, Feature of Catholic U. Indoor Games

"Everyone of the name stars entered in the Maki Mile, added feature in the Catholic University indoor games this Saturday night for the Finnish Relief Fund, has written to Dorsey Griffith expressing their delight at being able to participate for this worthy cause.

Joey McCluskey, former Olympic 10,000-meter champion wrote Griffith, that he was "almost willing to pay" his way just to run in this race. The irrepressible McCluskey, however, added a postscript not to be taken too seriously. Joey did say, however, that he was delighted at the opportunity of running against such a crack field.

"They'll probably make a bum of me," said McCluskey, "but I think there are a couple of races left yet in the old man. Those other guys aren't any spring chickens either so maybe I'll have a chance."

Cunningham, in writing to Arthur J. "Dutch" Bergman, director of athletics, couched his letter in the dignified phrases consistent with his taciturn nature.

"I shall be looking forward to being with you Saturday," said Glenn. "It is a real pleasure to participate in the meet for the Finnish Relief Fund. Even if I were not eager to race—which of course I am—I should be delighted at the opportunity of serving such a worthy cause. It really makes me very happy to have been invited and I am glad you have such a fine field because I am sure the fans will get a real race."

Cunningham has been in Peabody, Kansas, where he is engaged in research work for the University of Kansas. Although he didn't say so in his leiter, friends say the reason for Glenn's poor showing this winter is due to the fact that the Kansas flyer hasn't much chance to train. Glenn, however, stung by the critics who say he is through, has been training diligently the past week for the Maki Mile.

G. W. Frosh Five Defeats Roosevelt

George Washington's high-flying freshmen forged the sixteenth link in its unbroken chain of basektball victories yesterday as Roosevelt High's crack outfit fell before the onslaught of the Little Colonials, 37-27, on the Riders' court.

As early as the first quarter the victors made the game "no contest" as a dazzling G. W. pace gave it an 18-2 lead at the end of the opening period and left Roosevelt a badly discouraged and demoralized team.

Stars of the freshman victory were Milton "Red" Rein and Bob Groetzinger, each of whom scored 10 points.

After the first quarter, Coach Otts Zahn substituted freely, giving every man on his squad an opportunity for action.

The numerous substitutions played havoc with any wholesale scoring and G. W. held a 23-10 lead at halftime.

It was only in the fourth quarter that Roosevelt was able to up its scoring to any degree. Then, with George West and Ernie Travis at the helm, the Riders took advantage of the first team's absence to pull up to 37-27.

Cox, Plummer Mat Bout Gets One Referee

Joe Cox and Lou Plummer will have to be satisfied with just one referee tonight when they step in the ring at Promoter Joe Turner's wrestling emporium at Fourteenth and W streets.

Joe and Lou crashed head-on two weeks ago in a match presided over by two referees. Each was given a personal count, but it cost Turner twice as much, therefore, Casey Berger will have to divide his attention between the two of them tonight.

Lou and Joe have wrestled so many times now that they can always feel a toss into the audience coming on. In this way, Joe getting set for Lou's favorite heave, and vice versa, both boys can get more distance and contact more patrons in the outer reaches of the ringside. Both Joe and Lou are old friends of the rows A, B, and C fans by now. Tommy O'Toole and Tommy Rae meet in the semifinal, and the other waltzes will bring out Cliff Olson against Jim Austeri, Ralph Garibaldi against Jim Parker and Jim Coffield against Abie Coleman.

Industrial League Meets Saturday

The strongest sandlot baseball circuit in the city, the Industrial League, will meet Saturday night at 1004 Vermont avenue for its first get-together of the year. Schedule and by-laws will be drawn up under the direction of President Bill Flester.

The Industrial League last year sent its titlist, Heurich Brewers, into the National Amateur Federation tournament, where it went to the semifinals.

Brewers Win, Tie for Lead

Troy, N. Y., Feb. 28.—In a rough and wild game the Washington Heurich Brewers, of Washington, D. C., tonight defeated the Troy-Celtics, 39-32, and gained a tie with the Philadelphia Sphas for the American Basketball League's lead.

As a result of tonight's game the first four American League clubs now stand as follows:

	W.	L.	Pct.
WASHINGTON	18	13	.580
Philadelphia	18	13	.580
Troy-Celtics	19	15	.559
New York	15	14	.517

In the heat of tonight's game Moe Dubilier, brilliant Heurich forward and a former Troy player, and Bernie Fliegel, of the Troy-Celtics, were principals in a rough and tumble fight that delayed the game for several minutes. Police were needed to restore order.

D. C. Bowlers To Undergo Big Week-End

Lucille Young Sweep At Chevy Chase Tops Local Pin Program

The biggest tournament week-end of the season confronts District bowlers Saturday and Sunday, with dubs, near-stars and stars all shooting for sweepstakes prizes in four tourneys.

Locally, the fourth annual Lucille Young near-star sweepstakes for women is carded at Chevy Chase Ice Palace alleys Saturday afternoon and night while at the same time the men will honor Takoma Alley Manager Dutch Sherbahn in a handicap event at the Takoma pin plant.

Galt Davis will take his Rosslyn teams to Winchester Saturday to defend their men's and women's State championships, while seven other teams will represent the Rosslyn alleys in the team play and the individuals in singles, doubles and all-events.

Smith in Action

Sunday Hokie Smith, four-times a sweepstakes winner this year, three of them in Baltimore, will lead the District bowlers in the South Atlantic singles at Victoria Recreation Alleys in Baltimore.

The Lucille Young event at Ice Palace, honoring the recent winner of the Lorraine Gulli sweeps, is open to all women bowlers with averages of 104 and under, through February 17. The entrants must bring certified letters from league scorers to that effect. The six-game even will be run in two shifts of three games, the afternoon times at 2:30 and 3:45 and in the night and final sessions at 7:15 and 8:30.

First prize of $50 is guaranteed, while the entrance fee, including games, is $4. Out of town bowlers are expected from Maryland and Virginia. The event is being held at Chevy Chase for the first time, with Convention Hall the former site.

Johnny Burger, the fire-ball bowler from the host alleys, will be on hand to defend his Sherbahn Sweepstakes crown that also carries a first prize of at least $50, any more depending on the entries.

Two Shifts Planned

The 10-game tourney will be run in two shifts, afternoon five-game blocks at 2 and 4 p. m. and the night blocks at 7 and 9. The handicap limit is 130, with the maximum allowance 20 pins per game.

Boys and junior bowlers from the Rosslyn alleys will go to Winchester tomorrow in quest of State crowns, while on Saturday the three-day event will end with the Rosslyn delegation, the most feared outfit of the visiting pinmen. Astor Clarke, Perce Wolfe and their teammates rolled a record total in winning the men's crown last year, while Lucy Rose, Blanche Wootton & Co. walked off with the women's honors. The Health Center alleys is the site.

Rosslyn will be the scene of next week's major event, the old Dominion Sweepstakes, March 9-10, with a host of merchandising prizes supplementing the usual cash prizes.

Manager Earl Stocking is taking entries at Silver Spring for the annual St. Patrick's mixed doubles at the Silver Spring alleys, March 16. The event is the outstanding mixed tourney of the season.

NATS' ROOKIE PARADE

At Orlando Camp

(This is another of a series of sketches on the rookies seeking jobs with the Nats at their Orlando training camp.)

LOUIS THUMAN—PITCHER

The Nats have a potential favorite ladies day favorite in the young Baltimorian who answers to the name of Louis Thuman and who is now a dark-horse candidate for a pitching job on the Washington club. The handsome-featured Thuman, tall and husky, raises the average beauty of the Nats by several degrees.

Down in Orlando the Washington bosses don't know exactly how well the young man can patch. That's what they want to learn. They have a suspicion that he can get by with his fast ball despite his meager experience. At any rate he is slated for a berth no lower than Charlotte in the Nats' farm system.

Scout Joe Cambria found him on the Baltimore sandlots, where he was playing after hours when his work was done at the Glenn Martin airplane factory, where he was a riveter. Cambria scouted him as a third baseman.

But when Cambria saw Thuman rifle the ball to first and then watched him show no ability to run after reaching base, he told the young fellow:

"Your speed is in your arm, son. You ought to be a pitcher."

So at Greenville last year, in the Sally League, Thuman was a pitcher. Despite the fact that he won only 8 games while losing 15 the Nats thought enough of his fast ball to bring him to Griffith Stadium for a late-season tryout.

He broke into three games for the Nats last season as a relief pitcher and did well enough to be tabbed as a prospect.

The only thing between him and a big league job is what Thuman regards as a temporary lack of control. "If I can improve that," he says, "I think I can give the hitters trouble with my fast one."

LOUIS THUMAN

Maryland, Washington and Lee In Conference Feature Tonight

Terps Meet Generals at 9:30 in Raleigh; Leave This Morning for Annual Tournament

Maryland University courtmen, assigned the final game in tonight's first round of the Southern Conference tourney in Raleigh, N. C., were scheduled to leave College Park this morning for the tourney. They were originally scheduled to leave yesterday but remained at home after hearing of their late starting time.

The Terps first-round opponent in the three-day tourney will be seeded Washington and Lee, twice victor over the Terps already this season. They meet at 9:30 p. m. Maryland hasn't played for a week, ending its regular season last Thursday with a victory over V. M. I. that clinched a place in the tourney.

Ten players made the trip, the starting lineup of George DeWitt, the District's leading college scorer, Milton Mulitz, Pershing Mondorff, Mearle DuVall and Bill Rea, plus Leon Vannais, Charle Weidinger, Arthur Woodward, Gene Ochsenreiter and Adam Bengoechea. Coaches Burton Shipley, Jack Faber and Manager Jimmy Heil made up the remainder of the party.

Richmond, that won a place on the toss of a coin, meets Wake Forest in the first game today at 3 p. m., with Duke and The Citadel clashing at 4:30. The first game of the night session finds North Carolina facing Clemson's defending champions.

Hurt Eagles Ready for Braves Game

Three Washington Eagle players, damaged physically in the team's 5-5 deadlock with the Baltimore Orioles Tuesday, will be back in the line-up tomorrow night when the local hockeyists face the Valleyfield Braves at Riverside Stadium, it was announced yesterday by the club physician, Dr. Roy Dunmire.

Dr. Dunmire gave checkups to Paul Courteau, Bruce McKillop and Ross Knipfel and decided their injuries would be healed enough for them to see action against the powerful Canadian club. Wingman Courteau burst a blood vessel in his arm; McKillip suffered a cut over the eye, and Knipfel took a general belaboring Tuesday.

In anticipation of meeting the Braves, who hold the Provincial Senior League title, Coach Redvers Mackenzie last night took several of his players to Baltimore to scout the Canadians in their meeting with the Orioles. Mackenzie particularly wants to win tomorrow for his team has lost three of its four outings against Canadian teams this year.

Beaten in its first game of this Eastern League swing by River Vale, Valleyfield nevertheless boasts several of the finest amateur players in the world in its line-up. Best of these is probably Johnn Lacelle, a goalie from Ottawa, who represented Lake Placid in the last Olympic games.

Eastern League statistics released yesterday included three Eagles in the first ten of the scoring column. Les Ramsay is in tenth spot for the first time, whole Hal Dewey remains in fifth and Roy Covert in sixth. The Eagles' Courteau is just under Vitale, of Atlantic City, in the high penalties column.

Sailing Association Elects New Officers

The Potomac River Sailing Association got together for the first time this season last night at the Capital Yacht Club, elected officers for the coming year and listened to reports of its various committee heads.

Judge Prentice Edrington, owner of the Lady Avon and holder of the river championship for 20-footers, was elected commodore. Vice commodore was George Dankers. Secretary-Treasurer Arthur Clephane and Recording Secretary H. G. Busher were unanimously reelected.

Little Hoyas Rally to Beat Episcopal

Georgetown Prep basketball five overcame a first-half lead to defeat Episcopal High School, of Alexandria, 38 to 31, yesterday at Prep. The victory was the twelfth in 18 games this season for Georgetown.

The game was one of the best of the year for both teams.

Maemante Wins Hialeah Juvenile Championship in Drive

Equals Best Time Made At Meeting

Jockey Flinchum Is Shaken Up as His Mount Falls; Double B. Winner

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 28.—Although she had won only one of her six previous races Dewitt Page's Maemante today staked her claim to the Florida 2-year-old title when she defeated eight of the best "babies" on the grounds in the eighth Hialeah Juvenile championship of 3 furlongs. Coupled with the more highly regarded Maegay, Maemante came from close off the pace to take the $2,650 major share of the purse by a length and a half. Her time of 0:33 1-5 equaled the best time made at the meeting for the distance.

Double Call, from the King Farm, received the place in a photo battle. Mrs. H. Good's Red Mantilla, heroine of the Everglades Stakes for fillies, barely saved the show from Louis B. Mayer's Painted Veil. Victor Emanuel's Omission, winner of the Seminole Stakes, broke slowly and finished sixth in the role of favorite.

Takes the Lead

Red Mantilla rushed into a narrow lead in the run for positions, with Double Call, Maemante and Maegay closest in attendance. Willie Lee Johnson worked hard on Maemante in the closing stages and the bay daughter of Ariel-Flamante showed her quality by running over the two in front of her. Double Call barely outlasted Red Mantilla, while Painted Veil was gaining at the finish. Maegay was a close fifth, with Omission, Dark Mischief, Blue Lily—the latter slow to break—and Five Fifty bringing up the rear as named.

Jack Flinchum, riding sensation of the meeting, escaped serious injury when his mount in the fourth race, Rita Z., got caught in a jam soon after the start and fell in a cloud of dust. The boy was shaken up enough to cancel his remaining mounts of the day.

Double B. Winner

Double B., won the race by two lengths under strong handling by Ruperto Donoso. Bright and Early, the choice, fought it out with the winner almost from the start, with Double B., having the more left for the final drive. The $13.90 for two shot scored by two lengths, while Bright and Early beat Idle Elf by three lengths for second money.

The first event saw the 5-year-old mare, Day Is Done, staging one of her typical stretch rallies to score a nose triumph in sensational style. Almost 20 lengths out of it in the first quarter mile of the 7-furlong journey, the $20.80 for two hazard just got up on the outside to gain a photo decision over the tired pacemaker, Donna Lopez. Sugarage was beaten a length and a half for the place.

Travel Agent, a colt that has been "dying" in front, reversed the procedure in the 6-furlong second race and got up in a rousing finish to register by three-quarters of a length under Jack Flinchum. Fumble was an easy second, with Florence M. 5 lengths behind. Fickle Fairy retired after stealing a long lead. Fumble then got to the front, but he could not stave off Travel Agent's powerful rally. The winner returned $15.20.

Md. Horse Breeders Elect L. W. Shepherd

Annapolis, Feb. 28 (AP).—L. Widerman Shepherd, of Harwood, was re-elected president of the Southern Maryland Horse Breeders Association today.

Other officers named were Benjamin Watkins 3d, first vice president; Orlando Ridout, second vice president; Isaac Shepherd, secretary, and Mrs. W. O. Welch, treasurer.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DAY IS DONE, $20.80, $10.30, $4.90; DONNA LOPEZ, $11.00, $4.90; SUGARAGE, $2.60.

DAY IS DONE began to move up gradually on the extreme outside, closed with a rush through the stretch and wore DONNA LOPEZ down in the final stride. DONNA LOPEZ opened up a good lead in the early running, but faltered suddenly right at the end. SUGARAGE went in nearest pursuit of the leader, but hung in the final drive.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:36. Off 2:37. Winner, River to winner, $775; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:12⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRAVEL AGENT, $15.20, $6.50, $4.70; FUMBLE, $6.00, $4.10; FLORENCE M., $4.90.

TRAVEL AGENT worked his way up on the outside, and finished gamely through the stretch to wear FUMBLE down in the final drive. FUMBLE moved up fast after the first furlong, took command, but then faltered. FLORENCE M., forward factor from the start, faltered through the stretch. FICKLE FAIRY broke down through the stretch.

Daily Double, DAY IS DONE and TRAVEL AGENT, Paid $165.90

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:07. Off 3:07½. Winner, Charles M. Theriot's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCOTCH BREAD, $11.50, $4.00, $2.90; THE LOOM, $3.40, $2.70; SATIATION (entry), $2.90.

SCOTCH BREAD went into a good lead, faltered slightly through the stretch, but continued gamely to outlast THE LOOM. The latter, repeatedly pulled up, slipped through on the inside entering the stretch and finished gamely. He ran as if the best. SATIATION, prominent all the way, held on with good courage. PARI-LEROY closed strong.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 3:37. Off 3:38½. Winner, P. J. McConnell's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOUBLE B., $13.90, $6.70, $5.80; BRIGHT AND EARLY, $4.10, $3.30; IDLE ELF, $6.40.

DOUBLE B. responded gamely to pressure through the stretch and shook off BRIGHT AND EARLY. The latter assumed a short lead on the turn, but was no match for the winner in the final drive. IDLE ELF worked her way up steadily on the inside and outlasted JOHN ALLEN in the final drive. JOHN ALLEN was forced wide entering the stretch.

FIFTH RACE—Three furlongs. Purse, $2,500 added. For 2-year-olds. The Hialeah Juvenile Championship Stake. Start bad. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 4:00½. Off 4:11½. Winner, Maemer Farm's b. f. (2), by Ariel—Flamante. Trained by G. E. Phillips. Value to winner, $2,650; second, $500; third, $250; fourth, $100. Time, 0:33⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAEMANTE (entry), $17.40, $6.90, $4.60; DOUBLE CALL, $6.50, $4.60; RED MANTILLA, $6.50.

MAEMANTE secured clear passage on the inside and maintained his advantage under vigorous pressure. DOUBLE CALL went close to the pace throughout, but faltered in the stretch run. RED MANTILLA took command in the opening furlong, but bore out and troubled DOUBLE CALL. MAEGAY also bore out in the last quarter. OMISSION was bumped after the start.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:36. Off at once. Winner, T. Bieber's ch. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CONFIADO, $3.80, $3.00, $2.40; DNEIPER, $7.80, $3.80; FLYING LEE, $2.80.

CONFIADO, showing good speed, set a steady pace, began to loaf through the stretch and had to be vigorously urged to stave off DNEIPER'S bid. The latter swung to the outside after being rated off the leaders and closed with a bold challenge. FLYING LEE, close up in the early stages, faltered through the stretch. BUSY MORN weakened when the real issue came.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:06. Off 5:06½. Winner, Woolford Farm's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OAK PARK, $7.30, $3.80, $2.70; DIABROOM, $4.20, $2.80; TURF STING, $2.50.

OAK PARK, under slight restraint until leaving the backstretch, opened up a winning lead rounding the turn, but faltered through the stretch and was under extreme ursing to win. DIABROOM, going in his best form, finished gamely, but could not overhaul the winner. TURF STING was blocked twice in the run down the backstretch.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:36½. Off 5:37. Winner, Tomara Stable's b. or br. g. Selections at Hialeah Park.

DEAR AL:

Owners usually give orders to jockeys as to how they want their horses ridden, and when two owners issue almost duplicate instructions, the result is a "Funeral Race," such as turf writers termed the Kentucky Derby of 1891. Kingman, with Isaac Murphy as his jockey, was the even money favorite, and Balgowan, ridden by "Monk" Overton, the second choice. There were two other starters, over a track that was a bit on the slow side. Murphy was told to let Balgowan set the pace for him, and not to mind the other two horses; just to keep in back of Balgowan. Overton was instructed to stay back of Kingman for about a mile and a quarter, the race then being at a mile and a half, and not to make a move for leadership until then. They were off—the four of them together—and Murphy immediately started to ease back on Kingman, trying to force Balgowan into the lead. But Overton was easing Balgowan, as Murphy eased Kingman, and the other jockeys, not wishing to set the pace, took back, too. Horses and their jockeys were playing at tog-o'-war. They rambled the first quarter in 33¼ second—atrocious time—with the horses fighting for a chance to run, and the riders fighting to slow them down. Each time one horse poked his head in front, his jockey snatched him back, and the other jockeys also snatched back, trying to avoid leadership.

The half-mile was negotiated in 1:05½, very slow time; the three-quarters was accomplished in 1:53¾, and the mile in 2:01. They had moved almost the entire distance in cavalry formation, and continued so for another quarter of a mile, when the stretch turn was reached, and orders given to both Murphy and Overton required them to proceed to ride their horses to the limit.

Kingman came away rather easily from the group. Balgowan took after him, but Kingman was the better horse, and won by a length. The time for the 12 furlongs was 2:32¼, as compared with Spokane's record performance of 2:34½ 1889. After the race, Dudley Allen, part owner of Kingman, said: "I told my jockey to walk, if Balgowan walked, and he mighty near did it."

Confucius say: HADALAD not half bad. BILL.

First race—Maevic comes from that barn full of fit ones. I like that combination of an outside post position and Jockey Earl Steffen. Red Burr has plenty of speed and is dangerous. Remote Control to take care of the minor award.

Second race—Acquin gets in with 103 pounds and will have Jack Flinchum in the saddle. I'm going to string along. Arch Hero has shown enough to warrant consideration in company of this brand. Kleig Light could be the third one.

Third race—Epical is the class of those gathered for this sprint. Donoso knows how to ride this one and I see no reason for mistakes. Lina's Son has shown speed on occasions. Another mount for young Flinchum and he could take it all. Eli Yaye for the third money.

Fourth race—Blue Leona turned in a fair effort last out and may be ready to turn back these maiden fillies. Woodvale Lass has speed and Anderson's riding will make this filly the one to beat. Mellowmoon has had many chances and could awaken.

Fifth race—Equistone has been rounding into form. Comes from a good barn and will have Meade up. Could be the right one. Dahomey and Liberty Ann to take care of the others.

Sixth race—Lackawanna is well placed in this field. Needs only to run back to good efforts to hang up a set of brackets. Wise Will can better that last considerably and should be in the thick of contention. Room Service likes the long route and the turf course.

Seventh race—Car-Rou appears to have something on these gathered for a distance test. That 107 pounds appears right and Flinchum's riding should help. Totache is improving and could hold High Arch safe for the place award.

Eighth race—Fore Isus seems to be suited in the day's finale. Des Grieux will close fast, as usual. Light weight gives Narise a chance.

Best bet—Lackawanna.

Gains of 1 to 2 Cents A Bushel Offset Loss Of Past Few Days

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 28.—Wheat prices pushed upward almost 2 cents a bushel today, wiping out much of the loss sustained earlier in the week.

Additional large sales of Canadian wheat to Europe, mostly Great Britain, approach of the crop scare season in the domestic belt and damage reports from Europe as well as war news inspired most of the buying.

There was a let-up in receipts at principal markets although the volume was much larger than a week or a year ago. Reports indicated liquidation of loan wheat diminished as a result of the recent price set back but there was enough hedging sales and profit taking to cause frequent reactions of prices. Sale of 50,000 bushels to shippers had a strengthening effect.

An early gain of 1⅝ cent was reduced sharply during subsequent nervous fluctuations but just before the close the market rallied again and final figures, which were 1⅜@1⅛ higher than yesterday, were the best of the session. May closed at $1.03⅝@1.03½ and July at $1.01⅜@1.01½.

Corn closed ½@¾ up, May 56⅞@57, July 57¼@57⅜; oats, ⅜@⅝ higher; rye, ⅜@⅝ up, and lard 5@10 higher.

Steel Industry Capacity Seen Lower in Year

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—The American steel industry's capacity to produce declined during 1939, the American Iron & Steel Institute said today.

While the open-hearth process remained the steel master's favored method for output of ingots, and electric furnace capacity rose to a new record high, Bessemer converters of more than 1,000,000 tons capacity were scrapped.

The industry's ingot capacity by all processes was rated at 80,950,901 net (2,000-pound) tons early, a drop of less than ½ of 1 per cent from 81,238,045 tons a year earlier, which was the highest total on record.

Open hearth furnace capacity set a new peak of 73,343,547 tons, compared with 72,596,153. Electric furnace capacity rose to 1,497,658 net tons of ingots from 1,592,080.

Bessemer converter capacity sank to 6,009,920, the lowest in 40 years, from 7,138,680 at the close of 1938.

Inventories Up 4.7% in Year In 14,177 Stores

Investories of independent retailers in 34 States, based upon reports from 14,177 stores in most kinds of business except stores, rose 4.7 per cent in 1939, according to the Department of Commerce. Sales of the same stores last year were 9.4 per cent higher than a year ago, while sales for the same stores were about 5 per cent ahead of 1938.

Radio and music stores reported the largest increase in inventories last year with an advance of 7.5 per cent. Motor vehicle dealers were next with 7.4 per cent, while beer and liquor stores, package goods, 6.4 per cent, an men's and b 's clothing stores, 6 per cent.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 28.—Demand suddenly expanded around noon in the stock exchange and prices moved briskly forward. Sharp gains in kaffirs followed favorable reaction to the South African budget introduced today. Domestic rails got under way again and coppers moved up under leadership of Rhokana. Industrials steadied after morning irregularity. British government bones canceled early losses, while Japanese loans maintained opening gains.

Paris—Stimulated by a smart run-up in Royal Dutch, bourse prices steadily gained ground today. Closing prices were top for the session. Traders were sympathetic to Winston Churchill's statement the British government will not tolerate a one-way neutrality.

Amsterdam—Fractional losses predominated among domestic issues in a quiet bourse today. Leading industrial and tin shares, however, displayed considerable resistance. American issues moved listlessly.

Liverpool—Cotton futures advanced 1 to 12 points today. Demand was encouraged by firmness at Bombay.

Steels and Aviations in Demand In Moderate Trading; Scandinavian Issues Again Lower

New York, Feb. 28.—An improvement of a tenth of a point in its composite average and a moderate volume of business measuring 567,710 shares was the best the big board could do today. In other words, the character of the stock market has undergone no world-shaking change and the narrow trend of the last few weeks still prevails. Steels did better than the average and the aviations were popular, but other groups did virtually nothing.

Obviously, the price changes of the speculative leaders were mostly fractional. Only one issue included in the list of 15 most active issues closed as much as a point away from Tuesday's final, this being Consolidated Cigar, which advanced a point. Less active stocks to gain a point included Allied Chemical and Commonwealth & Southern preferred, while du Pont was up nearly a point.

There was nothing in all this to call for the printing of any extra editions and those who have labored so long to regulate the financial district should tap themselves on the back for the success club. For they have certainly succeede ; the only trouble is that a little more of the dullness which has featured the stock market since the turn of the year and there won't be much left to regulate. Then the regulators, if they are still residents of Washington after November, will have to turn to greener pastures and bring the weight of their wisdom to bear on some of the less purified fields of our economy.

The indications were that the insurance business was favored by one group as the next guinea pig, but from a New Deal standpoint this investigation has proved to be a dud. The hearings before the T. N. E. C. have been conducted in a fair manner and these companies generally have come away with a blue ribbon, marred only by a few inconsequential points which have made headlines but which have had little fundamental importance.

Public Interest Aroused

The success of the attack on Wall Street, which lasted for seven years, apparently encouraged similar forays on the insurance companies and on business, but whereas the general public did not take it to heart when the financial district was castigated, it is a different matter when a political group takes the cudgel to something in which so many have a direct stake.

There are 69,000 000 policyholders in the United States, according to the insurance companies, and while doubtless this figure contains many duplications, there are still plenty of individuals who would register their feelings at the polls if they suspected any political party of attempting to do to the insurance companies what has been done to Wall Street.

The field of business there is an equally powerful group. The National Association of Manufacturers Tuesday night honored 101 inventors and research workers, part of 500 such "modern pioneers," who have refused to listen to the philosophy of a static society. Companies which these men work for employ 10,000,000 wage earners, each of which has a stake in progress and each of which knows from the experience of his own company that the door of opportunity is not closed. These companies employ about one-fourth of those gainfully employed in the country, and the percentage would be larger if Government workers are omitted. This makes another potent group to reckon with if the attacks on business are to be continued.

Loft a Feature

Loft was the individual feature of today's trading, reaching a new high. This followed bidding for Pepsi Cola in the counter market, which went to a new high at 300, apparently not being affected by a decision won last week by Coca Cola in Baltimore against certain other Cola manufacturers. Pan American led the aviations with a small gain and Interborough was well supported in the traction division.

Scandinavians Drop

In quiet listed bond dealings, Scandinavian securities were hard hit today, while most other departments of the market disclosed dull conditions. Some of the local traction issues again were in demand in response to unification developments. Best grade investment issues were traded lightly, owing to the several important new issues considered imminent. Turnover was $5,410,000, which butters few Wall street parsnips.

Finland 6s fell only 1½ on the latest Russian drive through that country, but the trading consisted of a single bond. Norwegian issues were down 2 to 5 points, and Danish issues fell 1 to 3 points, owing to fears that these countries may become involved in warfare. Some German bonds reflected inquiry, and Canadians were better, but Australians remained uncertain. The Belgian and Italian groups were neglected. Latin-American issues were idle and mostly lower.

Interborough and Manhattan Railway bonds were higher by fractions to two points, notwithstanding a statement by Comptroller McGoldrick that the city would disappoint speculators in traction securities. Bonds of the Brooklyn Transit System were quiet and irregular. Speculative railroad bonds were in demand, although gains were almost entirely fractional. Holding company bonds and other special groups were steady to firm.

Long term United States Treasury issues held around previous levels, with an exchange offering on June notes and called 3⅜ per cent bonds now held to be a matter of days. Best grade corporate bonds were well maintained.

Cotton Prices Hover Near 2-Year Highs

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 28.—Cotton futures hovered around 2½-year highs today without getting up enough steam to break through. Final prices were 5 points lower to 2 higher.

Bombay was a brisk buyer at the start, following a precedent set in recent sessions. Demand from India, brokers explained, appeared due to straddle operations—purchases here against sales in Bombay. Bombay prices have been rising faster than New York lately, thus narrowing local premiums.

This support faded soon and prices gave ground when sales in March and May hit the ring. Locals sold and hedge offerings appeared.

Trade interests, who in the past month have done much to support prices, were chary.

D. C. Loan League Adds New Member

Northwestern Federal Savings and Loan Association was elected a member of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League at the regular monthly meeting yesterday at the Raleigh Hotel. This brings the league membership to 24 representing total resources in excess of $142,000,000.

The Northwestern Federal was established in 1901 and became a member of the Federal Association in May, 1938. The latest report reflects a balance sheet in excess of $3,300,000.

A. D. Theobald, assistant vice president of the U. S. League, made the principal address. He discussed "What Makes the Executive."

William N Payne, jr., president, welcomed several distinguished guests including: Ward B. Whitlock, Springfield, Ill., a past president of the U. S. League and secretary of the Illinois group; Paul Endicott, Pomona, Calif., first vice-president and Morton Bodfish, Chicago executive vice president of national body.

Net Reported Higher

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Penick & Ford, Ltd., Inc., makers of sugar cane and corn products, and subsidiaries reported today for 1939 net profit of $1,456,456, equal to $3.95 a share on the common stock, compared with $1,139,921, or $3.09 a share, in 1938.

Outlook Favorable, Bankers' Poll Shows

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—The business outlook is "predominantly favorable" according to the current issue of Banking, official organ of the American Bankers Association.

Banking's poll of 3,000 bank officers in various sections of the country showed 47 per cent reporting business improving, 33 per cent reported conditions static, and 20 per cent reported a decline. This represented a somewhat less reassuring picture than the previous month's poll, the magazine said.

U. S. Gold Imports Continue Heavy; Swiss in Lead

Gold Imports totaled $57,500,834 in the week ended February 21, an increase of $2,300,000 over the previous week's total.

The Commerce Department said principal shipments included $6,210,301 from the Netherlands, $4,026,047 from Norway, $6,866,390 from Sweden, $9,334,996 from Switzerland, $3,775,452 from the United Kingdom, $3,127,353 from Canada $7,086,729 from India, $4,918,846 from Japan and $7,949,610 from South Africa.

Gold deposited under earmark by foreign central banks and governments in the Federal Reserve banks increased $18,678,665 during the week, raising the total of such deposits to about $1,128,000,000.

Exports amounted to $4,012 of gold and $40,461 of silver.

Standard Brands Promotes 2 Aides

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Standard Brands, Inc., which has been reputedly making extensive internal management changes with a view to greater production efficiency, today announced the elevation of two new vice presidents, following a meeting of the board of directors.

The new vice presidents are Albert R. Fleischmann, manager of the Chicago division, and John W. Luce, manager in charge of production of all products.

Fleischmann is a cousin of the late Julius Fleischmann, who was owner and president of Fleischmann Yeast Co., which became a part of Standard Brands.

BE SNOBBISH ABOUT IT

Good advice—when it comes to picking whiskies. So why be content with anything less than America's most distinctive whiskies—Carstairs? If you're "The Man Who Cares" you'll appreciate Carstairs. And your friends will appreciate your good judgment of whiskies. Carstairs has been a name of character since 1788.

Brewers to Open Play-offs Sunday

A grand opening of the American Basketball League's championship playoff series is planned for Heurich gymnasium Sunday afternoon when the Washington Heurich Brewers entertain the powerful Troy-Celtics, of Troy, N. Y., at 2:30 o'clock.

Word was received yesterday that President John J. O'Brien and other American Basketball League officials will be in attendance and that O'Brien will toss up the first ball.

Tonight the Brewers move on to Norristown, Pa., for an exhibition with the Philadelphia Sphas and on Saturday night they are to close their regulation American League season in Philadelphia's Convention Hall against the Baltimore Clippers in one end of a triple-header.

Joe Turner Wants Scott To Live in D. C.

Promoter Joe Turner and Gabe Menendez are preparing what they hope will be a successful campaign to induce Buddy Scott to make Washington his fight headquarters after his ten-round battle Monday night in Turner's Arena with Nick Fiorentino.

Scott would be the first of a general exodus of well-known fighters and managers back to the Capital, in the plan of Turner and Menendez.

"If we're going to take boxing back to the heights of former years, we've got to have fighters and managers living in and operating out of Washington—bring 'em down from New York," Menendez insisted.

Scott, who piled up a string of 17 straight victories in Washington, had a large following here before pulling out for more lucrative boxing fields.

Striving busily to get a firm foothold before the outdoor season sets in with competition in the fight business from Severine G. Leoffler, in Riverside Stadium, and Goldie Ahearn, in the ball park, Turner and Menendez are trying to round up all of the Capital's "prodigals" and bring in new faces.

Harry Raskin, well-known local manager, who left Washington several months ago in disgust with the local fight conditions, also is on the "must-get" list of Turner and Menendez. Scott will return to Washington tomorrow for the first time in over a year to finish his training with Ken Overlin and Al Gilbert as sparmates.

Rookie Sid Hudson Pleases Nats' Camp

are flying into the face of precedent in the case of young Hudson, and anticipating that he will be ready to pitch big-league ball this season despite his meager experience. "We're going along with him until he shows us otherwise, at least," said Harris.

Old Fox Griffith, while expressing his admiration for Hudson's obvious talent, hestitated in going far out on a limb for the lad.

"I'll have to see him pitch first with men on bases. That's when you'll bring out the stuff that's in a pitcher," said Griffith. "With nobody on base, I could still pitch in this league," cracked the Nats' owner. "Wait until Hudson is forced to do without a wind-up. Wait until he has to shorten his delivery and hold men close to the bags. That's the test of a pitcher. If he can pitch with men on bases, he'll be a good pitcher."

The official feeling toward Hudson has been apparent in one respect, however. Yesterday the Nats' bosses ordered a half-dozen rookies to move out of the side street boarding house in which 20 of them had been quartered, into the Nats' downtown hotel on Orlando's main street. The rookies promoted we were such as Jimmy Wasdell, Joe Krakauskas, Jake Early, Almon Williams and Paul Gehrman, all of whom are regarded as certain to stick with the club.

Still in the boarding house are Class B league pitchers, such as Early Wynn and Bucky Jacobs, but Sid Hudson, a D leaguer last year, was among the group ordered to the hotel. There is no mistaking that he is the pet of the Nats' bosses.

$105,000,000 Issues Offered By Bethlehem

Interest Rates Range From 0.5 to 2.6% For New Bonds

Bethlehem Steel Corporation is offering today a total of $105,000,000 in new issues through a group of 136 investment banking houses.

They consist of $30,000,000 consolidated mortgage 20-year sinking fund, 3 per cent bonds, series G, due February 1, 1960, priced at 98 per cent and interest; $40,000,000 consolidated 25-year sinking fund 3¼ per cent bonds, series H, due February 1, 1965, priced at 100 per cent and interest; and $35,000,000 serial debentures, in lots of $3,500,000 with maturity dates ranging from March 1, 1941 and each succeeding March 1 thereafter through 1950, and with interest from .50 per cent to 2.60 per cent, and are priced at 100 per cent and interest.

According to the registration statement the net proceeds from the sale of the securities will be used, together with funds to be supplied by Bethlehem Steel Co. (Pennsylvania), for the redemption on or before July 1, 1940 of $50,390,000 of series D bonds and $50,342,000 of series E bonds outstanding.

The prospectus states that to facilitate the offering it is intended to stabilize the prices of the securities. This is not an assurance, it states, that the prices will be stabilized, or that the stabilizing, if commenced, may not be discontinued at any time.

Among the 136 underwriters are Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Smith, Barney & Co., Mellon Securities Corporation, Harriman, Ripley & Co., Inc., The First Boston Corporation and Union Securities Corporation.

D. C. Symphony Back From Tour Through South

The National Symphony Orchestra was back home yesterday, its nine-day tour of the South ended.

The orchestra received enthusiastic receptions at concert stops in five States, C. C. Cappel, manager, reported. Several of the engagements were at wintering places in Florida, where the orchestra and conductor, Dr. Hans Kindler, renewed acquaintances with music lovers they previously had met in visits to Northern cities.

Next Sunday afternoon Dr. Kindler will present Sigurd Rascher, of Sweden, saxophone virtuoso, as soloist.

Jury Awards $6,200 To Traffic Victim

A District Court jury in Justice Proctor's court yesterday awarded $6,200 to John Seymour, of 602 B street southeast, for injuries suffered in an automobile accident in August, 1937.

Seymour claimed that the automobile of James M. Warvin, 1204 Holbrooke street northwest, struck him on the Jefferson Davis highway near Fifteenth street, Arlington, and that he suffered a fractured right leg and other injuries. Attorney Garland E. Taylor represented Seymour.

SUPERMAN — A new Nero Wolf story, "Over My Dead Body," starts in Wednesday's Post — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

AND NOW—THE MAIN EVENT! TWO IRRESPONSIBLE, GROWN-UP MEN BEHAVING LIKE CHILDREN!
GO ON—FIGHT!
B-BUT I DON'T WANT TO FIGHT!
YOU DON'T UNDERSTAND, WE DON'T BATTLE. WE HAVE OTHERS DO OUR FIGHTING FOR US.
START SOCKING—OR I'LL CLEAN UP BOTH OF YOU MYSELF!
I-I GUESS WE'D BETTER...
IF YOU DON'T HIT ME HARD, I WON'T HIT YOU HARD.
AND SO AT THE BEHEST OF SUPERMAN, THE TWO MEN RESPONSIBLE FOR THE WAR ATTEMPT TO FIGHT—BUT SUCCEED ONLY IN MAKING THEMSELVES RIDICULOUS!
C-CAREFUL YOU DON'T KNOCK MY BRIDGE LOOSE...
HAH! I ALWAYS SUSPECTED FROM THE NEWSREELS THAT YOU HAD FALSE TEETH!

WINNIE WINKLE — A new Nero Wolf story, "Over My Dead Body," starts in Wednesday's Post — BY BRANNER

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, WINNIE, DARLING!
OH, BILL, YOU DIDN'T FORGET! I'M SO HAPPY!
I AM CONGRATULATING YOU ON BIRTHDAY, TOO, WINNIE!
MAY I GET AN ADVANCE OF $5 ON MY SALARY, PLEASE?
OKAY! BUT YOU'LL ONLY HAVE $10 COMING TO YOU!
MAY I PRESENT THIS SMALL TOKEN OF MY GRATEFUL AFFECTION ON THIS ANNIVERSARY OF YOUR NATAL DAY!
THANK YOU, OLD-TIMER, BUT YOU SHOULDN'T HAVE SPENT ANY MONEY ON ME!
HE'S A SWELL OLD FELLOW!
BUT HE'S GETTING MY NANNYGOAT WIT' HIS BIG WORDS! 'CONGRASTILATIONS' IS BIG ENOUGH WORD FOR ANYBODY TO SAY ON BIRTHDAYS, BUT IS NOT BIG ENOUGH FOR OLDEN-TIMER!

MR. AND MRS. — A new Nero Wolf story, "Over My Dead Body," starts in Wednesday's Post — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL AND ELLISON HOOVER

I'M POSITIVELY ASHAMED OF OUR ASHCAN. IT'S THE WORST ON THE BLOCK
OH, YEAH?
YES, AND I'VE ASKED YOU TIME AND AGAIN TO BUY A NEW ONE
I KNOW YOU HAVE AND I WON'T DO IT
AND WHY NOT, MAY I ASK?
BECAUSE SO LONG AS OUR ASHCAN IS THE WORST ON THE BLOCK, NOBODY'LL STEAL IT

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — A new Nero Wolf story, "Over My Dead Body," starts in Wednesday's Post — BY CLIFFORD McBRIDE

NOW WHO COULD BE HONKING AT THE GATE ON A NIGHT LIKE THIS. IT SOUNDS IMPORTANT. I'D BETTER GO AND SEE.
HONK HONK HONK
SORRY TO BOTHER YOU, PAL, BUT I'M HAVING MOTOR TROUBLE. WONDER IF YOU'D FETCH ME A LITTLE WATER AND FILL MY RADIATOR.

NED BRANT—A Story of College Athletics — A new Nero Wolf story, "Over My Dead Body," starts in Wednesday's Post — BY BOB ZUPPKE

BITTERSWEET BERTHA, I WANT YOU TO LET ME TAKE YOU TO THE CARTER COLLEGE DANCE
OH, MR. BRANT—YOU SHOULD NOT MAKE FUN OF ME—IT'S TRUE THAT MY FAMILY HAS BEEN HIT HARD—
NOTHING LIKE THAT, BE SURE—AFTER ALL, I'M ONE OF THE RISING YOUNG ASH HAULERS OF CARTERVILLE—I REALLY WANT YOU TO COME
A COLLEGE DANCE—THINK OF IT! BITTERSWEET BERTHA AT A COLLEGE DANCE!
BUT I COULDN'T—I HAVE NO GOWN—AND IT'S BEEN YEARS SINCE I DANCED
BUD AND I WILL TEACH YOU THE NEW STEPS—AND WE WILL FURNISH THE CLOTHES
QUIET! HERE COMES VAN CUSHWAY, THE SNOB!
THIS MAY MEAN THE END OF OUR LITTLE PLAN, RIGHT HERE!

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

From a player who once lost an "International Championship" at Bermuda, with his wife as partner, because the opponents "were too dumb to open the bidding and go set as the rest of the players in that position," comes today's hand. Contributor H. W. S., of Knoxville, Tenn., was neither too dumb nor too timid to bid; he reached right out for a "save" at seven diamonds and, due to a fortunate opening lead, lived to chalk up a grand slam, doubled.

Today's Hand

North-South Vulnerab'e.

SOUTH DEALER

	♠ 4 2 ♡ Q J 10 7 6 5 3 ◇ None ♣ 10 9 4 3
♠ J 10 6 5 ♡ 2 ◇ 7 5 3 ♣ A Q 8 6 2	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ None ♡ 8 ◇ A Q J 10 9 8 6 4 2 ♣ K J 7
	♠ A K Q 9 8 7 3 ♡ A K 9 4 ◇ K ♣ 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♡	4 ◇
6 ♠	Double	Pass	7 ◇
Double	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead ♠ K.

The cards and the none-too-expert bidding by North-South are shown in the box. Here is what H. W. S. says:

"North and South between them had more hearts than spades, but I, at East, had no spades, my partner having four of them. South opened by leading a spade, and it was a showdown for a grand slam at diamonds against a hand which had made an original two bid.

"When I bid the grand slam in diamonds, I expected, of course, to go down one or two, but took the chance. North and South could have made a grand slam in hearts unless I had opened a club. A little slam at spades would have been set."

Today's Radio Highlights

Jessica Dragonette, lovely soprano of the radio and concert stage, joins Lanny Ross in his afternoon program, singing "Alice Blue Gown." Miss Dragonette sang the role of Princess Glory opposite the Prince Charming of Ross in the cartoon feature, "Gulliver's Travels"—WJSV, 2 p. m.

The 100 Men of Melody, Raymond Paige and his swing orchestra and choir, the Westinghouse Radio Orchestra, Deems Taylor and Milton Cross make Musical Americana a varied and pleasant half hour—WMAL, 8 p. m.

The elusive and ad-libbing Mr. John Barrymore promises definitely to appear on George Jessel's variety program. Scheduled for the microphone several weeks ago, the Great Profile was forced to postpone his broadcast until tonight—WRC, 8 p. m.

Dick Powell, singing star of the screen, makes a guest appearance on the Good News program tonight, a week before taking over the permanent duties as master of ceremonies on that hour—WRC, 9 p. m.

Major Bowes dedicates his Amateur Hour to the city of Bellingham, Washington—WJSV, 9 p. m.

Jose Iturbi, distinguished conductor-pianist, leads the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra. Piatgorsky, noted 'cellist, is the soloist—WMAL, 9 p. m.

That rapid-fire raconteur and crooner par ezcellence, Bing Crosby, and his bazooka-playing running-mate, Mr. Burns, welcome Brian Donlevy, Hollywood bad man, and starlet Patricia Morrison to the Music Hall—WRC, 10 p. m.

Several familiar tunes are featured on Henry Weber's concert revue. Harold Bauer, distinguished pianist, plays Beethoven's Emperor Concerto, Kathryn Witwer sings Strauss' "Tales of the Vienna Woods" and the orchestra and octet offer Sir Edward Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance"—WOL, 10:45 p. m.

I can think of no greater millstone to hang around a tenor's neck than the words "romantic singer," but CBS's Jerry Cooper is overcoming it nicely as you will see and hear beginning Friday at the Earle.

When Cooper inaugurated his career some loathsome press agent tied that tag to him and he's never been able to shake it loose, although he would probably prefer almost anything else. He has wavy hair, two eyes, two ears, a nose and a mouth, and thereby came by the "romantic singer" title. As I understand those things, that's merely standard equipment with most singers, romantic or not.

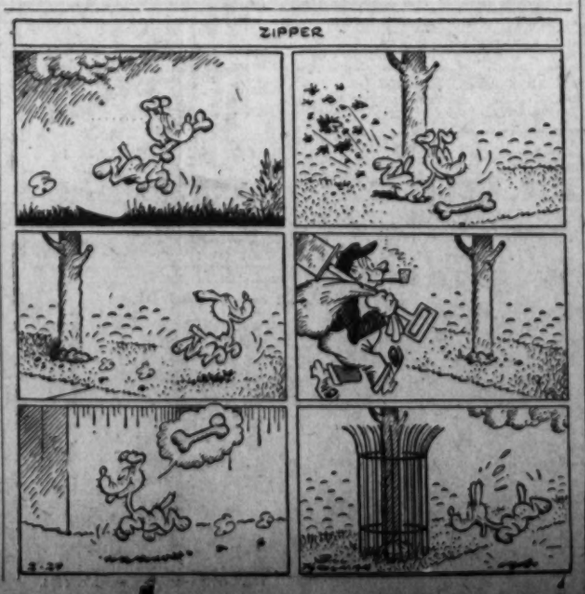
Jerry was once a ball player, at which time he was never called the "romantic first sacker." In fact in his native New Orleans he was just known as "that first sacker," a fact which eventually led to his working in a bank. He was replenishing the banking industry's definition of a salary with a little radio singing (which is doing it the hard way) and while crooning into a New Orleans microphone he was heard by orchestra leader Roger Wolfe Kahn.

Young Mr. Kahn said young Mr. Cooper was good, and on the strength of that young Mr. Cooper booked the first available accommodations under a Southern Railroad cattle car and rode to New York on the rods, breaking the monotony with a little thumb work on the highways.

Emil Coleman, an orchestra leader who spends most of his time leading a band in the more expensive New York Hostelries, as they call those boob traps, heard Cooper sing and said he was good, even as had Mr. Kahn. Coleman, however, proved he thought Cooper was good by the simple expedient of hiring him.

Coleman's band was heard over the CBS network, and Cooper with it. Suddenly large groups of talent scouts, booking agents and other theater plant life swooped down upon Coleman's tenor and launched him on a career in the theater, the nightclubs and the radio.

Since then Jerry has been doing very well at all three as you will see next week.



"I Take This Man"

BY ANNE TEDLOCK BROOKS

Chapter 14

SHE PACKED quickly and set her alarm for 4 in the morning. "It is unbelievable. It all seems like a dream and I have just been on a trip," she told herself.

Yet, she knew that it was different. There was her marriage. From that time forth her life was new. Alan was in her thoughts constantly. Even when she was thinking of other things, he lingered at the back of her mind, easily brought to the fore.

She placed her last letter to him on top of the pile. There would be others, of course, written in her hotel room and she would bring them back with her.

She had written him that she had made her decision to go back to help Cary, after giving it a week's thought, that she felt that he would want her to go, and finally that she was going with memories of their last days close to her heart.

She slept but little. She did not send a cablegram to Cary. She would not bother him. It would be fun to be working at her old desk when he appeared day after tomorrow!

The next morning when she arrived at the harbor the great clipper was in and ready on schedule. Brenda had been checked in, her belt adjusted, and she was waiting her first ocean flight.

The great ship lay at anchor out in the bay, and she had been brought out to it by a cutter. The other passengers on board looked interesting, and Brenda knew that some of her time she would spend deciding what they did and where they were going.

They were off at last. They taxied out over the water. She felt the lift of the clipper and they were in the air, the green water of the bay sparkling under the red of the rising sun.

What a difference in this trip and the one with Alan aboard the ocean liner! Even as she left far behind her the country where he was working, her thoughts kept going back to him.

She tried to think of Cary only in one way; and that was as her employer. She smiled a little as she thought of the difference in this and the first time she had gone to work for Cary Winship. Then she had been frightened and worried that her work might not please him and her salary was badly needed. Now her very assurance that her work did please him gave her courage to use her initiative. And as for the money—the check Senora Cruze gave her was three times a year's salary;

She Arrives in New York

They stopped at Natal for passengers. Then the rest of the trip was uneventful, with the exception of changing planes at Miami. Brenda had never been in Miami until this stop-over, and it only made her restless to go on. The plane she boarded here was a sleeper.

She tried to get some rest, because she wanted to go right to the office as soon as she could freshen up at the hotel; but more than once she awakened, trying to think where she was. Remembering, she would look out of the window, but they were flying at a high altitude, and she could see but little.

When she took the taxi into the city she gave the address of a hotel close to the building where the Winship Co. offices were.

It was a cold day, and Brenda had remembered that she would need her furs. She dismissed the taxi. It was later than she thought, but she would take an hour to rest and get ready to go to the office.

When Brenda was ready to go to the office she saw that it was only 9 o'clock. By this time, of course, Cary would already be at work. Her hands were icy. How could she feel toward Cary now?

The boy in the elevator remembered her. Suddenly Brenda felt as if she had never been away, it was so exactly like old times. She went in at the main entrance to the offices. Mary gave a little cry and ran to her.

"Brenda! For heaven's sake, when——"

"Sh! I just came back to help out a little. I'm not back for good. I can stay just a few weeks! Is Mr. Winship in?"

Mary said, "I'll ring and tell him that a client is here. He won't be able to believe his eyes!"

Brenda nodded. She was beautiful, Mary thought. More beautiful than ever.

She Sees Cary

When she opened Cary's private office door he was bent over his work, absorbed in it. He laid down his pencil and turned rather impatiently, she thought.

"Brenda!" His eyes devoured her. Brenda's coming must mean that she loved him yet.

He crossed the room in great strides. He took her hands. He wanted to kiss her lips. But he must wait.

"I'm so surprised. How did you ever happen to come?"

She laughed shakily. "Didn't you say you needed me to help you out of your usual muddle of taking on too much work?"

"Need you! Brenda, you can't imagine. But Alan——" He touched her hands. He needed her love!

"Alan is in Brazil, so far in the interior that we have no communication whatsoever. I will go back a week before his return. But oh, Cary, if you needed me, it seemed so silly for me to sit alone in Rio with folded hands——" Of course they weren't exactly folded, she told herself.

"Sit down. How did you come . ."

There was so much to say and so little time. Brenda wanted to ask about Lynne. But she could not. Cary looked so much older and so thin that she knew that matters had not changed there.

Presently she was in her office as of old. It was now, verily, as if she'd never been gone. Cary brought out an assignment and she began working on it immediately.

He took her out to lunch and they sat over their coffee long afterward, he asking questions and she answering them. She told him of her trip to Mese Vorhae with Alan, and something of the last few weeks of her life at Rio.

"I should like to see that portrait of the senora. I can well imagine that it is excellently done."

"I had a splendid subject."

"You are so good to come back, Brenda. I should never see my way out this time by the deadline, if you hadn't.

"There's just one string attached. It's your promise to not undertake so much again."

"I promise," he said solemnly.

"I've heard that before. Oh, so many times!" She laughed up at him.

Cary laughed, too. He realized that today was the first time he had laughed for many long weeks. And that if he were to check up exactly it would be about the week that Brenda left.

"You're looking so splendid, Brenda. Your tan is most becoming. I had thought your white skin a perfect foil for that black hair, but now, I'm not so sure."

"It's slowly disappearing, however. I believe that unless I coax it to stay, it will be gone in another month."

The afternoon sped by. Cary dropped her at her hotel. He was still staying at his club. Brenda asked Mary if Lynne had left for Reno, as she had planned. But Mary had answered that Lynne was still at the house out on Long Island. Hearing her answer, Brenda's heart beat rapidly. Perhaps Lynne would not go to Reno after all.

After she had gone up to her room, Brenda realized that her head was aching violently. That was unusual, but she decided that it was because of the strenuous trip and the day's work. But in the morning she felt even worse, so ill she could not get out of bed.

Lonely for Alan

She called Mary, and told her that she would not be in the office before afternoon.

Lying in bed, Brenda had time to think about her return. Suddenly she sat upright. She had no thought of it before—but yesterday when she had seen Cary, she had felt just as of old. Not as right before her marriage, but farther back than that, when they were just good friends and business associates.

She was amazed that it was true. A great wave of happiness washed over her, flooding her with gratefulness that she could see Cary and not feel any pain.

How the miracle had happened, she could not guess. For she had told herself that she would never feel any differently toward Cary. But now she did feel differently. She did not need his love! She felt no burning desire. It was inexplicably strange.

Toward noon she rose and started to get ready to go to the office. She had not unpacked everything yet. Her trunk had not arrived, but her luggage that she brought on the plane was open on the rack before her. She had taken out her dresses the night before, but now her personal belongings must be placed in the drawers and desk.

She set her cosmetic kit out on the dressing table and placed the bottles in proper array on a glass shelf in the little dressing room.

Alan's Letters Again

Presently she picked up the packet of Alan's letters. Her hands touched them gently. She slid them out of the protecting band and sank down on the bed to read them.

They were beginning to show wear. The corners had curled slightly, and she knew most of them by heart. As she read, her lips curled upward. Expressions here and there were so much like Alan! As if he were saying them, not writing them.

As she finished reading the last she was back with Alan on the trail. She could see his blue eyes and his angular jaw, the brown of his arms, the long, lean length of him astride the gray burro. She remembered their night at Mese Vorhae. They had been completely happy there with each other.

A feeling of loneliness struck her. He was so far away the distance seemed impenetrable. "Alan, Alan Tremaine, I miss you terribly," she said softly. "I want you, Alan, for I love you."

She stared at the letters in her hand. She loved Alan! Loved him and wanted to feel his arms about her once more, his lips upon hers, and hear his whispered words. Alan! To have to go thousands of miles away from you to learn that I love you! Tears were streaming down her white cheeks. If only she could return and go to him at once. If only she could be in the little bare hotel room at Mese Vorhae once more with him!

Brenda's Secret

That was impossible. Ruefully she realized that she had felt relief from the inconveniences of the trip to Mese Vorhae, when she returned to Rio de Janeiro. Now, to think back over the days she had spent with Alan was pure agony. To have had all of that happiness within her reach, and to not have recognized it! She felt his hard arms pressing her closer to him in the whiteness of the moonlight. "Alan!" she whispered.

Presently she knew she must go to the office if she were to accomplish any work that day. She dressed and took a cab.

Before she reached the office building, though, she gave the driver a different address. She felt a sudden instinctive knowledge.

In a little while she was ushered into the office of the doctor that she had heard Cary mention as their family physician.

Even before he began to ask her questions, she knew.

Her heart had leaped wildly at the first thought of it, after she had got in the cab. Brenda told herself fiercely, "I'm glad. But I'm more glad that I discovered my real love for Alan before I knew this."

She could not go on to the office after that. As she went back to the hotel, she thought, "Alan will be happy, too, that there is to be a child. I will write him as soon as I get back to my room. If only he could get the letter tomorrow! Alan, wherever you are, know that I love you, and keep on loving me," her heart said over and over.

She called Mary and told her that she wasn't coming after all, but would be on time in the morning. Mary was solicitous and wanted to do something for her.

Brenda's voice had a new note in it, and Mary wondered about it long after she replaced the receiver. Cary inquired about Brenda and said that he was afraid yesterday that she should have rested at least a day before starting to work. He sent flowers to her hotel.

It had been a long time since he had sent flowers to any one. Lynne would love roses, he knew, so he chose roses for Brenda.

Cary felt that he must keep himself well in hand. It would be so easy to take Brenda's love. There had been a strange happiness in her eyes. Was it because she was back with him?

In the days that followed soon after her discovery that she was to have a child, Brenda was the happiest that she could ever remember being.

Mary remarked about the change in her at the office, where Brenda's work was gaining rapid progress. Cary saw the new light in her eyes and he, too, felt the change.

Working with Cary day after day when it was required left Brenda knowing that their original association was reestablished. No longer did she feel nervous and under a strain when she was near him. All of that was over.

Only once had Cary approached the subject of Lynne's divorce. He spoke briefly about it, saying that Lynne had decided to leave for Reno the next month. In the meantime, she had the children with her. He had visited them once when she was gone.

Brenda grieved over it. She knew that Cary loved his children and wanted their companionship. She could recall dozens of times when they had watched the antics of an animated mechanical toy roll across the office floor—something he had purchased for Dulcie or Cary, jr., during his lunch hour downtown.

Even she, herself had gone out with all of them one holiday season to give the children a chance to talk with Santa Claus. Knowing all of this and realizing how much it was hurting Cary to have to give up his home, Brenda felt a great sympathy for him.

But no longer did she feel a need for him.

The hours passed quickly for Brenda at the office, but when she was back in her hotel room she felt lonely for Alan. During her second month in the city, she made some purchases, going into the infants' department and lingering over the baby things.

After that it was hard for her to keep away from there, although she knew that she already had far more than she would actually need.

A Leap Year Message for Men

Women Executives Take Over Every Key Position at The Hecht Co. on Leap Year Day

MILDRED LONG EHLIS

Today, Thursday, will be celebrated as Leap Year Day at The Hecht Co. Women executives of this store welcome this once-in-four-years-event as an opportunity to show their ability in various retail positions throughout the store. Key operations throughout the establishment have been taken over by women . . . and according to Mrs. Mildred Long Ehlis, who assumes the position of General Manager for Leap Year Day, the women are going to make it pretty tough for the men whose jobs they have taken over. The new bosses even went through the men's departments to give Washington men, as well as the wives who shop for them, the type of bargains they're always looking for. The values listed in the advertisement at the right are just a sample of what they've arranged in all the other departments of the store. They're typical of the grand values that the women executives of The Hecht Co. are offering for women, children and the home. Seven full floors are crammed full of Leap Year Day specials . . . with the Bargain Basement and Men's Annex participating in an event that the calendar brings but once in four years. Mrs. Ehlis advises all thrifty shoppers to be sure and attend.

Today Is Leap Year Day At The Hecht Co... Bargains For Men, Women & Children

VIOLETTA B. SUTTON

Miss Sutton assumes a particularly difficult role for Leap Year Day. Seldom does the responsibility for an event of this magnitude rest completely upon a woman. And because Miss Sutton has had considerable experience in advertising the position of Publicity Director was given to her. The largest use of advertising space in months by The Hecht Co. was required to tell Washington men and women of the bargains that women executives of the store have planned. And every single item was selected, and priced by women of The Hecht Co.

Preparing the advertising was, in itself, a tremendous job, says Miss Sutton . . . but the advertisements can give you only a fraction of an idea as to the real work that women are doing for Leap Year Day. Markets were scoured. Thousands of dollars worth of new merchandise purchased. Stocks were fine combed. Prices slashed . . . and the results are certain to make department store history!

'Several of us went to the men's departments and searched through the entire stocks," said Miss Sutton. "We found small lots here, broken size ranges there, odds and ends in another section and even large groups, too! Then saw the original prices and that's when we 'went to town.' We marked the men's clothing and furnishings at prices that we felt sure would sell them in one day. Many items are at half price.

An inkling as to how well the women have done their work is reflected in the Leap Year Dollar Day Sales for Men. They literally "jumped the gun" and are having the first dollar day sale in years in the men's furnishings department. (Editor's Note: Glance at The Hecht Co. advertisement on the right and see the havoc that the women did to the regular prices of men's wear.)

You men who shop by yourselves are always welcome. But you men who shop with women are doubly welcome today . . . for it's Leap Year Women's Day at The Hecht Co.

Today Only! A One Day Storewide Sale Every Department Participates

Miss Maxine Morris Advises Women Executives On Selecting and Pricing of Merchandise for Tremendous One Day Storewide Event

MAXINE MORRIS

"Women employes of The Hecht Co. know that Leap Year Day won't come around for four more years . . . and don't think they aren't making the most of it," says Miss Morris.

Not only have the women taken over the reins of the men's groups, but they've delved into every department in the store. And in every department . . . from furniture on the seventh floor all the way down to the Basement you'll find values beyond comparison. Values that you'll remember for many a day . . . because they've been selected by women.

Women in retailing is not a new story. Women in complete charge of a nationally known store IS a story. The liberal-minded, progressive men executives of The Hecht Co. yield gracefully to the age-old Leap-Year Prerogative of their women executives tomorrow. The result . . . a one-day store-wide sale planned from start to finish by women . . . with bargains for men, women, children and the home! Innate bargain-lovers bought the merchandise. These same connoisseurs of value priced it. Lovers of beautiful things displayed it. Do women stick together? You women of Washington . . . you buyers of your families' needs . . . come see for yourself tomorrow. No one has been forgotten. Brand-new merchandise . . . for you . . . for your children . . . yes, and for your husband, too.

200 Salespeople Added For This One Day Storewide Event

MARGARET SCHUTZ

Shoppers demand service . . . on every day of the year as well as Leap Year Day. To insure ample salespeople, wrappers, fitters, etc., is Mrs. Schutz's responsibility. And take the word of the women executives of Leap Year Day, it's a man-size job that Mrs. Schutz fills . . . Not only on Leap Year but on all the other three hundred and sixty five days of the year. Mrs. Schutz is Personnel Director of The Hecht Co.

To insure prompt, efficient service for Leap Year Day, Mrs. Schutz has augmented her regular staff with 200 additional employees . . . distributed through every department of the store. She also makes a well founded recommendation for Leap Year Day shoppers. "Be sure to bring your Hecht Co. Charga-Plate with you. I don't know of any single item that can assure you quicker service and prompt delivery." It doesn't take up any room in your purse either." If you don't have an account stop in at our credit office and open one."
